POETRY

THE HAUNTED WELL

Here where the well lies hidden
Beneath the grass and weeds,
Still stand as there were ladders,
With crooked arms and heads.

In tale of moonlit glory
Coarse grasses lift their blooms,
And daylight tells a story
That's grayer than glooms.

They say—so runs the fable—
Her love was unfulfilled;
She mourned one of her gable
And saw the moonlight spilled!

She stole down from her attic
Too sorrowful for rest—
A gentle-eyed fanatic,
With torment in her breast.

Crept through the night-drenched thicket
Of brambles to the well
Heard nothing save a cricket,
A lost cow's cruising bell.

But in the hole's deep lining
Did she divine a shape—
Some opalescent shining
Or vista of escape.

Out of the war of things that were?—
A victory profound?
The moony waters pitied her

—Amanda Hall, in Poetry.

THE WHITENESS OF JUNE.

There was a little girl,
And she had bobbed hair;
She'd been making mud pies,
And her feet were bare.
She lay in the grass
And hummed a little tune
About white clouds, white daisies,
And June.

Some ten years late
This same little girl
Was busy at school
With the final whirl
Of graduation
Which came so soon
With white frocks, sheepskins, slippers,
And June.

Another ten years,
And the girl grown up
Felt that she drank
From happiness' cup;
For she rode in joy
To be married high noon
In white, with a veil, white roses
And June.

And when she grew old
And her eyes grew dim,
White honeysuckles 'round her
On the porch with him,
Her memory treasures gleaned
With the moon,
All white with the delicate whiteness
Of June.

NEW LONDON CITY EMPLOYE IN HOSPITEL AS RESULT OF AUTO SMASH

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, June 26—Austin J. Ruddy, of No. 17 Stewart street and employed as foreman by the city's water and sewer department, was painfully injured this afternoon when he was struck by an automobile on Bank street, owned and operated by Capt. Fred Grimpe of No. 537 Bank street. Ruddy sustained lacerations and contusions of the face and body and possible internal injuries and is now a patient at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital. Whether Ruddy has sustained internal injuries will not be determined until tomorrow when an X-ray picture will be taken.

The accident occurred near the corner of Howard street. Ruddy was operating a motor truck and as the machine neared the intersection of the streets a piece of iron fell to the pavements. Ruddy stopped the machine and as he stepped from the running board to recover the iron, the automobile operated by Grimpe was about to pass. Before Grimpe could materially reduce the speed of his machine, Ruddy was struck and felled, the man landing with considerable force upon the pavement. Traffic Officer John Clifford hastened to Ruddy's assistance and observing that the man was seriously injured, he caused him to be conveyed to the hospital. Tonight at the hospital it was stated that Ruddy's condition was as comfortable as could be expected.

An automobile, owned by Lawrence De Douglass of No. 10 Amity street, was extensively damaged this evening on State street, while parked alongside the curb, near the corner of Main street by being run into by a commercial car of the New Haven Dairy and operated by Thomas Rivetta. While Douglass machine was parked Rivetta cranked the truck and while the car was set at reverse. With the starting of the engine the truck leaped back and against Douglass' car, forcing the latter maching along the street a distance of about 150 feet. The impact caused the engine to be forced out of alignment, smashed the radiator, headlights and fender.

A limb of a tree in front of the premises at No. 421 Williams streets was broken off during the blow just prior to the electrical storm this evening, the limb hanging by branches and causing an element of danger to pedestrians. The police were notified of the danger and in turn informed the highway department.

Another live wire, the property of the Connecticut Power Company fell to the ground this evening at the corner of Jefferson and Lincoln avenues. The wire, which was charged with 2,300 volts, caused serious danger until the police were notified. No time was lost in informing the power company, who caused a repair gang to put the wire back in position on the pole.

The home of Michael Glynn at No. 132 Willetts avenue was slightly damaged yesterday afternoon when sparks from the chimney fell to the roof and ignited the shingles. The fire was observed before it had gained much headway and a still alarm to fire headquarters, caused the Niagara Engine Company and Ockford Hose Company to be sent to the burning building. The flames were extinguished quickly and without damage of consequence.

The funeral of Mrs. Mathilde D. Edgcomb wife of Howard A. Edgcomb of Latham street, Groton, was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Groton Heights Baptist church and was attended by a large number of relatives and friends, their presence testifying to the high esteem Mrs. Edgcomb was held in by her vast acquaintanceship. The services were conducted by Rev. George R. Atha, pastor of the church. The bearers were Charles Gray, Oliver D. L. Burrows, William O. Perkins, Herbert P. White and Robert H. Byles of Groton and Wallace R. Johnson of New London, all past masters of Union lodge of Masons, of which Mr. Edgcomb is a member and also a past master. Interment was in Starr cemetery, Groton.

An automobile, owned and operated by Joseph R. Reinhart of Fitchville and a machine owned by Robert Champion of No. 9 Thames street and operated by Mrs. Champion, were in collision this evening on Howard street. The former car sustained considerable damage, including a sprung axle, damaged fender and mudguard. Mrs. Champion placed the blame for the accident upon Reinhart.

Frank Sherman and Joseph McCarry, two New London young men, were among the members of the graduating class at Georgetown university, Washington, last week. Both Messrs. Sherman and McCarry will take up the practice of law.

Michael W. Bell of Rochester, N. H., and Miss May T. Hackett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hackett of No. 48 Montauk avenue, were married this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, the nuptial mass being celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons, pastor of the church in the presence of a large throng of relatives and friends of the couple from Norwich, New York, Providence, Boston, Newport, R. I., Rochester N. H. New Orleans, La., Newport, N. H., being among the witnesses of the happy event. John T. Hackett, Jr., brother of the bride, was best man and Miss Florence T. Lake of Newport, R. I., was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Ethel and Helen Buckley of New London and Miss Myra Driscoll of Norwich. Little Dorothy Thomas was flower girl. The ushers were Harry Holleway of Groton, George Thabidau of Newport, N. H., and Stephen Huval of New Orleans. Following the nuptial ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Bell received the hearty congratulations of their relatives and friends at a bounteous wedding repast served in the ball room of the Hotel Mohican. Mr. and Mrs. Bell departed at noon on their wedding tour and will take up their future abode in Rochester where Mr. Bell is employed as an electrician.

The lightning this evening at 6.45 caused a fire on Morgan street where the house occupied by H. W. Lasserty, at No. 60 was struck during the storm. The fire was in the roof. Several companies of the department responded to the alarm—691—and a big tank of chemical was used to subdue the flames, but that did it successfully. The firemen were at the scene about 45 minutes. No one in the house was injured.

A strike of freight handlers at the Central Vermont railroad and steamboat dock has weakened somewhat since it was inaugurated. Boys from the schools, who are now on vacation, are filling in some of the places and there were eight more truckers at work today than were hauling the trucks Monday. The management pretend that they will have all the help they need in a few days and say that they are paying as high wages as are paid anywhere for the same work, which is 51 cents an hour.

Henry Starr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vine Starr, of Waterford and Miss Ruth M. Dixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Dixon of Jordan Village, Waterford, were joined in marriage this morning at 10 o'clock at the First Baptist church of Waterford. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George H. Strouse, pastor of the church in the presence of a number of relatives and friends of the contracting couple. Theodore Dixon, brother of the bride, was best man and Miss Grace Carlson attended the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Starr departed for Clinton, Mass., on their wedding tour this afternoon and upon their return they will take up their residence in Waterford.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy A. Nash have returned to their home on Riverview avenue after having attended the wedding at Cos Cob Saturday of Mrs. Nash's sister, Miss Nettie Banks, to Carl Allson, both of Cos Cob.

Automobilists provided the business for the police court today. They were charged with infraction of laws and ordinances, but the violations were not of serious consequences. Elmer Hewitt, a Waterford boy of 17 years, was charged with operating a car without having registration so to do. He admitted his guilt and promised not to offend again. Elmer bought his brother's car, paying something down on the purchase price. The registration of the car did not transfer with the sale because the car was not paid for. But Elmer operated the car just as though he was the owner of it and as though the registration was in him as the owner. That was all right till William R. Bigelow, a state policeman, observed that the car was not operated by an experienced driver, asked to see Elmer's registration and operating license, but he asked in vain. Elmer did not have the papers. He was arraigned in the court today and there told his story. He was fined $10.

Isadore Dimon and Everett C. Daniels were operating cars in opposite directions on Jefferson avenue yesterday. At West Colt street the vehicles came together, but fortunately they were not much damaged. Dimon declared that Daniels was on the wrong side of the road with his car and Daniels said Dimon did not sound his horn on approaching the intersecting street. Then there was a dispute also as to the damage, but each finally admitted that the expense on the cars would not exceed $5. It was this latter phase of the controversy that seemed to interest the police more than the violations of the law. The court declined to be a collector for the attorneys in the case and left it to go further with the matter.

Max Arthur was fined $5 for parking his car on Bank street. Judge Ins not owned a car long and he found that there was an ordinance as to how long he should park his machine.

Mrs. Jane E. Beckwith, widow of Henry C. Beckwith and formerly residing at No. 287 Huntington street, died this morning at the State Hospital for the Insane at Fort Point. Mrs. Beckwith had been under treatment at the institution some time.

The body of Stephen H. Gage, whose death occurred at his home in Manasquan, N. J., Sunday, was brought to New London at 1:01 o'clock this afternoon and interred in the family plot in Cedar Grove cemetery. The committal service was conducted by Rev. Myron E. Genter, pastor of the Methodist church.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cruise, janitress at the municipal building, is confined to her home on Connecticut avenue by illness.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY.

New York, June 26.—Fresh buying power was again lacking in today's stock market and professional speculators for the decline had little difficulty in forcing recessions all over the list. Fifty stocks established new low records for the year including such leaders as United States and Gulf States Steels, Baldwin, Studebaker, American Woolen and California Petroleum. The industrial average also touched a new 1923 low.

The campaign of bear traders undoubtedly has been influenced by the steady decline in commodity prices and the marked curtailment of forward buying in several industries which is regarded in some quarters as forecasting a slackening in business this fall. Today's selling was aided by the belated liquidation of stocks pledged as collateral for loans to firms which recently went bankrupt. The bearish forecast on conditions published today by a large statistical agency and the decision of pipe line companies to pro-rate their oil runs also had a pessimistic effect on sentiment.

Most of the steady industrials failed to show any effective buying support until their previous low levels were reached. U. S. Steel touched 90 3-8 and then rallied nearly a point, showing a slight fractional loss on the day. Baldwin touched 118 3-8 and then rallied to 119, off 3 7-8. Losses of 1 to 2 points also were registered by American Can, American Smelting, American Sugar, Bethlehem Steel, Central Leather, Chandler, Consolidated Gas, Industrial Harvester, Kennecott Copper, Phillips Petroleum, Producers and Refiners, Sinclair, Utah Copper and many others.

Railroad shares were heavily sold on reports that two of the big brotherhoods were to meet soon to consider the question of wage increases. Several carriers, notably Pennsylvania, Reading and Northern Pacific, touched new lows and the losses in some others ran as high as two or three points. This selling was made in the face of more favorable earnings reports, the Union Pacific system showing net of $2,417,598 compared with $2,868,000 in April and $1,574,732 in May, 1922.

Further withdrawals by interior banks resulted in an opening rate of 5 1-2 per cent. for call money which was advanced to six before the close. Time money was somewhat firmer, 60 day loan being quoted at 5 per cent. The commercial paper rate was unchanged.

Foreign exchange business was quiet with recessions in all principal rates in sympathy with the heaviness in London. Demand sterling dropped nearly half a cent to $4.61 1-8 and French francs dropped 5 points to 5.13 cents. German marks were quoted around .0007 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 26.—Speculative railroad and industrial mortgages sagged in today's bond trading in sympathy with recessions in stock prices. Losses among the higher grade bonds were small.

Active United States government bonds yielded slightly, losses ranging from 1-32 to 7-32 of a point. Foreign bonds also were in supply, Lyons 6s dropping 1 1-8 and Mexican 4s, 1 1-2. Serbian 8s moved up one point.

A drop of five points by Virginia Carolina Chemical 7 1-2s, with warrants, was the outstanding change among industrial liens. Fisk Rubber 8s receded 1 1-2. Cuba Cane Sugar 8s, 1 3-8 and Cuba American Sugar 8s, 1.

Losses of a point or more were registered by Prisco adjustment 6s, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico income 5s, "Katty" new 5s, Great Northern adjustment 6s, certificates, Hudson and Manhattan income 5s, and St. Paul convertible 4 1-2s, and the refunding 4 1-2s. Declines in the rails was attributed largely to the drive against four stocks during the day.

Total sales (par value)) were $9,545,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 26.—Increased hedging sales led to a decided fall today in the value of wheat, and carried the September delivery and December both down to a new low price record for the season. Closing quotations were unsettled at 1 3-4 to 2 3-8 cents net decline, with September 102 1-2 to 102 5-8. Corn finished 1-2 to 3-8@1-2 cent down. In provisions the outcome ranged from seven cents decline to ag ain of 2 1-2 cents.

With weather favorable for the harvesting of winter wheat and cutting reports have extended into Nebraska. The wheat market in larger volume was beginning to move from the hands of growers Overnight sales of 500,000 bushels to arrive in the southwest received special notice and acted as an important influence on the bear side Rains and lower temperature in the northwest, just what appeared to be needed for the spring crop, tended further to weaken prices here, as did New York stock market depression as well as a decline in wheat in Liverpool.

About the only support the market found came from previous sellers who were in a position to collect profits. European demand appeared to be confined largely to Canadian wheat, except wheat available for shipment this week. On the northwestern connections were credited with being free sellers of September wheat here. This selling was supposedly due to excellence of crop prospects for spring wheat.

Corn and oats, although easing down a little with wheat, held relatively firm. Receipts both of corn and oats here were scanty.

In the provision market, the effect of firmness of hog values was fairly offset by packers' selling.

MANSFIELD CENTRE

At the First Congregational and First Baptist churches Sunday, the morning sermons were delivered by Prof. H. Seckerson. The topic for the Christian Endeavor service was, How Can We Win Friends and Keep Them? At the Center the leader was Miss Amy Hawkins at Spring Hill.

Following the close of the service Sunday evening, a meeting was called to discuss plans for a Fourth of July celebration.

The second lesson in home nursing will be given ta the library Thursday afternoon at 2 P. M., by Miss Mc Donald, a graduate of Hartford Hospital.

Nearly forty children participated in the Children's Day concert given at the Center church Sunday morning, June 17th. An excellent program of songs, recitations and exercises was given, especially pleasing being the recitations by very small children and the songs by a double quartet of boys and a group of girls. The superintendant of the Cradle Roll, Mrs. R. B Stearns, presented diplomas to six little graduates of that department, and to the younger children gave cards, many of the little people going to the platform to receive them. A short address was given by Prof. Seckarson. The decorations were of laurel, daisies and clover. Much credit for the success of the affair is due Mrs. M. E. Walker, the director and her assistants, also the superintendent, Stedman Sterrs.

A well attended lecture was given at the library on Monday afternoon by Miss Margaret Stack, R. N., director of the bureau of public health nursing, and Dr. Elisabeth Ingram of the State Department of Health. The subject was Preparedness.

There was an excellent attendance at the open meeting of the Men's club held at the church here Tuesday evening. K. Appasamy of India, who spoke at a meeting of the Endeavor Society a few weeks ago, gave a very interesting illustrated lecture on India. After the lecture there was a sale of ice cream and cake.

There was a very pleasant birthday surprise party at the home of Mrs. M. E. Walker Monday evening when about thirty neighbors called to offer congratulations. The guests brought ice cream and cake which was served during the evening.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its summer picnic at the home of the president, Mrs. G. C. Jennerson Wednesday afternoon. There was an attendance of more than twenty, and a delightful afternoon was spent. A lunch of sandwiches, cake, lemonade and ice cream was served in the grove at the rear of the house, the beautiful hillside affording some relief from the heat of the day.

C. E. Franklin returned last week after a three months' business trip which included Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, and other states. Mr. Franklin left again this week for a shorter trip in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

The names of 20 pupils of the Mansfield Center school appear on the school honor roll for excellent scholarship. On the honor roll with an average standing of 90 per cent. or more, are: Alice Jenner, Ruth Oden, Howard Eaton, Fred Prater, Stanley Storrs, Paul Jansen, Richard Koepke, Harold Hawkins, Donald Hawkins, Arthur Koepke, Carl Prater, Dorothy Hawkins, Gustave Jansen Doris Gardner. On the B roll with a standing of 80 per cent. or above are: Howard Kelley, Burton Topliff, Dorothy Aitken, Hazel Gillette, Lois Gillette, John Begg.

Mr. Lee, who has traveled extensively, is now planning for a trip around the world, starting early next winter.

Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Williams, who have been visiting relatives in Cambridge and Newton Highlands, Mass., have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Beckwith and daughters, Ruth and Helen, of East Hampton, were recent guests of his sister, Mrs. Allen Willey.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bailey, attended the wedding of his niece, Miss Burdelle Bailey and William L. Faringer, at the Baptist church in Chester, Saturday afternoon.

C. M. Ingersoll and family have gone to Maine, where they will spend the summer. Walter Drown of Meriden, was at his home here over Saturday and Sunday.

CLASS IN SWIMMING AND LIFE SAVING

COUNTY Y. M. C. A. PREPARING SEASON FOR BOYS AT CAMP TERREHEGAN

For the past four years the New London County Y. M. C. A. committee and the New London City Association have combined in conducting a boys' camp for the boys of New London county. More than 500 New London county boys have enjoyed a time at Camp Terrehegan. This year the camp is to be conducted from June 28th to July 26th at Long Pond in Ledyard.

The camp equipment which is provided is wall tents with wood floors, a large dining tent, boats and canoes, swimming dock and swimming float. This year the camp expects to have a tennis court for the use of campers beside the regular athletic activities. Special instruction is given in nature study, woodcraft, lifesaving, etc. Hiking is made a special feature at Camp Terrehegan. Every week the camp is divided into two or three groups and a day or two is spent on the road.

The leadership will be maintained this year with the same high standard for which Camp Terrehegan is noted. An adult leader for every seven boys in a tent is the plan always carried out. This year there will be a group of assistant leaders who are campers and have won emblems for three years. Each of the assistant leaders will have some specific responsibility. The leadership of the camp is picked from the business and professional men of the county. The camp committee has been very exceedingly fortunate in having the same cook for four years. Mrs. Wilhemina Strauss of Wesleyan university will be in charge of the kitchen management for the fourth year. Mrs. Strauss is a most capable cook and under her management plenty of good wholesome food will be provided with the appetites of growing boys kept constantly in mind.

Camp Terrehegan is primarily for the boys of New London county, however, boys from other sections are welcome and every year the campers include boys from other sections of the state as well as from other states.

The honor system whereby a boy will receive recognition for improvement among many lines will be enforced. It is the adaptation of the Christian Citizenship Training programme and provides for graded series of educational, physical, devotional and service activities.

Camp Terrehegan fosters a religious camp spirit. A new appreciation of the reality of religious life is brought to the boys. Daily chapel, evening tent devotions, campfire talks, Sunday services and real life, sharing with Christian men gives to many boys a vision of his own possibilities.

The Y. M. C. A. camp committee in charge of Camp Terrehegan are: George H. Bathgate, of East Lyme, chairman, A. C. Woodruff of New London, secretary and treasurer, E. T. Bunyan of Colchester, Hon. W. G. Park of Hanover, and Hon. E. E. Rogers of New London.

The camp directors are C. S. Bailey, boys' secretary of the New London Y. M. C. A., and Stewart Brown, a student at Stevens institute.

WAR ON GYPSY MOTH IN NEW LONDON COUNTY

Connecticut's warfare against the gypsy moth is being vigorously prosecuted at this time. For several weeks past the attack on moth infected territory in New London county has been actively carried on. Two mobile power sparying outfits are employed in the work under the direction of John T. Ashworth of Danielson, working under the direction of Dr. W. E. Britten state entomologist of the Agricultural Experiment Station at New Haven. Two other mobile units owned by the federal government are also at work.

During the past summer Connecticut carried on an investigation campaign, and carefully traced out the area where the gypsy moth was then present. When the moth was found quarantines were established, prohibiting the transportation of wood from that particular locality.

In fighting the moth with the power sprayers a liquid preparation of arsenate of lead is used. The powerful motor equipment is sent through woodland and fields, spraying the trees in the hope of killing off the pest. It is possible that the surface warfare may be followed up later by an attack from the air. The federal government is now planning for the use of a blimp to scatter poison powder over the forests and trees where trees are now providing a breeding place for the moth. The use of the dirigible in preference to the airplane is because of the possibility of operating lower in the air and more effectively since the blimp can throttle down slower than an airplane. Last fall airplanes were used in the fight waged in New Hampshire. When fighting the moth from the air, arsenate of lead in the powdered form is used. This settles down on the trees and it is believed that it does just as effective destruction. The fight against the moth from the air is the most economical way, being done so much quicker, especially in mountainous country.

CLOSING MEETING FOR SEASON AT RICHMOND SHOP

A good audience attended the Y. M. C. A. meeting at Richmond Radiator plant Tuesday noon, this being the last meeting until the fall. Rev. C. H. Ricketts deeply impressed his audience. His topic was "An Example of Service." Among other things the speaker said:

"Our Lord had sought, what he had so richly earned, an outing at the seaside of Tyre and Sidon. His contact with humanity in the shadowing humanity in sin, sorrow and suffering was so intimate and intensive that he longed for a little respite, even though it was brief. Jesus seems all the nearer to us because he was human; he knew what it was to be tired and hungry; he knew what it was to be heart sick when he saw people living bad lives, knowing that they would have to reap what they were sowing. As he rarely saw humanity at its best, but usually at its worst, is it at all strange that he wanted to turn his back, now and then, no Jerusalem and Capernaum with their physical and moral tragedies and breathe in God's bracing air on the coast of Tyre and Sidon?

But he found tragedy even there. The Son of God couldn't get away from it, wherever he went, but after he had cast out a devil from the Grecian girl, he went back to his old haunts to find more devils, in one form or another to be dealt with. Upon one of his cures the subject today is based. They bring to the Master a deaf mute or a deaf man with a serious impediment of speech, and, with that infinite ease that characterized all his cures, he touched his ears and tongue, and he was cured. The words of the text are very significant: "He touched his tongue, and looking up to heaven. He signed, and said, Ephphatha, that is, be opened."

Four important ideas are suggested by these words:

1. The foundation and condition of all true work for God is found in the heavenward look. If we are to help others we must first get the power ourselves. That means we must keep in touch with the sources of power. The human soul is not a storage battery tanking up power for future use; it is more like a reservoir which for real service must have a constant inflow to keep up the outflow. This heavenward look is a renewal of our vision of spiritual reality which we must get if we are to serve others.

2. The necessity of feeling and expressing pity. "He sighed". That means that his enthusiasm for service was based upon a rational sympathy. There is a difference between pity and sentimentality. The latter is a mushy feeling that all punishment, pain and discomfort are cruel and wicked. Real pity is sympathy that renders a reasonable service.

3. Inspiration and pity ought to be followed by strenuous action. Our Lord's heavenward look and pity resulted in touching the defective tongue. There is no sense in pitying the heathen without trying to lift them out of their heathenism. Merely to weep and wring our hands over somebody's errors never corrects an erroneous life. Real things are doing when pity takes the form of the helping hand.

4. Action involves the authoritative word. Jesus said to the silent tongue "be cured". When Peter helped the lame man to his feet he said, "in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." Real action is always simultaneous with a real command. Here we have a perfect example of service: Inspiration, a rational pity, strenuous endeavor, and authoritative command.

ALLEGES CONDITIONS ARE BAD AT WOMAN'S FARM

Astounding revelations of the grossest mismanagement at the Niantic State Farm for Women, involving both financial extravagance and the existence of flagrant immorality, were alleged in New Haven as a sequel to Friday's announcement that Miss Anna M. Petersen, the superintendent, and all but two of the directors had offered their resignations, says the New Haven Register. Its story continues:

"Miss Petersen resigned on April 18 but news of the fact leaked out today for the first time. Her withdrawal from the farm was immediately precipitated by the discovery of a girl who had contracted a loathsome disease while an inmate there and whose case she had apparently neglected entirely, even after she had been informed of it. Other factors had led up to her resignation, however, including the disclosure that the enormous budget Miss Petersen had submitted to the legislature, involving an expansion program of $323,700 for the biennial period, had been based upon exorbitant guesses of building costs.

"Some time ago, probably a year ago this spring, one of the girls contracted a loathsome disease from an employe who was putting in window screens. She reported the matter finally to the house mother, who in turn informed Miss Petersen. For reasons that it is impossible to understand, the superintendent took no action to punish the girl for her misconduct. It was the disclosure of this case at a board meeting last April that led directly to the resignation of Miss Petersen.

"The most rigid secrecy has been maintained by everyone concerned in the farm on the subject of its condition, and it is only today for the first time that the public has learned that the directors were not unanimously and enthusiastically behind the work of Superintendent Petersen. It is now revealed that Mrs. Rogers of Hamden, who is away from home for the summer at present, has led in a determined effort to have the farm thoroughly investigated and has not considered Miss Petersen in every way competent to run the institution.

"New Haven organizations of social workers, made up of college women and various women's clubs, have always been particularly interested in the State Farm, and it was learned today that the Civic Protective association has been especially active in protesting against the present management. Mrs. Arthur L. Corbin, the president, who is now in Maine, has urged a policy of secrecy, on the ground that publicity would injure the farm in the public's eyes. Mrs. Percy T. Walden, also active in the association, could not be reached today.

Thinks Truth Should be Told

"Another New Havener, however, who is one of the farm's stauncheat friends and who knows the condition there very well, consented to discuss the situation, in the belief that since news of Miss Petersen's resignation had come out it could only do the farm irreparable harm to conceal the situation any longer. The Register's informant related the recent developments at the farm in this wise: 'The budget that the farm submitted to the legislature has been one of the causes of the upset, and another has been the enormous body of rumors, some of them confirmed, that the moral conditions at the institution were far from what they ought to be.

"'A year ago this spring I and others were invited to visit the farm by Mrs. Helen W. Rogers, the director, and arrangements were made with Miss Petersen. We went there, and in the course of the inspection I met the physician, Dr. Minor the husband of one of the directors. Inasmuch as the statute establishing the institution provided for a female physician, he was soon replaced by Mrs. Ingraham, a woman of exemplary character and ability. However, she left a couple of months ago, saying that she could not continue in an institution where conditions were so bad. She said that she would be willing to talk, but only to the governor of the state if he asked her to do so.

"'Do not think that Miss Petersen was always lenient with her girls. Sometimes she is most severe, though I should hesitate to say that she is too much so. She has what she calls 'thinking chambers' unheated rooms in the basement. One prospective mother has charged that she lost her baby because she was shut up in one of them shortly prior to confinement.

"'Miss Petersen has many admirable qualification for her work, such for example as the perfect cleanliness of the buildings; but she lacks other essentials.

Had Elaborate Scheme

"'Take the matter of the budgets. She and John H. Goss of Waterford, one of the directors, drew up a building program which was to extend over a 10-year period and cost I don't know what enormous sum. The first installment submitted to the recent general assembly amounted to $323,700 and provided for six cottages for 12 girls each at $25,000 each and a bigger house for $50,000. Also, there was a barn extension to cost $25,000. It was learned that this budget had been drawn up without consultation of architects or builders who could make out specifications. They were guesses. The appropriations committee insisted upon another budget, revised downward.

"'Mrs. Rogers came into touch about this time with Mrs. Mary Morse, who had directed a similar institution in Minnesota and had made it virtually self-supporting. Mrs. Morse and she worked out a new budget, drawing up plans which cut the original one into about half, providing virtually the same accommodations. Each small cottage would have cost from $10,000 to $14,000. This was submitted to the committee at another hearing. But as you know, everything was rejected ultimately. As for the barn project, the farmer at the farm is reported to have said the proposed alterations could have been made for only half the sum that Miss Petersen asked the assembly to grant.

Directors Out of Touch

"'All the directors support Miss Petersen except Mrs. Rogers. But the report in this morning's papers that Mrs. Rogers has been carrying on independent investigations, making inquiries about Miss Petersen from her girls behind her back and enlisting outside support for her fight against the other directors, is wholly false. The fact is that several of the directors seldom attend meetings and know little about the institution. Mrs. Minor, for example, almost never attends.

"'I do not think that everything has been done to find a successor to Miss Petersen that should have been done. Her resignation takes effect on July 1. Friday's Hartford Courant says that the directors are unable to find a suitable woman. I don't think they have done everything possible. Mrs. Mary Morse might have been had if we had taken steps promptly enough.'"

The Register's informant wished to make it perfectly clear that those who favoring publicity for the farm's activities are not doing it out of opposition to the farm. They believe that the institution is doing needed, that it can perform an invaluable service, that the Civic Protective association in particular needs it to mold certain kinds of girls there and that it has had a most beneficial effect upon many girls.

But it appears now as though the wisest policy for the farm is to allow conditions to be known, so that the poison of continued rumors should not make it lose all standing with the public.

It has also been stressed that the girls at the farm do not do enough toward supporting themselves. In Mrs. Morse's institution they are almost self supporting, whereas at Niantic they seem to be idle a large part of the time.

Ran Over Bicycle.

A young man named George Johnson, who lives on Maple street reported to the police Tuesday afternoon that an automobile with New York registration numbers had struck and run over his bicycle while he was riding it near the Chelsea bank in Main street. The bicycle had one wheel smashed. The driver of the automobile stopped long enough to tell young Johnson it was not the fault of the operator of the machine and then drove away towards Taftville.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN

When Mr. Myers of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, stepped into the drug store and asked his druggist for the best medicine he had in his store for woman's ills, is it any wonder he was handed a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? Mrs. L. K. Myers in writing of it says: "I had been weak, run down, and had a pain in my left side for a long time, so I could not do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me in a short time so I was able to do all of my housework including washing and ironing, and now I feel fine all the time." As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound holds the record for benefiting 98 women out of every 100 women who take it, it will pay every suffering woman to try it.

TO SEIZE FOREIGN VESSELS BRINGING BEVERAGE LIQUOR

Government Authorities Are Prepared to Invoke the Extreme Penalties of the Volstead Act—Action Provoked by the Increasing Number of Foreign Vessels Entering New York With Beverage Liquors Under Seal—Reports Have Reached New York That British Liners Are Putting Out With Only One Way Supplies of Drink.

Washington, June 27.—The Government today prepared to take the extreme step, in enforcing the supreme court ban against liquor imports, of seizing ships which bring in intoxicating beverages whether in cargo or under foreign governments' customs seals.

Continued if not studied violation of the court's decision by an increasing number of foreign vessels entering New York with large quantities of beverage liquors under seal, it was said, apparently made necessary the drastic penalty of seizure, not only of the contraband beverages, but of the ships themselves. Officials declare privately that the present practice could not be tolerated much longer and steps to invoke the extreme penalties of the Volstead act were said to be imminent.

High government officials at a series of conferences today discussed the situation and the steps necessary to enforce observance of the nation's prohibition laws as applied to foreign vessels within American territorial waters. A new treasury regulation was reported to have been drafted, providing for additional directions to customs officers to seize all vessels found bringing in beverage liquors, even under foreign customs seals, after adequate notice to foreign governments of the new and more drastic policy. The instructions also would provide for the arrest of the captains of such ships.

No official announcement of the government's plans was made today, information of the consideration of the ship seizure policy developing from the official conferences. It was stated, however, that an official statement on the question might be expected in a "very few days."

Participating in the day's conferences were Secretary Hughes and other state department officials, Acting Secretary Gilbert and Assistant Secretary Moss, in charge of customs, of the treasury department. Commissioner Blair of the internal revenue bureau; Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and Assistant Commissioner Jones, Chief Counsel Britt of prohibition headquarters and others. A day full of conferences on the situation was concluded late today with one between Secretary Hughes and Mr. Gilbert, on which neither later would comment.

If the new treasury regulation should be promulgated it was stated that ample notice would be given foreign governments and foreign shipping lines.

The Volstead law's ship seizure provision, it was explained in official quarters, has not been invoked for instance to act in any way which might precipitate serious disputes with foreign governments.

The announced desire of foreign shipping lines to establish their right to bring in liquors under seal, it was said, also has delayed consideration o fthe seizure penalties. No test case has been brought, however, despite the almost daily docking of vessels carrying liquor in violation of the supreme court ruling.

One official said that the foreign shipowners in bringing in intoxicants under seal apparently desired to "test the nerve" rather than the law of the United States and had found neither impotent.

Only one protest from a foreign ship representative has been forwarded to Washington. The formal complaint by the master of the British liner Berengaria made to the port officers in New York was received today by Mr. Moss. After it had gone the rounds of offices at the treasury to whose attention such matters usually are brought, it was sent to the state department for the consideration of Secretary Hughes.

Warehousing of the ship liquor already seized in New York harbor under the existing treasury regulations is becoming a serious factor, it was declared, and this government does not propose to have the burden grow. The contraband liquor stored taken off foreign ships have become the subject of a friendly controversy between customs and prohibition officials. The latter, with limited appropriations, contend the stocks seized by customs authorities should be stored and guarded by customs officials, at the expense of the customs service, but so far they have being received and placed in storage by the prohibition forces.

In consideration at today's conference was the question of official responsibility for enforcing the maladministration of the Volstead act for seizure of vehicles, including vessels, foreign or domestic, found transporting beverage liquor in violation of the law. Virtually all of the participants in the conference were said to have agreed that the law was explicit as to seizures and left officials no option but that of vigorous enforcement.

FOREIGN LINERS ARRIVE WITH LIQUOR UNDER SEAL

New York, June 27.—Three more foreign liners the Chicago, of the French line, the Olympic of the White Star line, and the Cunarder Saxonia arrived in port here today with their return supplies of liquor under government seals. This brings the total of arrivals to test the recent treasury department ruling prohibiting the carrying of liquor into United States ports up to thirteen of these only four have had their seals broken so far. They are the Baltic the Berengaria, the Paris and the Cedric.

No seizures are emade today, and shipping officials predicted that if hasty action were not taken some of the liners would be kept in port, over their schedules.

The latest arrival the Saxonia, which came through Quarantine late today, carried under the British crown seal 69 1-3 gallons of wine, 110 1-2 gallons of spirits and 3501 bottles of ale and stout. This is the fourth vessel of the White Star line to test the ruling.

Representatives of liner here said today that the problem would be left for action to diplomatic agents in Washington. They refused to comment on reports from Washington that a regulation prohibiting the bringing of liquor into United States ports under penalty of seizure of the ship as a liquor carrier, and arrest of her captain, had been agreed upon.

The Finland, of the American line, arrived with nothing but her medicinal liquor supplies, having dumped her excess before crossing the three-mile limit. Just as the boons was heaved over the side a bolt of lightning struck one of the masts, and superstitious seamen considered this an omen of disapproval of such wilful waste.

The Paris sailed out with her broken seals still hanging to the wine door, and 12,000 pints of wine and spirits on board, allowed for medicinal purposes by Dr. E. K. Sprague, public health officer here.

Reports from London intimated that the failure of foreign vessels to get through the customs officials with return supplies had discouraged line officers, and that several liners were putting out with only one way supplies of drinks.

Federal officials here will put into effect tomorrow a new system of enforcing the dry ship ruling which it was expected, would reduce to a minimum friction between the government and foreign ship lines. All danger of causing delays in sailings will be eliminated, officials believed.

Under the new system an immediate check will be made by customs inspectors of liquor listed in the manifests of arriving ships. Representatives of the ship lines will be required to apply to the public health service for permits to carry medicinal liquor on the return voyages. The lists will be delivered to the surveyor of the port who will call upon prohibition enforcement agents to seize the surplus.

MRS. ANNA BUZZI GUILTY OF FIRST DEGREE MURDER

New York, June 27.—Mrs. Anna Buzzi was found guilty of the murder of Frederick Schneider, wealthy Bronx contractor, by a supreme court jury tonight.

She was found guilty of first degree murder. The jury had been out for more than ten hours, but late this afternoon had sent a request to Justice O'Malley for transcripts of the testimoney in trial.

Mrs. Buzzi turned white and sagged forward when the verdict was read but was caught by the attendants before she collapsed. She was revived a few minutes later and was led from the court room in a dazed condition.

Sentence will be pronounced on July 9, and as the verdict was first degree murder without recommendations, it was expected she would be sentenced to death. Justice O'Malley granted the request of defense attorneys to postpone until th edate of sentence any motions for a new trial or an appeal.

Schneider was found dead in his automobile with two bullets in the back of his head on a lonely road in the outskirts of the Bronx late in the afternoon of February 26. A farmer working in a nearby field was attracted by the sound of pistol shots as the car drew up to the curb. He saw a woman emerge from the machine and walk rapidly away.

Mrs. Buzzi, with whom Schneider had lived for several years, was arrested the following day as a material witness, and later was indicted and held on a charge of first degree murder. She declared Schneider had been to her apartment in the afternoon, and left in his automobile about 5 o'clock. She insisted she had not left hr apartment all that day and did not know of Schneider's death until informed by police.

Her indictment followed disclosures of her brother-in-law, William Turc, a taxicab driver, that he had given her a revolver he had borrowed, and that she had threatened to kill Schneider on several occasions. Mrs. Buzzi, during the trial denied Turc's story.

NEW ENGLAND HAS LOWEST SECTIONAL SUICIDE RATE

New York, June 27.—Improved economic conditions in the United States during 1922 brought the suicide rate down slightly, the Spectator, an insurance publication, reported today, announcing that the rate for the year was 15.1 per hundred thousand of population, as compared with a rate of 15.7 in 1921.

Between 15,000 and 16,000 persons took their own lives during the year, it was estimated on returns from 76 large cities. Of these cities, San Diego, Calif., led the list with 47.8 suicides per 100,000. Sacramento, Calif., was second with 37.9; San Francisco third, with 30.4; Los Angeles, fourth, with 30.3; Portland, Ore., fifth with 27.2; Seattle, Wash., sixth with 27.1; Trenton, N. J., seventh with 24 and Denver, Colo., eighth with 23.6.

Low records of the cities tabulated were scored by Somerville, Mass., with 5.1; Williamsport, Pa., 5.4; New Bedford, Mass., 5.5; McKeesport, Pa., 6.3; Scranton, Pa., 6.4; Newport, R. I., 6.4; Richmond, Va., 7.1 and Fall River, Mass., 7.4.

The report speculates, but reaches no conclusion on why the "often gloomy and cold New England states" have the lowest sectional suicide rate in the country, while "the beautiful and sunny Rocky Mountain and Pacific coast states" lead the list.

MISSING SEA CAPTAIN ON ISLAND IN MID OCEAN

London, June 27.—A mystery of the sea had a happy ending today when Mrs. Foster, a resident of Barry, received an unsigned cable message from the island of Mauritius in the Indian ocean, reading: "Safe, excellent health."

Mrs. Foster is the wife of Captain Foster of the British ship Trevessa which was given up for lost in the Indian ocean nearly a month ago, since which time the wife has been prostrated with grief.

The Trevessa, a vessel of 5,000 tons, was on a voyage from Australia to England, when, on May 26, a wireless message from her was picked up, saying that she was sinking and that the crew had taken to the boats. The wireless call was received by the Trevean, owned by the same company, which vessel at that time was about 300 miles from the position given by the Trevessa. The Trevessa hastened to the scene and searched for the survivors until June 7, when she reported from Sydney that she had found only wreckage and an overturned boat.

Coming on the heels of the message to Mrs. Foster today was a cablegram to the vessel's owner, filed by Captain Foster from the Island of Rodriques, in which he reported that he had arrived there with sixteen members of his crew and believed the boat containing the others would turn up.

SON TESTIFIED AGAINST MOTHER IN MURDER CASE

The boy contradicted his mother's testimony in that he said he saw her approach his father with a "shiny object" in her hand, while she swore that she saw Lonergan take what she supposed to be a revolver from a drawer and tried to get it away from him. Mrs. Lonergan sobbed as her son testified. She testified earlier in the day that her husband had abused her and the children.

Enright Testifies in Criminal Libel Suit

New York Police Commissioner to Submit a Detailed Report of His Holdings and Finances.

New York, June 27.—Police Commissioner Enright, taking the stand today before General Sessions Judge Crain in his criminal libel action Magistrate Corrigan and Assemblyman Cuvillier for their allegations that he was in league with alleged police bootleggers and grafters, declared that he had not received a penny from any policeman during the period covered by the defendants' charges. He said his present worldly possessions consisted of a bank account of less than $3,000, a farm which rented for $600 a year a $13,000 mortgage, and $3,000 or $4,000 in Liberty bonds.

Requested by Judge Crain to produce at the next session a detailed report of his holdings and finances at the time the Mullan-Gage law was passed, and on April 28, 1923, when the defendants made their charges that he was receiving graft, he promised to do so.

Judge Crain opened the examination of Commissioner Enright by declaring that the "common sense" way of discovering whether the commissioner benefited improperly in connection with the enforcement or non-enforcement of the Mullan-Gage law was to get a detailed financial statement from him and then take a substantial adjustment the defendants to investigate this statement.

In regard to his personal bank account the commissioner said that it was about $3,000 at the time of the Mullan-Gage law passage, but was less than $2,000 at the present time. His salary, he said, is $7,500 a year.

Predictions that the case would be "wide open" from now on were made by counsel for Magistrate Corrigan, following announcement that the appellate division of the supreme court had sustained the legality of his subpoena for all police records dealing with enforcement of the Mullan-Gage law. Through these records, the counsel said, he hopes to prove Enright's alleged complicity with police bootleggers.

Mr. Chadburne, speaking for the creditors asked that an assistant prosecutor be detailed to investigate this phase of the matter, and if the circumstances warranted, lay the facts before the grand jury. No intimation was given in the letter as to the nature of the alleged criminal acts.

Predict Falling Off In Real Estate Activity

Realtors in Session in Cleveland Also Forecast Lower Prices in the Cost of Building.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 27.—Predictions of falling prices in the cost of building and a general real estate activity were made by speakers at the opening session of the sixteenth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards here today. The convention, said to be the largest gathering of business men this year, attracted approximately 7,500 delegates from the United States and Canada.

Basing his conclusions on questionnaires issued to all real estate boards by the National Association in May, Melvin L. Morse, real estate statistician of Wellesley Hills, Mass., also forecast some depressions for general business. He predicted no general crash, however, but a gradual decline of business in a series of steps.

A marked depression would be prevented by the suburban movement of home building, which he said would rival the growth of the automobile, good roads, the movies or radio.

A general dimunition of prices in the near future also was predicted by Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, who added that this would not be a real disadvantage as many because of the greater purchasing power of money. Congressman Burton predicted a stiffening in rates upon commercial paper in the last half of the year because of the credit required to move crops and the larger demand of the later season. During the afternoon the realtors divided into seven divisional meetings. Speaking before the property management division, Albert M. Swayne, of Chicago, urged co-operative department building and ownership as a great step towards solution of the housing problem. It is practically impossible for the family of moderate means to live in its own bungalow and enjoy modern comforts because of high values, increased taxes and maintenance expenses in the large cities, he said.

The rebellion did not take place however according to Mrs. Powell's testimony, until after she had been twice "banished" to her home in Mississippi for scolding her temperamental husband about poker playing. Each time she was compelled to write an apology to her husband before he would take her back. When he quit his $350 a week berth with Mack Sennett and a former wife residing in New York, demanded her alimony allowance, Mrs. Powell went to her husband's financial aid by selling her jewelry. Then she accepted stage and screen engagements to keep the wolf from the door and the entire effort cost her 40 pounds in weight, she told the court.

The Powells moved to Westport in 1917 and Mrs. Powell resides there now.

BOSTON C. L. U. SANCTIONS 'PHONE OPERATORS' STRIKE

Calls Upon All "True Trade Unionists" to Rally to the Support of the Striking Telephone Operators—In Providence the Telephone System Remains Almost Completely Tied Up—Improvement is Reported in Some of the Other Exchanges Which Suffered Most Heavily from the Walkout.

Boston, June 27.—A call to all "true trade unionists" to rally to the support of the striking telephone operators in Boston and throughout New England except Connecticut, was issued tonight by the Boston Central Labor Union, which officially for the first time. At the close of a special meeting held to consider the strike developments, the Central Labor Union made public a resolution adopted at the meeting. It said in part:

"The Boston Central Labor Union endorses the requests made by the Telephone Operators' department, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, to the New England Telephone and Telegraph company for increased wages and better working conditions, and calls upon all true trade unionists to rally to the support of their fellow workers to gain the betterments that are being sought. The Central Labor Union requests that the principles of the American labor movement be guarded zealously and that unity be the slogan instead of disruption."

Except in the city of Providence service was maintained in whole or in part by the New England Telephone and Telegraph company throughout its territory on the second day of the operators' strike. In Providence the telephone system was almost completely tied up. In the Boston metropolitan district, where about half of the 12,000 operators of the company are employed, there was an improvement in some of the exchanges which suffered most heavily from the walkout to enforce demands for increased wages and shorter hours.

In Worcester, Springfield and several other cities which were hard hit yesterday additional operators were on duty today. In Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont and in many sections of Massachusetts and Rhode Island service was virtually normal.

Company officials asserted that some of the operators who struck yesterday returned to work today.

Tonight's meeting, which was called as a joint meeting of the rival factions of telephone operators, proved to be strongly against the striking element. It voted to accept no offer of arbitration from anyone but Miss O'Connor personally. A resolution declaring that the president of the department "must admit the great mistake she has made."

GERALDINE FARRAR WINS DIVORCE DECREE

New York, June 27.—Miss Geraldine Farrar, opera singer was granted a decree of divorce from Lou Tellegen, her actor-husband, by Justice John Tierney of supreme court today. The decree was granted on recommendations of Referee Mahoney who conducted the divorce hearing.

Under the interlocutory decree, Miss Farrar was permitted to resume her maiden name and was given the privilege to marry again. This privilege was denied Tellegen, who was directed to pay the costs of the suit. The decree will not become final until three months from today.

LABOR MEMBERS SUSPENDED FROM HOUSE OF COMMONS

London, June 27.—(By The A. P.)—Three Scottish labor members, James Maxton, J. Wheatley and Rev. Campbell Stephen, were suspended from the house of commons this evening after a stormy scene over a proposed reduction in the appropriations for child welfare in Scotland during discussion of the Scottish estimates, usually a most peaceful topic.

Maxton and Wheatley denounced those favoring the reduction, notably Sir Frederick George Banbury, a labor member for Poplar, as "murderous," and refused to withdraw despite the advice of J. Ramsay Macdonald, parliamentary labor leader. They also refused summons to leave whereupon they were formally named by the speaker and the home secretary moved their suspension, which was carried, 258 to 70.

Then the Rev. Mr. Stephen arose and excitedly repeated that Mr. Banbury was a "murderer." He also refused to withdraw, was named by the speaker and suspended by a vote of 276 to 60.

Hardly had the hubbub subsided when another Scotchman, G. Buchanan, got into trouble. Emmanuel Shinwell was commenting on the demeanor of the ministerialists, when Sir George Hamilton was understood to have made hove references to a Jew with regard to Sir Alfred Mond. This the latter resented, although he said he was proud of being a Jew. Immediately a clamor arose on the labor benches for the suspension of the offender.

Buchanan roared "white livered cowards; dirty cads," and similar epithets, while the chairman, J. F. Pope, said he had not heard any offensive remarks. Buchanan continued shouting, accusing the chair of partiality. He refused to take his seat and was suspended, 256 to 52.

WOMAN KEPT LOOKOUT WHILE BANDITS WORKED

New York, June 27.—While a woman kept a lookout, two armed bandits today entered an East Side jewelry establishment, bound and gagged the proprietor, a diamond salesman, two customers and the proprietor's daughter, leisurely looted the place and escaped with precious stones valued at $60,000. The woman acted as carrier for the stolen gems, the police believe.

Louis Edison, the proprietor, said his loss was $40,000. The diamond salesman and the customers were forced to give up jewelry valued at $20,000.

The store is located on the second floor in a busy neighborhood. While the robbers were at work one of them told Edison that they had been watching his store for seven months with the idea of robbing it, but were unable to do so because of a burglar chain at the door entrance. Edison would sure of the identity of prospective customers.

The bandits caught Edison napping today, sneaking in behind a customer for whom the chain had just been removed. Edison managed to untie himself from the bandages and by way of sounding the alarm, threw a chair through a window. A passerby pulled a fire alarm, which resulted in police reserves as well as firemen being summoned.

Earlier in the day he had been delirious, it is said, and nurses and doctors were at a loss to account for his condition.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office
31 Church Street Telephone 1023

The Willimantic Rotarians gathered Tuesday noon for their regular meeting and luncheon. A feature of the day was the celebration of the birthdays of Henry Congdon, Raymond A. Palmer, William A. Dawson and Treasurer Hubert W. Hebor.

The host members were designated as guests and were seated at a specially decorated table. Upon request they furnished the entertainment for the day. All were presented with birthday cakes.

Almost 80 per cent. of the membership were present and all were in favor of avoiding the intense heat which prevailed at the noon hour. The result was that adjournment was taken at 1:45 o'clock.

Further reports were given by Professor Richard E. Dodge, who is chairman of the joint field day of the Norwich, New London and Willimantic clubs to be held at Storrs on July 19. The Rotarians of the four clubs, with their wives and lady friends, are assured of a good time.

George W. Hickey was heard in an interesting discourse on his recent trip to the Great Lakes. Mr. and Mrs. Hickey were gone for ten days and witnessed many of the principal cities on the lakes.

After the meeting had come to a close, the committee in charge of the outing at Storrs met an arranged details for the affair. It is thought that the field day will be one of the largest of its kind held in eastern Connecticut.

An officer from the United States department of justice arrived in Willimantic Tuesday afternoon to look up the record of James Walker, formerly of this city and a resident of Springfield, Mass., for the past several months.

The record of Mrs. Lillian Ouellette was also under observation. Walker is being held in Springfield by the federal authorities on a serious charge, alleged to be a violation of the Mann act. It is said that Walker and Mrs. Ouellette, the latter only seventeen years of age, have been living as man and wife in Springfield for some time past. Several months ago, Walker and Edward Ouellette, Mrs. Ouellette's husband, figured in an argument and fist battle on Bridge street in this city and Walker caused Ouellette's arrest. Ouellette in turn, charged that Walker had been effective in separating his wife's love. Mrs. Ouellette said that her husband was lazy and often had sent her to obtain money from Walker. She alleged that Walker had always been a true friend to her and Walker denied any errors during the child-wife. Mrs. Ouellette said that she had visited Walker's bungalow on the banks of the Willimantic river and that the latter had formed a paternal love for her because of her tender age and sufferings from the infidelity of husband. Walker is about sixty years old and for many years he kept bachelor quarters in Willimantic.

The game will start promptly at three o'clock and the fans should see to it that the team has plenty of support as their initial venture of the season. Mathewson will do the hurling and Joe Hamel will take the position behind the bat.

The team will be practically the same as it was during the stay in the Eastern Connecticut League last year. The Association nine will journey to Taftville Saturday afternoon for a game in that town.

Arrangements were in charge of Arpin and Van Zant funeral directors.

On a recent evening two stealthy shadows were seen to move in the vicinity of William Burdick's grocery store in Staffs. The suspicious persons were then seen to break into the store by making entrance through an end of the windows. A posse was organized and the building was rushed. Inside of the store were found two young boys under sixteen years of age, both of whom are residents of the village. Mr. Burdick was notified of the incident and when he saw the boys and noted their tender age he refused to prosecute them. They were released with a warning to behave themselves in the future.

Andrews and owing to their tender age they were let off with a severe reprimand and were placed in probation.

Bread Theatre

"Actish" seems to be Tom Mix' middle name! Last night at the Bread theatre an enthusiastic audience saw the popular Fox star in his latest starring vehicle, "Catch My Smoke," that was simply crammed with action from start to finish. It is doubtful whether Tom Mix was ever called upon to display any more daring feats than those contained in "Catch My Smoke."

In this photoplay, Tom Mix the "Box Stratton" is the object of a conspiracy to cheat him out of his ranch to which he has just returned after two years of service in France. Not only is his horsemanship superb but the many scenes centered about speeding freight trains kept the large audience fastened to their seats. The acting, the situations, the story, the photoplay and in fact the entire production come up to every expectation given up by the Bread theatre's advance notices. Judging from the capacity attendance last night it is safe to assume that "Catch My Smoke" will prove one of the most entertaining motion pictures ever offered to the amusement lovers of this town.

"Catch My Smoke" will be shown again today at the Bread and for the second feature Clark Kimball Young will be seen in "The Woman of Bronze." Movie Chats completes the bill.

The Argentine family, to which the quail, partridge and pheasant belong, is known to naturalists as the Tinamus, and they resemble their well-known relatives now found in this country. The Great Partridge, known to the Argentinians as the Perdiz grande, is described by the famous author, W. H. Hudson, recently deceased, in his "Birds of La Plata," as possessing unusual traits. He says, "I doubt if there is anywhere a bird with such a sounding flight as the Tinamu; the whirr of its wings can only be compared to the rattling of a vehicle driven at great speed over a stony road. From the moment it rises until it alights again there is no cessation in the rapid vibration of the wings; but, like a ball thrown by hand, the bird flies straight away with extraordinary violence until the impelling force is spent, when it slopes gradually towards the earth, the distance it is able to accomplish at a flight being from 500 to 1500 yards. This flight it can repeat when driven up again as many as three times, after which the bird can rise no more." Hudson states that the smaller or common partridges of Argentina are so tame in disposition, and fly so reluctantly that it is not necessary to shoot them where they are very abundant, as any number can be killed with a stick.

The various breed of Tinamu will hold their popularity, whether they be known as South American quail, partridges or pheasants on the bill of fares of the American restaurants, just as long as Argentina can keep up the supply.

ARGENTINE GAME BIRDS
FOR THE AMERICAN TABLE

As the sale of local game birds is prohibited by state law, the importations from Argentina last year reached startling figures when 131,000 quail, 26,000 partridges and 15,000 pheasants entered the port of New York, and were consumed by those possessing an epicurean taste and well padded pocketbooks.

The importations for the present season promise to be even greater than those of 1921. Argentina seems to have almost a monopoly in the supply of game birds, for the total of all the importations from other countries amounted to but 51,000 birds of all species. These include 12,000 pheasants, 11,000 red legged partridges, 11,000 Hungarian black plovers, 9,000 Scotch grouse, 1,000 Hungarian black game, 400 Egyptian quail and 300 ptarmigans.

The Conservation Law of New York State requires the importation and sale to the ultimate consumer of game fowl and forbids the sale of such bird meat to be made by the proprietor of the [illegible] who is an [illegible] and by [illegible]

SUZANNE LENGLEN DISPLAYS HER WONDERFUL SKILL AT WIMBLEDON

Wimbledon, June 27 (By the A. P.)—There were no surprises in the play for the world's tennis championships at Wimbledon this afternoon, and only one big thrill. This was when Suzanne Lenglen appeared in the stadium, which was crowded almost to capacity, to start after her fifth successive world's title. She began in characteristic manner, winning every game of the two-set match from young Peggy Ingram, the daughter of one of England's old international players.

Mlle. Lenglen played superbly, keeping her opponent at the base line and snuffing out whatever hope the little English girl had by playing shots of amazing accuracy within a few inches of the side and back court lines. Occasionally she worked up to the net to finish off a rally with a net volley.

When she had finished many of the spectators went to the outside courts to look over the other candidates for the women's championship. There were none, however, whose play seemed even to approach Suzanne's in vigor, accuracy or strategic soundness.

Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the American champion, scored an easy triumph over Miss Ira L. Eddis of England, 6-3, 6-2, but Miss Eddis lacks firmness in hitting the ball that one associates with every good player. She lightened Mrs. Mallory's task immensely by loose stroking, but even then Mrs. Mallory's play seemed to lack the force and speed it once had.

Miss Kathleen McKane, Great Britain's best woman player, and the one who is considered to have the best chance of dethroning the long reigning Lenglen, was responsible today for the only setback suffered by the American delegation of eleven players—eight women and three men. Miss McKane pushed aside Miss Katherine Gardner of Cambridge, Mass., with the loss of only one game out of thirteen.

Of the other Americans, three were idle today, and all the rest won their matches, most of them without much difficulty.

Vincent Richards, showing the same smooth ability to play the game perfectly from any spot on the court that he demonstrated in his first appearance yesterday afternoon, advanced another step today towards the goal by defeating the Indian Davis cup player, S. M. Jacob, 6-3, 6-3, 8-6. The club played as he never played before; his service was swift and his strokes were made with fine precision and good variation and power, but Richards almost always sent the ball flying back, and whenever an opening came he had a stroke to finish off the rally and win another point.

The grace of the young American's movements, the [illegible] attack, and, most of all, his sure and confident manner, greatly pleased the British onlookers. The newspaper critics again laud him as an artist in every type of tennis play and concede that he deserves the reputation of the best volleyer in the world.

William M. Johnston, second ranking American player, adding more speed to his strokes than he showed yesterday, and occasionally whipping one of his lightning serves over the net, disposed of R. D. Watson of Northumberland, but not without some difficulty, as Watson was a sticker and carried the last set into deuce. The series ended 6-1, 6-2, 9-7.

Francis T. Hunter, the third of the Americans, had no easy task against the young London player, V. Burr; in fact, he dropped one set of his match before emerging with victory. The score in this contest stood 5-7, 6-0, 6-1, 6-2.

If Johnston and Richards win their matches tomorrow, they will meet in the next round. There is another game in which an American will eliminate an American, as Miss Leslie Bancroft, of Boston and Miss Martha Bayard of New Jersey, both of whom won their games today, seem headed for a collision the latter part of the week.

The three Americans whose first matches are delayed until tomorrow are Miss Eleanor Goss, Miss Eleonora Sears and Miss J. L. Mulford of Boston.

It was hoped to reduce the survivors in the men's singles to 32 by tonight, but more rain fell, delaying play in the afternoon. The survivors include Lacoste, Campbell, Brugnon, Wheatley and Norton, as was expected.

WATERBURY TAKES EASY GAME FROM BRIDGEPORT

GIANTS WIN IN 11TH BY SEVEN-RUN RALLY

Boston, June 27.—New York made it nine straight wins by defeating Boston today, 13 to 6, getting seven runs in the 11th inning. In this inning Groh walked Pruett, who took third on Meusel's single. They scored when Young's drive was carried by the high wind over Southworth's head for a homer. Three Boston errors and a New York hitting rally then gave the champions four more runs before they were retired. Each team used three pitchers. Boeckel is indefinitely suspended as a result of a run-in with umpires at Brooklyn. Conlon took his place and played brilliantly in spots. Pruett played sensationally. The score:

COAL HEAVERS TAKE TWO FROM PONIES

Worcester, June 27.—Worcester defeated Springfield both games of a double header today, the first 12 to 9 and the second 4 to 1. A strong wind gave the batters a big advantage in the early afternoon, fielders having difficulty in judging the ball. Hits were frequent and runs came fast. Lindstrom's better control and steadiness in the pinches enabled him to win. In the second game Worcester hit opportunely while Braxton and Duffy held Springfield safe at all times. Braxton was hit under the right eye by a ball that Herrera batted and was obliged to retire. Scores:

NAVY FAVORITE IN POUGHKEEPSIE RACE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 27—(By the A. P.)—The U. S. Naval Academy's eight, which has ruled the collegiate seas for the past two years, stood out tonight as a favorite to retain its laurels in the blue ribbon feature of the twenty-sixth annual regatta of the intercollegiate Rowing Association tomorrow on the Hudson.

One far western and four eastern crews will contest the middies' claims to superiority for another season and experts tonight predicted that the premier event of the program, which also includes races for freshman and junior varsity eights, would develop one of the keenest contests in recent seasons.

Washington, holder of the Pacific coast championship and ranking with the Navy as the only undefeated varsity crew in the three mile race, had its confidence restored late today by the return of Dow Walling, brilliant 20 year old stroke to the shell after an absence of several days because of a knee infection. But though this eliminated the eleventh hour handicap which the far westerners faced with a re-arranged lineup, observers declared that Walling plainly showed the effects of his illness and that as a result the Purple and gold shell would be at a disadvantage.

Prior to the temporary loss of Walling who for a time was threatened with blood poison from a carbuncle on his knee, Washington, second last year to the Navy in a slashing finish, was the choice of many experts, but the stroke's misfortune has lowered the crew's stock considerably among these critics.

First event, junior varsity eights, 4.15 o'clock, daylight saving time: Number 1, Cornell; number 2, Pennsylvania; number 3, Syracuse; number [illegible], Columbia.

Second event, freshman eights, five o'clock: Number 1, Pennsylvania; number 2, Cornell; number 3, Syracuse; number 4, Washington; number 5, Columbia.

Third event, varsity eights, six o'clock: Number 1, Washington; number 2, Pennsylvania; number 3, Cornell; number 4, Navy; number 5, Columbia; number 6, Syracuse.

WHIRLWINDS DISPOSE OF PROFS AS POSSIBLE TITLE CONTENDERS

The Whirlwinds kept their hold on first place in the Twilight league last night when they beat their closest rivals, the Professional Men, by the score of 13 to 8. The Whirlwinds got off to a good lead in the first inning when they scored two runs, after which they were always in the lead. Williams was off form, being wild and ineffective. Although Diffly was wild at times he tightened in the pinches. In the second he fanned the third man with the bases full.

The Whirlwinds played great all behind Diffly throughout the game. A great throw by Clabby cutting down a run at the plate in the third inning. Joe Berg's great catching also had a good effect on the Whirlwinds' playing as he constantly kept them full of pep. Joe also connected for a three bagger. Clabby also hit one to the nines in deep center but slipped rounding second and he was run down between second and third. Although the Whirlwinds supplied the hitting features it remained for two of the Profs to supply the fielding gems and this they did when Sinay robbed Shea of a three bagger and Sussler made a great running catch on Heebner, retiring the side with three on. Simpson fielded best for the Whirlwinds. The score:

NEW YORK GOLFERS LEAD ON PUBLIC LINKS

[illegible] Hoe and now in Washington, June 27.—Three golfers from New York city, two from Philadelphia, and one each from Buffalo, Portland, Oregon and Boston, remained in the second national public links championship at the conclusion of play today at East Potomac park here. Two of the New York players meet in the third round tomorrow in the top half of the draw, while one New Yorker—Richard Walsh—runner-up at Toledo last year, is still in the lower half of the draw.

The first and second match play rounds of the tournament today were marked by extra hole matches—five in the morning and one in the afternoon.

Ray J. McAuliffe of Buffalo, who won the medal in the qualifying round yesterday, figured in extra hole matches both morning and afternoon, winning from J. G. Frazer, of New York, on the nineteenth, while E. B. Lloyd of Chicago, later took him to the 20th hole before McAuliffe won.

McAuliffe will meet Frank Dolp, the 19 years old Portland, Ore., lad tomorrow morning, while Harry Scharf, of New York, will play J. Stewart Whitman, also of New York, in one-half of the draw. In the other half Walsh will play John McAndrew of Boston, caddie champion of Massachusetts, while Joseph Coble, of Philadelphia, will meet R. F. Hamilton, of Philadelphia.

FIELD TO BE CUT IN FUTURE PUBLIC TOURNEYS

Washington, June 27.—The quotas of large cities will be cut in future tournaments for the national public links golf championship under a decision of the public links committee of the United States Golf association. The committee decided that to make future tournaments more representative of the entire country it would be necessary to reduce the number of players from the big centers of population.

The committee also decided that next year's championship meeting should go westward. Dayton, O., is a strong bidder.

Another No-Hit, No-Run Game

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 27.—Geo. Lowe, of the Schatz club, of this city, pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Red Hook today in Red Hook. Schatz won, 5 to 0.

Y., June 27.—Four Chicago women golfers were among the eight survivors today at the end of the first two rounds of match play in the championship flight of the third invitation golf tournament at the Buffalo Country club. Miss Alexa Stirling, present Metropolitan and former national champion, and Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, national and Eastern Association champion, were among the eight winners in the second flight.

Miss Sterling defeated Miss Sara Fownes of Pittsburgh, up and 4 to play, while Miss Collett eliminated Mrs. Dexter Lowndes, of Atlanta, Southern champion, 6 and 4.

Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson, Greenwich, Conn., defeated Mrs. Thomas Hucknall, Cleveland, 6 and 4 in the second round. Mrs. Jackson defeated Mrs. W. T. Alderdyce, Pittsburgh, 4 and 3 in the first round.

FOUR EASTERN COLLEGE PLAYERS SEMI-FINALS

Philadelphia, June 27.—Four eastern racquet wielders reached the semi-final round in the national intercollegiate singles championship at the Merion Cricket club today. They are Frank T. Anderson and Gerald Emerson, of Columbia; W. M. Ingraham, who wears the crimson "H" of Harvard, and Carl Fischer, southpaw ace of the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy.

Vieing in interest today with the intercollegiate matches, was the final round of the national interscholastic tournament, in which John F. Whitbeck, of the Loomis school, Windsor, Conn., won from Charles Watson, 3rd, of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., in a four set match.

Whitbeck, who is also holder of the national junior indoor championship, played more steady tennis than his opponent, while Watson's errors paved the way for his defeat. The scores were 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

WILLARD LOOKING FOR SPARRING PARTNERS

New York, June 27.—Unusual activity in the heavyweight division this year has cleaned the cobwebs market of pachyderms of large dimensions and a cry for help has been sounded in nearby training camps.

Both Jess Willard, whose camp is at Yonkers, N. Y., and Luis Firpo, the South American whose quarters were established yesterday at Long Beach, Long Island, were shown in human punching bags produced because all available are at the camps of Dempsey and Gibbons in Montana.

Tex Rickard, who is promoting the Willard-Firpo bout, asked today that all strong men who think they could be sparring partners apply to him.

TRACY RESIGNS AS EXECUTIVE FOR BIG FIGHT

Shelby, Mont., June 27.—(By the A. P.)—Dan Tracy, pioneer Great Falls mining man and hotel owner, suddenly withdrew from the position of executive in charge of the business management of the Dempsey-Gibbons fight tonight. Tracy, said his withdrawal was due to his inability to adequately protect the new capital put into the promotion at the time the second $100,000 installment was paid Dempsey June 15.—Mayor Jim Johnson, treasurer of the fight said Tracy's withdrawal would not prevent the holding of the bout.

ST. PAUL OFFERS $200,000 DEMPSEY-GIBBONS FIGHT

St. Paul, June 27.—Jack Kearns manager of Jack Dempsey has been offered a $200,000 flat guarantee with the privilege of 50 per cent. of the gate receipts for the Dempsey-Gibbons fight in St. Paul, if the promoters of the Shelby fight are unable to make good their contract.

NORWICH CLUB AT DANIELSON SUNDAY

Manager O'Leary's Norwich team plays at Danielson on Sunday in the first road game of the season. The following Monday the team plays at Gardner, Mass. For Sunday's game the Norwich lineup will be Gaw, p; Bond or Barker, c; Hart, 1b; Massey, 2b; Faulkner, ss; Millis, 3b; Drehan, lf; Mills, cf; Clabby, rf.

In speaking of Manager Troland's derogatory remarks hurled at the local team Manager O'Leary says that Mr. Troland is whispering through his bonnet when he says that Taftville can trim the local club. Taftville has never taken a series from Norwich yet and probably never will, as it has always been a case of inflated pride with the suburban aggregation. However, Manager O'Leary say that while hot air never won a ball game he is willing to give Taftville a chance to make good their idle prattling about their club on July 4th.

He is willing to book the team for the Fourth at the Fairgrounds in connection with the horse racing events that will be staged that afternoon. He also guarantees to use his regular lineup with Gaw in the box and may lay off a few players to give the Taftville team a chance to make a showing.

GOFF'S HOMER IN NINTH WINS FOR NEW HAVEN

New Haven, June 27.—Goff, pinch-hitting for Joyce in the eighth with the bases full, hit a home run and New Haven defeated Albany here this afternoon in the second game of the series by a 9-5 score. Joyce pitched sensational ball up to the eighth, holding the visitors to two hits. The batting of Neher, who hit four times in the same number of trips to the plate, and the fielding of Neher and Dowd was a feature.

THREE LEADING HORSES CRIPPLED FOR SEASON

New York, June 27.—Three of the season's leading thoroughbreds, Zev and Bud Lerner of the Ranocas stable and Harry Payne Whitney's Chickvale, all candidates for the Derby to be run Saturday at Latonia, suffered injuries in training at Aqueduct Park today. All were withdrawn from the Kentucky event.

Zev, the season's three year old champion, stepped on a stone, and, while the injury is not serious, his trainer said he probably would keep the colt out of competition for some time. Chickvale pulled up slightly lame after a workout. Bud Lerner bowed a tendon and will be out of training indefinitely.

Billy Magner Dead

Bridgeport, June 27.—Billy Magner, former Connecticut league baseball player died at the age of 54 today. He played with the Waterbury club from 1880 to 1884.

The victory of Pancho Villa over Jimmy Wilde means that America now holds all of the world's boxing championships. With no fighters of championship calibre in sight, Britain has arrived at the unhappy position of being the home of boxing without one of her sons holding a world's title.

Montreal tennis fans are looking forward to a treat the later part of July, when the Japanese and Canadian racquet wielders are to meet on the Mount Royal club courts in the first round of American zone play in the Davis Cup Competitions.

John McGraw's assertion that the heavy hitting in the National league this season is due to the infusion of new blood is hardly borne out by the official averages, which show that a good majority of the leading batsmen are veterans of the game.

POETRY

THE GREEN TOWER.

Who says enchantment passed with Pan?
And lightsome Ariel?
That Merlin in the mossland weaves
No more his ancient spells?
Beyond my little garden sweet
With many an herb and flower
Where lately all the snows was bare
Appears a tall green tower.

Its walls are built of tourmaline
And emerald and jade,
From beryl windows elves look out
In squirrel fur arrayed.
And chatter, while musicians clad
In feather coats entrance
The ear with melody that makes
The pinks and poppies dance.

The rain adorns its verdant sides
With countless diamonds bright,
The fireflies with golden lamps
At dusk its chambers light.
Like clusters of celestial fruit
The stars above it glow,
And in it frequently the moon
Hangs up her silver bow.

The great enchantress Nature waved
Her wand of sun and dew
O'er barren twigs and naked boughs
That laced the breezy blue,
The south wind's incantation breathed
On buds of silken sheen,
And of the leafless maple made
A magic tower of green.

CARING FOR HORSES IN SUMMER

The horses haven't disappeared by any means and yet the number is so few in comparison with the automobiles that those that are left may not be getting the same consideration these summer days that used to be the case when there were more of them and their troubles were more conspicuous.

It is well to remember that the horse is not a machine, that it suffers from the heat quite as much if not more than its driver, that it is not able to get relief in the same ways and that it is entitled to a proper degree of consideration throughout the whole heated term.

The horse needs to be treated so that it will not suffer from the effects of overheating so that it will not be forced to haul unwarranted loads and so that it will be in condition to give that reasonable degree of service that will be expected. It should neither be misused relative to work nor to care. There are hot weather duties for the horse as well as for the human being as all lovers of animals fully understand and as all drivers ought to realize if they do not.

The careful driver and considerate attendant well knows the importance of devoting the proper amount of thought to the animal from which so much is expected. Proper provision for food, water, cleanliness, rest, loads, the shady side of the street where possible, the avoidance of draughts when badly heated and for the prevention of overheating not only means better service from the horse but it means that the horse is a better asset.

It should not be possible to overlook the fact that the horse has feelings, that it has ways of indicating its discomforts and that negligence is nothing less than cruelty to dumb animals. The call for fair treatment for the horse, no matter how many or how few there are of such animals, is highly proper and none who appreciates the value of a horse will deny it either through carelessness or intentionally.

MACMILLAN'S TRIP.

Perhaps the object of MacMillan's visit to the frozen north does not make the same appeal to the general public that Peary's dash for the pole and the similar errand of other explorers in search of the top of the earth did, but there is no question but what there is plenty within the arctic circle about which too little is known.

It shouldn't be supposed that because he is not setting out to rediscover the pole that he is not going to encounter danger and hardships. He is going into little known regions where all kinds of uncertainties may be expected and against which many precautions must be taken. He is going in search of scientific information to find out about currents, the flora, the ice conditions and the changes in the past 70 years. He will study the magnetism of the earth and make notes of the botanical specimens, the birds and make tests concerning atmospheric electricity.

Such a story as he brings back may not abound in the kind of adventure which so many like to read about, and yet the chances are good that along with his experiments there will be an experience that will provide plenty of thrill and call for the display of a generous amount of courage. Hardships in the north are not all centered about the pole. Others have found them hundreds of miles from the northern end of the earth's axis and MacMillan is cognizant of the fact that he will encounter what he and others are well aware can be expected.

Most of the explorers make it a point to make use of the latest devices. This MacMillan is doing with the radio. Through this means of communication he should be in daily touch with the rest of the world and likewise he will be able to keep those interested informed as to his location and his accomplishments, the condition of the members of the party and the progress made insofar as he is willing to tell his secrets. It changes the situation somewhat in comparison with those who were obliged in the past to cut loose from civilization.

NEW YORK'S AUTO LICENSING.

Some days ago an offer to give a sum of money to the person who would suggest the best method of overcoming the traffic conditions in New York city was made. It was so small that there was little prospect that it would interest those who might be serious about reaching a real solution. But there is no question about the need of a solution, nor is there any doubt but what New York as a state is in need of new and more stringent regulations surrounding automobile licensing, operation and traffic conditions in general for the purpose of getting greater safety.

When it is disclosed through the examinations of applicants for licenses by a magistrate that fraud of a serious nature not only is believed to be perpetrated upon the state bureau which governs the license the situation surprises itself. In this particular instance a person who could not read or write was licensed to drive a car. He had his application blank filled out by another and no one had tested him on that point. Reading and writing may not have any particular bearing upon the actual driving of a car. As a matter of fact it should be insisted that all drivers be able to read and write in the English language.

The importance of this lies in the fact that signs are erected for the purpose of guiding auto drivers. Street conditions, safety of school children, parking regulations, one way traffic, dangerous places, detours and many other situations are revealed to the traveling public by signs and these signs are in the English language. Those who cannot read, and unfortunately some who do, fail to get the guidance they should from them. Their object is lost to the illiterate and through the fact that the signs mean nothing to them they easily, though possibly unintentionally, put themselves in the class of reckless drivers.

New York should need no second warning relative to a situation of this kind. Highway conditions today are such that safety is not engendered by disregarding many of the details even though they may seem small. A licensing system that is full of loopholes is a danger in itself.

CUTTING TAXES AND DEBTS.

When President Harding spoke in Salt Lake City concerning the question of taxation and pointed out the reduction that had been made by the government in expenditures with a view to curtailed taxes and showed that the per capita rate had been cut from $56.78 in 1920 to $35.39 he dealt with a subject on which something has been said in the past from time to time, but a subject, nevertheless, that is uppermost in the minds of the people. Reduced expenditures and reduced taxes mean an accomplishment of great benefit to each and everyone and give ground for the belief that there will be a continuance along the same line.

President Harding gave due credit to the budget system and the excellent handling of government finances in making such a fine showing. He likewise pointed to the contemplated yearly cutting of the national debt by a half billion as well as the debt settlements. And in this connection made the most of the opportunity to point out that while the government is engaged in such commendable work there was need for states and cities to move in the same direction.

Unfortunately the idea of debt reduction gets too little emphasis in many states and cities. The chief aim seems to be to pile them up without regard for when they will be paid. Many a city can point to a debt that has existed for a long period of years, being renewed from time to time, but with no provision for paying it even though the interest on it may have been paid in two or three times the amount of the principal. It is a mistake in municipal financing to permit such conditions to exist. The president did well in urging greater attention for public affairs and insistence on debt reduction.

FORBIDDING RAILS TO MINES.

The decision which has been rendered by the interstate commerce commission denying a railroad in Virginia the right to build a spur track to a new coal mine not only was accompanied by a strong minority opposition but it will cause many questions to be asked relative to the possible action of the commission and other lines of industry.

Much has been said about mines being overmanned and about there being more mines than there was equipment to move ther product. It is upon this ground that the commission has taken its action in this case. It considers that production should be made to meet requirements from the existing mines with existing rolling stock before additional demands are made upon such equipment for new development in the mining region.

Such a ruling as it has made is along a new line. There is bound to be concern over the possibility of the commission taking the same attitude relative to other industry. Some will want to know whether a spur track will be denied to a new village because it is impossible to serve the others or if new factories off the railroad line will be denied rail connection because there are enough mills in its opinion to supply the needs.

If the commission's ruling is for the purpose of bettering the coal situation it will get a diverse situation than otherwise, but the further explanation by the commission will be awaited with interest.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Have you begun to notice that the days are growing shorter as they are getting hotter?

It is to be hoped that the only accident that will mar the president's trip has taken place.

The man on the corner says: For every day of such relief we should not fail to be duly thankful.

Chicago is featuring smiling bandits, but that doesn't mean that they are entitled to any greater welcome.

The suggestion that some of the 9000 vacant farms in Pennsylvania be occupied by the surplus of miners isn't a bad one.

There is nothing exactly popular about highway or volcanic dust. Neither is pay dirt, though the former always costs enough.

When Senator Borah says he has no interest in a third party, that he is a republican and intends to stay so, he upsets the expectations of many democrats.

Will those $12 a day bricklayers in New York start a foundation for the relief of those school children who have been unable to get adequate school buildings?

In the annual hunt 1,011 groundhogs were killed in Badjeros, Ontario. That ought to remove some of the influence on winter when next groundhog day rolls around.

THE STAR WITNESS

"I had to go down to New York for a lawsuit," said the out-of-town customer with a sigh. "It was an awful bore but it turned out to be rather interesting after all."

"Personal matter?" asked Wilkinson.

"No, it was the firm's business," said the out-of-town customer. "The case was in regard to insurance for a fire. We had had a big fire in our warehouses in New York and the insurance company said we were so slow in turning the alarm that we had not done all we could to save the property. They contended that our watchman was purposely slow, you know, as if we were heavily insured in order to make money on a fire. It made me mad clear through just to hear that lawyer talk. I had to testify as to the stock and its value, you know, and all about the accuracy of the last inventory. It wasn't much use testifying, though, for they paid little or no attention to what I said but turned their batteries on a little shrimp of a medical student we called as a witness.

"This odd looking medical student was the best witness I ever saw," the out-of-town customer went on. "They couldn't fluster him in the least and he remained as cool as a cucumber all the time they were badgering him. He had nothing to do with the case at all except that he happened to be standing on the corner waiting for a car when our watchman came running out to turn in an alarm and he stayed to watch the fire.

"And this chap had no end of theories," the out-of-town customer continued. "He said afterward that he'd always wanted to be called in a case, just to see if they could rattle him, and he was quite set up to find they couldn't. I thought sure they were going to get him, though, when they asked him about the length of time that passed between the outbreak of the fire as he saw it, and the turning in of the alarm.

"He did hesitate a fraction of a second, however, just long enough to let the insurance lawyer think he was blaming. Then he said that the watchman came running out at once but the engines were ten minutes getting to the scene. That gave the lawyer his chance and he began to go for the fellow about his ability to estimate the passing of time. He said he didn't believe he could do it, but the witness declared that under ordinary circumstances he could always tell when ten minutes had passed."

"Pretty good for him!" exclaimed Wilkinson. "But could he prove his claim?"

"That's what the lawyer wanted to know," said the out-of-town customer. "He asked permission of the court to put the matter to a test and see what the young man could do, and the judge said he might. Of course the attorney was certain the young fellow would fail and our case would be a goner. I was mighty nervous about it myself, and it seemed to me I saw a little nervousness on the part of the witness. Indeed, he told me after the case was over that he was rattled and very much afraid he couldn't tell the difference between ten minutes and ten hours. He said that he had never put his little trick to the test before and he felt sure it wouldn't work.

"There was a solemn hush for a little while after the test began and then people began to whisper and wiggle and some women giggled nervously, but that fellow sat there calmly with his hands in his lap and let his eyes wander over the rooms as though he were making up his mind to buy something or other. I never saw anybody so cool in my life!"

"He probably had a wrist watch," suggested Wilkinson. "Or maybe he could see the court clock or something."

"No, sir," said the out-of-town customer. "He couldn't see a timepiece of any description. They made sure of that and fixed it so that nobody could signal him, either. It looked like a block game, as though he were done for, and I was certainly uneasy. It seemed an eternity before the time was up and the chap announced in a cool voice that it was ten minutes. It was, too, within a couple of seconds or so. I never saw anybody so dumfounded as that opposition lawyer, and it was his turn to worry, for that young man had won our case for us."

"Well, he must have been smart," declared Wilkinson. "I never saw the like of him, myself."

"Simple enough, though," chuckled the out-of-town customer reaching for a cigar. "He just happened to know that his pulse was 72 to the minute, and he counted it up to 720, and that made the ten minutes, he told me afterward."—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Telephone Strike

Mr. Editor: Without entering into the merits of the question, pro or con, is it not gratifying to read that Miss Julia S. O'Connor the director of the strike, has ordered the operators to refrain from any disturbance or molestation of the property of the telephone company.

In the ethics of strikes, when it is so well known that only the violence can give effect to the strike, this official restraint if not to be taken in the light of a suggestion, seems emphatic, and worthy of notice.

A few years ago a fellow entered a New York store with a brick-bat in his hand and demanded a bonus else he would throw the bat right through the plate glass front. I have forgotten how he fared, but his act expressed most fittingly the proposition that underlies the morals of the proletariat and that a favor of his kind has a real money value. Yet, some philosophers and theologians would have us think that the world is growing wiser and that society with less religious training or guidance is making steady progress toward that poetic "one event toward which the whole creation moves."

At this age, so lacking in direct effort, it is consoling to be assured that in those unseen, imperceptible ways, all things are working out their own salvation and the burden of responsibility is being so comfortably eased, if not entirely removed.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Andrew F. West, dean of Princeton University, is the founder and president of the American Classical League, which meets at the University of Michigan today for its first annual conference. The purpose of the league is to improve educational work in the linguistic field, and particularly in the ancient languages. Dean West has taught Latin at Princeton for many years. For many years he has been champion of the older standards of culture, and several years ago he engaged in a notable debate with President Eliot of Harvard on the theories and ideal of the two systems of education, Dr. Eliot upholding the system that eliminates Latin and Greek from required collegiate or university work. Dean West is the son of a Presbyterian clergyman, who sent his boy to Princeton. He is a positive, combative person, with clear-cut conviction on many subjects, and the courage to criticize men in high places, if he thinks that they are wrong. He was Woodrow Wilson's chief opponent when the latter was president of Princeton university.

Wives of Famous Men

Lucretia Walker, Wife of Samuel F. B. Morse

When Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph first set eyes upon Lucretia Walker, a maiden whose charms were as quaintly New England as her name, his views on the institution of matrimony underwent a complete revolution. At the age of 25, when he met Miss Walker, the young man had declared himself a "confirmed bachelor." Then fate took him to the city of Concord, where he visited for some time and became acquainted with Lucretia. Suddenly he began to see some virtue in married life. This young woman, hardly more than a child in fact, as she was only 16 at the time, was not only possessed of all the fine characteristics of the real New England young girl, but she had also a rare freshness and charm, a pretty face, a sweet disposition and a fine intelligence. Morse was stricken all the harder because of his previous invulnerability.

He set about wooing the young lady and apparently met with few difficulties, for he soon won her heart. They were not married for two years, because of her extreme youth, but in 1818, when Lucretia was 18 and Samuel 27, they were united. The qualities that had endeared her to him as a sweetheart were only accentuated as a wife. For all her youth she had much wisdom, and their married life was cloudless. Unhappily their paradise was a brief one. In 1825, after seven years together, Mrs. Morse succumbed to an incurable malady of the heart. Morse was away at the time and did not recieve word until after her death. He had not yet completed the telegraph that would have enabled him to receive a message soon enough to return before the end.

Stories That Recall Others

Names Is Names

She had just become a member of the same boarding house family to which he belonged. Their names were respectively Piersol and Cardini. On going down the first morning she passed him in the hall with the greeting:

"Good morning, Mr. Sardini."

To which he responded:

"Good morning, Miss Parasol."

He Heard Father

As a loving mother bends fondly over her new born child and gives him the name he is to bear through life, she most generally makes a silent but strong resolve always to call him by his full name. No matter then, if in later years he becomes known as Shrimp, or Fuzz, or Buster, or Cocky, he remains David William or John Benjamin to one fond heart at least.

Such is the case with James Paul. Many times a day one hears a sweet feminine voice calling, "James Pau-u-l, James Pau-u-l," and if James Paul is inclined to hear, he answers his mother's summons. Sad to say his inclination in that direction is often lagging.

This time when all boys of ten should be in bed had come and gone, yet James Paul had failed to appear. His mother appeared on her porch. "James Pau-u-l" she called. No reply. "James Pau-u-l" came her voice again and again without any result. Then there was a silence. Suddenly the quiet of the street was broken by a sharp masculine "Jim!" from James Paul's father.

"Yes, sir," was the instant response.

They were passing an old graveyard. The small plot was closely dotted with marble slabs and many old brown sandstone tablets. The little girl was much interest. "It's a nice little graveyard, mother," she said, and, "I suppose these brown stones are for colored people."

LOSERS ENTERTAIN WINNERS IN ROTARY CONTEST

Members of the winning team in the Rotary attendance contest recently held were given a real spread at the Wauregan on Wednesday noon by the losing team. The losers did themselves proud both in the selection of the menu and in the choice of entertainment that followed, both of which were voted by the winners as being unsurpassed.

Captain Alfred G. Bliven of the losing team was chairman of the committee that put on the entertainment and to him goes all the credit. Fudge Ayling acted as chairman of the meeting and in a few eloquent and expressive words complimented the winners of the contest and in the same breath apologized for the defeat of the losers, producing an almost perfect alibi. His argument was so convincing that a small number almost believed him.

After the luncheon a quartette, Eben Learned, Louis A. Wheeler, Joseph C. Worth and William G. Park, rendered three delightful selections with Eben Learned and Mr. Wheeler carrying the solo parts.

Henry J. LaFontaine, the song-bird of Rotary, entertained with one of his delightful solos and responded with an encore.

A real treat was Nelson Warring, a wizard of the keys, who is filling an engagement at the Capitol in New London. Mr. Warring's ability to entertain was not confined simply to the piano for he sang several numbers and also several humorous tales of his travels in vaudeville. Mr. Warring was voted a real entertainer by the club.

At the business session Russell A. Clapp, chairman of the program committee announced that the next meeting would be given over to Joseph N. Weymouth for a report on his trip to the St. Louis Rotary convention. The meeting of the 11th of July will be in charge of the fellowship committee. The song leaders for next month are Bert Adams, Willis Austin, J. Lincoln Crawford and Otto F. Ernst.

The "Rotary Home Brew," a weekly publication of the Norwich Rotary club made its first appearance on Wednesday, and was given a royal welcome. The publication, with its thirst-quenching name does not deal in the least with prohibition, but is devoted strictly to club matters and humorous incidents in the lives of the members. Frank Welch is the editor for the coming month.

STOLE RING AND MONEY FROM TRUSTFUL EMPLOYER

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, June 27.—Watching her first opportunity to commit theft after having been employed but a few hours by Mrs. Craft, wife of R. P. Craft, a naval officer stationed at the submarine base, and residing in the Gilbert apartments on Nathan Hale street, Marie Mattison, alias May Ford, alias May Gerhart, a girl of about 20 years, robbed Mrs. Craft of $10 and a ring containing three diamonds, valued at $300, this afternoon. Mrs. Craft did not discover her loss until some time after the theft was committed and then reported the theft to the police. Sergeant Samuel Hick was assigned to the case and although a good description of the girl was provided, the officer could not locate her for her acquaintances had not seen her since this morning.

The Mattison girl, so far as is known came to New London yesterday and procured lodgings at the house of Mrs. Ida McMoran, No. 11 Brewer street. This morning the girl departed stating that she was to seek employment. Going to the Y. W. C. A., where Mrs. Craft had made application for a domestic, the girl was recommended and accepted by Mrs. Craft, although the latter did not want to hire the girl because of the absence of recommendations from those who had previously employed the girl. However, upon the recommendation of officers of the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Craft consented to give the girl employment, the girl assuming her duties about 10 o'clock. About 2 o'clock Mrs. Craft went to another apartment to play bridge with acquaintances, leaving the girl with Mrs. Craft's little daughter. While Mrs. Craft indulged in cards the girl went to a sleeping chamber and finding a jewel case open, she stole the money and the ring, and immediately made her exit from the house. When Mrs. Craft returned to her apartment about 7 o'clock she discovered her loss and when search for the money and more particularly the ring was unsuccessful, she made known her loss at the police station. At the McMoran house it was stated that the girl had not been there since the forenoon and it was not known whether she would return, but it is natural to presume that she has left the city where she will endeavor to dispose of the ring. Mrs. Craft is extremely anxious to procure possession of the ring, which originally was her mother's engagement ring.

WILL ENLARGE MANUAL TRAINING BUILDING FOR MORE ROOM AT ACADEMY

Plans for increased accommodations for pupils at the Norwich Free Academy, which had at first contemplated raising the wings of the main building, upon which the work has already been started by the contractor.

The addition is to be 81x61 feet two stories and basement, which will practically double the size of the present building. The addition will be of brick and will be erected at the easterly end of the building, extending out towards the baseball field. There will be one large room and two smaller rooms on the upper floor. The two large rooms will be used for the machine shop and the bindery and the other rooms will be class rooms.

With the completion of this addition it will be possible to transfer all the manual training activities to the manual training building, thus releasing for general school use space in the main Academy building which had been used for some of the manual training classes.

One of the large class rooms in the main building is to be made over by dividing it into four rooms. This with the manual training extension, will provide accommodations for 200 more pupils.

It is expected that the work will be done in time for the opening of school in the fall. The plans have been made by architects Cudworth and Thompson.

ATTENDANCE ON INCREASE AT RECREATION INSTITUTE

The members attending the Recreation Institute at the Y. M. C. A. increases each day and the group of young women is entering into the games during the demonstration period with great spirit and interest. The lecture Wednesday completed the discussion started on Tuesday of the Play Periods in the life of the child. Today the subject of the talk is the Philosophy and Technique of Leadership.

In presenting the subject of Play Periods, Miss Ruth Sherburne, who is conducting the institute, explained that in these two lectures she was following closely the material given by Dr. George E. Johnson of Harvard, in his book, Education by Plays and Games. Wednesday's talk dealt with play gression from the age of 7 to 14.

In speaking of the period between the ages of 7 and 9, Dr. Johnson calls attention to the fact that it is a time of lower physical development, she said, a period of regression in the case of many children, and a danger point that is not often considered by parents and teachers. Because of various physical changes that are taking place at this time, the child fatigues easily and is often thought lazy or stupid. The real cause is not mental, but an actual drop in the specific intensity of life. A child of this age has play interests quite different from those of his younger brothers and sisters. He is still individualistic even though he wants to play with a group of children. No longer is his free play merely aimless activity; on the contrary there is purpose and object to what he does. He wants definite games; he does not take pleasure in merely hammering; he wants to make something. It is a time for intense interest in the traditional singing and dramatic games and in the seasonal games such as marbles and tops and kites.

About the age of ten and on until about twelve, there is slow growth of the body and hence there is a lull in the demands upon the system. Energy is being stored up. This is the period of greatest physical activity. Joseph Lee calls this the "Big Injin Age," a name that seems, to anyone who has watched a ten year old Youngster most applicable, and apropos. The boy—or the girl—of this age wants strenuous, active games, and as the social instinct is developing, these games become more and more complex and definitely organized. This same group spirit manifests itself in various clubs and secret societies with mystic rites and well-hidden retreats. Highly exciting dramatic play such as circuses, and wild west shows, and adventures that involve battles royal with bandits and robber barons are part of the repetoire of the youngster of this age. And throughout all the games and sports there is evident great increase in skill and strength, and obvious pride in them.

From the age of 13 on, particularly in boys, there appears a strong social spirit. The games are all highly organized team games, but there are fewer of them than among the younger children. Teams are definitely organized and there is strong interest in clubs and societies. Without direction, this team spirit readily develops into "gang spirit" which accounts for the large number of boys of this age that are called into our juvenile courts. On the other hand, when the community has been wise enough to provide playgrounds or organized mass athletics in school, where wise leaders catch and turn this group loyalty in to the right channels, and where such organizations as the Boy Scouts, Boys' clubs, and Y. M. C. A. are reaching large numbers of boys these adolescent boys, the problems of juvenile delinquency is reduced to the minimum. Aside from games and athletics, boys of this age are intensely interested in outdoor life, in making collections and in carrying on scientific studies.

Girls and boys during early adolescence are mutually antagonistic. Girls have somewhat of the social instinct, but not to such a marked degree as do boys. It has been difficult to build a programme for girls of this age because there have been few if any traditions to follow. Miss Sherburne called attention, however, to the excellent programme that the Girl Scouts and Camp Fire leaders have developed for girls over twelve, programmes that give an opportunity for well-rounded physical, mental and social development.

EIGHT RABID DOGS REPORTED IN JUNE

Up to the present time this month there have been reported eight rabid dogs in Connecticut, the clinical diagnosis being confirmed by laboratory diagnosis at the laboratory of the state health department in New Haven. Previous to June, there have been eleven cases. The distribution of the cases is as follows: Stratford 2 in March. Orange 1 in May. Cromwell 1 in February, 1 in January, 1 in March, 1 in April. East Hartford 1 in March, 1 in April, 1 in June. Ellington 1 in May. Granby 1 in June. Stonington 2 in June. Preston 1 in June. East Windsor 1 in June. Newington 1 in May. Tolland 1 in June. Vernon 1 in June.

The large number of rabid dogs during June compared with the eleven reported for the previous five months of this year makes it evident that there is a distinct outbreak of rabies among animals.

A dog suspected of having rabies should not be killed but should be kept under close observation either by a secure chain or confined in an enclosure, in order that he can be watched. A dog that is suffering from rabies will die in a few days, usually within five days. If a dog lives for a period of twelve days after he is suspected of having rabies, it is probable that he is not suffering from rabies and the person bitten does not need the Pastear treatment.

When the symptoms of a dog make it evident that the dog has rabies or at the death of a clinically rabid dog, the head should be sent to the laboratory of the state department of health for an examination of the brain to confirm the diagnosis of rabies. In killing, the animal's brain should not be injured for the brain is the part that is examined at the laboratory.

HEARD KEITH CO. SUIT AGAINST MOOSE LODGE

The case of the B. F. Keith vaudeville Exchange of New York against New London lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, to collect $735.05 for vaudeville entertainment was tried before Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court in New London Wednesday. The plaintiff claims that on Feb. 7, 1921, it furnished several acts of vaudeville for a frolic at the Lyceum theatre at a contract price of $700 and expenses, amounting to $135.05. Only $100 has been paid and the balance is due.

Frances R. King of New York, in charge of the bureau with which the contract was made, testified that the defendant contracted for the entertainment for $700 and expenses and her testimony was born out by A. Frank Jones, private secretary to Manager Albee.

The defendant, through Secretary William D. Nelson and T. J. McKeon of the committee of arrangements, denied the amount of the contract. Messrs. Nelson and McKeon testified that the agent for defendant was not authorized to exceed $650 including expenses for the entertainment.

After brief arguments, Judge Hinman reserved decision.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

If there is any widespread interest in the special town meeting called for this week to pass upon the proposal that the state highway commissioner be requested to remove a row of trees in Reynolds street, it is not much in evidence. The proposal is an important one, nevertheless, and on that account deserves the attention of the voters, whether they operate cars or not.

Dressmaking; alterations at 90 Mechanic street.—adv.

Norwich will furnish the opposition for the Danielson baseball team in the game scheduled to be held next Sunday afternoon on the Connecticut Mills grounds. For this game the local management will have a strong lineup on the field. Norwich, too, has a fast organization, so the contest promises to be a real classy one.

The people and country hereabout seemed revived Wednesday following the heavy shower of Tuesday afternoon. Men familiar with the condition of crops say, though, that not near enough rain has fallen to supply the need. In many lines of endeavor there was increased activity Wednesday because of the invigorating good of lower temperature and a fine, cool breeze.

Chautauqua continued to attract pleased patrons of the course during Wednesday, the third day of this season's entertainments in Danielson. The concerts and lectures this year are proclaimed by many who have attended as even better than those of last year.

Two public events in Brooklyn of interest to many Danielson people are set for this afternoon and tomorrow evening. The first is the lawn party today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Field, this in aid of the Nurses Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital. The second is the exhibition of pictures tomorrow (Friday) evening by the Brooklyn Library association at the Brooklyn library. These pictures are highly interesting views of soldier life and of devastated sections of France.

Odd Fellows here are interested in the fact that a class of members of Protection lodge of Central Village will go to Putnam this (Thursday) evening to receive the first degree at Odd Fellows hall, the team of Israel Putnam lodge doing the work.

This is to be a summer of torn up street in Danielson. Installation of new pipe lines will be almost continuous during the months of July and August. When the work now underway is completed two important sewer extensions will have been made and present lines of small water pipe replaced by large ones. Other such work is to be done during the coming year.

Next Wednesday—the Fourth—will be generally observed as a holiday in Danielson. All of the mill and other manufacturing concerns will suspend operations for the day, the stores will be closed and the service at the post office curtailed to the extent customary on a holiday. While Danielson will have no formal observance of the day, there will be much in the territory to interest those who want entertainment. As usual, many will spend the holiday out of town.

There is a possibility that one of the smaller schools of the town of Killingly will be closed next fall because of the fact that there are so few children of school age in the territory it serves. This is the Tucker district school located in the far northern section of the town near the Putnam. The proposal under consideration is Tucker district, an old sub-division of that of transporting the pupils of the the town's school system, to Ballouville. This has been discussed from time to time for the past ten years, but never carried out, though there is a chance that it will be this year.

Goodyear people have what should be an interesting spectacle planned for the night before the Fourth. In a community way arrangements have been made for a fine display of pyrotechnics by one of the best known fireworks firms in the country. A Goodyear group of players will furnish music during the evening and ice cream is going to be served. The reworks display is set for Tuesday evening because so many residents of the village will be away over the Fourth.

Whoever picked up Jean Aguir's money bag when he dropped it on a trolley car one day this week while coming from his home in Goodyear to Danielson, by car from Dayville, evidently is going to keep it. The finder would have had no difficulty in locating the owner by informing the car crew of the find, for the loser was practically certain to make inquiry for it. Aguir is certain that some of his fellow passengers got away with his roll, a loss that was most severe to him.

Among other things that have claimed the attention of state police from the Danielson barracks during the present week was investigation of a case in which it was alleged that a Canterbury man had shot at his wife last Sunday, the shot missing.

Who knows where along the more than 150 miles of highway in Killingly he Margaret Henry road is located?

HELP FOR GIRLS WHO WORK

Mrs. Lodic Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Tyrone, Pa.—"A friend told my husband how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped his wife, so my husband bought me a bottle because I was so run-down, had a nervous weakness, no strength in my body and pains in my left side so bad that I could hardly do my work. Before I was married I used to work in the factory, and I had pains just the same then as I have had since I have done my housework. I would not be without a bottle in the house now. It has stopped the pains all right and I have found out that it is a wonderful body builder, as it has made me well and strong. It is going to be the 'old reliable' with me hereafter, and I am always willing to tell other women how it has helped me. You can use this letter as you wish as I can honestly say that my words are true."—Mrs. M. Lodic, R. F. D. No. 4, Box 65, Tyrone, Pa.

Letters like this bring out the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They tell of the relief from such pains and ailments after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

PUTNAM

At a hearing in North Woodstock an alternative sentence of six months in jail or a payment of $15 a week was imposed on Addison Potter when he faced a charge of non-support of his wife and four children. Attorney Archibald Macdonald of this city presided as justice and Judge Frank Foss of Willimantic and Attorney Charles L. Torrey of this city were counsel in the case, Mr. Torrey appearing in the interest of Mrs. Potter.

The hearing in Woodstock was the aftermath of divorce proceedings in the superior court of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Potter's troubles eventually led them into the divorce court and widespread attention was directed to the contested action, which was halted during the midst of the first trial in an effort to bring about a reconciliation through conference. This failed and the case eventually went to trial again, that time before Judge George E. Hinman of Willimantic. In due time his finding denying a divorce was filed with a memoranda of more than passing interest.

Failure to support his wife and children brought about this week's non-support proceedings. It was understood by counsel in the case that Mr. Potter will pay the weekly sum specified by the court.

Captain William J. Jarvis of the police department is formulating a program for the smooth handling of traffic during the Elks' fair in this city during the coming week. The program contains nothing regulatory and is solely intended to avoid congestion of traffic and to eliminate accidents. He said Wednesday that he would be pleased if traffic from the center of the city would make its way to the fair grounds on Park street by way of South Meadow street and through Manhasset village. This will leave other approaches to the grounds through South Main, Park and other streets in the eastern section of the city to other lines of vehicles, including the great number of cars that will come here from out of town. Captain Jarvis has arranged to have special officers in addition to the regulars on duty each night of the fair.

Announcement of Rev. Mr. Harrison's resignation will be formally made at the services next Sunday. He will remain here for some time before departing for his new field of labor.

A suggestion of special interest relative to summer uniforms for members of the police department has come from one of their number. For publication he inquires: "During the hot and sultry weather of the past week the members of the police force, under the regulations, have been obliged to patrol the street in heavy woolen uniforms. Is there any reason why the rule cannot be changed and the police officers allowed to wear khaki in hot weather, the same as members of other uniformed organizations."

Money continues to come in for the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital, though the goal of $20,000 is still far ahead. Included in the contributions of the week is $100, from a collection taken at St. Mary's church last Sunday. Wednesday morning it was stated that the dance given in Union hall Tuesday evening netted $200 more. At this dance Edward Wiltstein's orchestra, an expensive organization to bring to Putnam as an ordinary rule, gave its services without charge, only railroad fare being charged for the appearance here.

Wednesday afternoon more money for the fund was raised by a dance recital given on the lawn at Roseland, the Woodstock home of Judge and Mrs. George C. Holt. Miss Esther Gustafson was the artist. Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Witter in North Woodstock there will be another entertainment in the interest of the fund, while this Thursday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Field in Brooklyn there will be a lawn party that will also be in aid of the fund.

This Thursday evening a class of candidates of Protection lodge of Central Village will be brought here to receive the first degree in the rooms of Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows. The event will bring together a large number of visiting members of the fraternity.

"Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron?"

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old—The Doctor Gave Susie to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine.

Nuxated Iron Will Increase the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Careworn, Haggard-Looking Women in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without plenty of iron in their blood," said a prominent New York physician and medical author recently. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more of the iron for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pale-cheeked hypemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks. They become weak, irritable, and nervous because food for the nerves can only be supplied through the blood and when the blood is thin and anaemic the nerves are improperly nourished. The nervous mother or housekeeper is highly irritable, forgets where she puts things, and often cannot remember what she started to do. At night she often has a "good cry" and excuses it by saying it is a relief for her nerves, when it means a high state of nerve force exhaustion. Often her nervousness and irritability are a strain on her children and may help to wreck their delicate nervous systems."

Medical science and chemistry has proven that NERVE FORCE IS A DISTINCT SUBSTANCE SIMILAR TO YOUR BLOOD. It is the most important fluid in your body. It gives life to your nerves and force to your brain. If you cannot think right, if your memory fails, if you are irritable and easily upset, trifling things annoy you, look into your nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. From the pains across the back one woman thinks she has kidney trouble, another may think her spine is injured because of the tender spots which may occur thereon. The dull, heavy pain in the lower part of the head or the back of the neck leads another to think she is going to have paresis. Sleeplessness and nervous irritability, heart palpitation and indigestion are very common symptoms. When you lack nerve force, there is only one thing that is going to help you, and that is more nerve force. IN SUCH CASES IT IS WORSE THAN FOOLISH TO WASTE YOUR TIME TAKING MERE STIMULATING MEDICINES OR NARCOTIC DRUGS. Your starving nerves must have nerve food or something to supply increased nerve force, the same as a starving man must have bread to make new flesh and muscle. For centuries science searched for a nerve force food. At last a celebrated French physician brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine a remarkable product which contained the principal chemical constituents of active living nerve force, in a form which most closely resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This wonderful product was later combined with organic iron and other valuable ingredients under the name of "Nuxated Iron," so that today true artificial nerve force ready to be transformed into active living nerve force, the moment it enters the body, may now easily be had, simply by taking two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day, with or after your meals. ORGANIC IRON CONTAINED IN NUXATED IRON IS LIKE THE IRON IN YOUR BLOOD, and like the iron in spinach, oatmeal, lentils and apples. It not only quickly enriches the blood, but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds artificial nerve force directly to the nerve and brain cells, but it indirectly increases the production of nerve force through the medium of the blood.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Over 4,000,000 people are using Nuxated Iron annually. If you are weak, nervous or run down, just a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force and made you feel better and stronger in every way, your money will be refunded. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

TROUBLE FOR NEW LONDON POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 21—It seems natural that the people of New London should become disgusted with the failure of their efforts to enforce traffic laws and to say what has become known as "jay walking" that is the crossing of streets in any old way that suits pedestrians. This afternoon two women crossed the east side of Bank street to the west side, but they did not use the crossing at State street and came very near being run down by an automobile. The policeman on duty at Bank and State street requested the women to use the crossing, but his instructions were met with a snub from one of the women who replied to what he said with a twist of her mouth, but fortunately for her the officer did not hear what she said and was acquainted with her words when bystanders gave him the "laugh". That was the boldest defiance of the rules the city has established for the safety of pedestrians that has yet come to notice.

The city has had an ordinance that limits the parking of automobiles on State, Bank and Main streets for some months, but autoists have not seemed to take kindly to the ordinance or else they are heedless of the fact that signs warn all who drive that they must not park on these streets except for a limited time. The police have done the best they could to enforce the city law without making arrests, but the ordinance has become a joke. Now the police have received orders to enforce the law and to make the streets unobstructed for the season in which they are used to almost their capacity. This afternoon the police began the task of cleaning things up and before night there were a lot of offenders warned to be in court to answer their disregard of law on Thursday morning. That is supposed to mean a penalty to all who offended today and it means a warning to those who may possibly offend hereafter.

MISSING CURRAN GIRL ARRESTED IN BOSTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 21.—Alice Curran, the twelve year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Curran of No. 89 Potter street, who ran away from home three weeks ago and accompanied by a sailor stationed at the submarine base, said to be named Byrnes, is under arrest at Boston, where the girl was taken into custody yesterday. The girl will be given a hearing in the city court there Friday and at which time it is believed that she will be turned over to the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield as the girl has violated her parole from the Long Lane home at Hartford, to which institution she was committed in the juvenile court last August and at which time the execution of the commitment was suspended for a year and the girl placed upon probation. Following the disappearance of the girl she was traced to Norwich and in which city she was seen the same day that she left home or the following day in company with Byrnes. The couple, it is believed, boarded a train at Norwich and went to Boston by way of Worcester as the runaway is known to have a sister in that city. The New London police requested the Boston authorities to be on the lookout for the girl and yesterday she was observed on the street and arrested. When arrested the girl stated that she was 18 years of age. She is charged with conduct and associating with evil companions.

The strike of freight handlers at the Boston & Maine freight dock goes on but the company claims it has 70 per cent. of its normal force at work and that the end of school boys it will have a larger percentage of workers now. One of the officials of the company operates in several of the New England cities and said that when the men who struck up their employment they are to be given to organize they will not be taken back. The law will compel them to say whether they want to belong to the union or not, and they will be given to understand that they will be taken back. HARTFORD, CONN.

Wednesday evening, June 20th, in the Congregational chapel, a select and appreciative audience of Colchester music lovers listened to a musical recital of a high order given by Mrs. Rubina Ravi Brooks, assisted by her voice pupil, Miss Clarice Brown, Miss Helen Klingon, violin, Francis Brooks, flute, also by her daughter, Rosa Ravi Brooks, piano. The program is given herewith: Repentance, Gounod, Mrs. Brooks and Miss Klingon; Spring Song, Decker, If I Were a Rose, Heidelberg, Echo, Sommerset, Greeting to the Woods, Reinecke, Clarice Brown and Francis Brooks; Intermezzo, Mascagni, Francis Brooks; Hear Ye, Israel (from Elijah), Mendelssohn, Clarice Brown; Oh the Pretty, Pretty Creature, Old English, Notturnino, Cotogni, Havanera, Bizet, Obstination, Fontenaille, Mrs. Brooks; For All Eternity, Mascheroni, Miss Brown and Miss Klingon; I Love But a Day, Beach, Mrs. Brooks; Oh That We Two Were Maying, Smith, Miss Brown and Mrs. Brooks.

Every number was enthusiastically received and appreciated. Friends of Miss Brown, who have noted her marked progress and improvement, were delighted with her fine handling of her difficult numbers, particularly the high soprano aria from Elijah. Mrs. Brooks has a mezzo-soprano voice of unusual richness and power, has studied music extensively here and abroad in Rome and Florence, Italy, under the best Italian Masters, and sang on the concert stage and as church soloist for several years. Her auditors were accordingly thoroughly appreciative of the broad and varied program, representing well known classic and modern composers. She was equally at home in Italian, French and English song.

One number, Notturnino, a delightful nocturne composed by her former maestro, Signor Cotogni of Rome, was particularly enjoyed. The support of Miss Klingon's finished work on the violin and of the flute contributed to the pleasing character and variety of the recital. Unfortunately the printed programs did not arrive until too late for the musicale, owing to delay in the mails. The expense of the printed invitations was generously assumed by the following patronesses: Mrs. S. P. Willard, Miss Abby G. Willard, Misses Elizabeth and Sarah Bigelow, Misses Elizabeth and Susan Day, Mrs. Joseph Agranovitch and Mrs. Frederick O. Brown.

On Thursday evening the graduation exercises of the local schools took place in Union hall when a class of eleven received their diplomas. The hall was very prettily decorated in the class colors, old blue and silver. The stage was banked with flowers. The exercises were of exceptional merit and reflected much credit upon the teachers, Mrs. John Peckham, principal, Misses Lamb and Gray of the Center school and Miss Margaret Tanner of the Wylie school. The hall was well filled with parents and friends of the children who showed their appreciation of the excellent program by very generous applause. An added feature this year was the excellent music furnished by the following musicians: Piano, Mrs. Henry Kaufmann; violins, Miss Ethel Popple, Miss Malvina Deroslet, John Peckham; cornet, Robert Otis; saxophone, Henry DeRusha; flute, Steven Peckham; drums, Robert Otis, Jr. Following is the program: Selection, Over the Waves, Rosas, orchestra; march, The Merry American March, Wheeler orchestra; song, Voices of the Wood, chorus; essay, The Mesopotamian Valley, Ella Olivia Bromley; essay, The Turkish Empire, Euclie Joseph Russi; essay, Armenia, Emey Philip Lamoine; song, The Gondolier, chorus; essay, The World Court, Bertha Esther Hall; essay, Oil, Aryl Elmer Lybeck; essay, An Up-t-Date School, Doris May Bliven; piano solo, Robert Otis; essay, Cabinet Forms of Government, Verne Elmer Matson; essay, Benito Mussolini and the Fascisti, Floyd Olissime Magrey; essay, Finland, George Erhart Westerlund; song, Indian Lullaby, chorus; essay, Poland, Einer John Westerlund; essay, Alsace Lrraine, Flossie Belle Bebo; selection, Hawaiian Nightingale, Leath, orchestra; closing address, Doris May Bliven; presentation of class, Miss Sarah Thompson Palmer, supervisor; presentation of diplomas, Henry H. Day's total sales, 1,654,100 shares.

Twenty industrials, averaged 88.66, net loss 1.45. High 1923: 105.38; low, 93.66.

SLUMP IN STOCKS CONTINUES.

New York June 27.—Quoted values continued to melt away in today's active stock market under the stimulus of heavy professional short selling and more extensive commission house liquidation of weakened marginal accounts. Both the industrial and railroad averages broke through the low levels of last November.

One hundred stocks established new low records for the year during the day's trading, the largest number for any single day in many months. The list included such stocks as United States, Pacific, Mexican and Gulf States steels, Baldwin, Studebaker, U. S. Rubber, Texas Company, American Woolen, American Tobacco, California Petroleum, Famous Players, International Paper, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Lehigh Valley, Pennsylvania and Norfolk & Western.

Selling of rails, which was regarded as one of the most disturbing features of the day, apparently was based on speculative expectation of increased wage demands by the "Big Four" Brotherhoods. The unusually favorable nature of the May earnings reports now being published, was entirely ignored. The New York Central system showed net earnings last month more than double those of a year ago but the stock broke to 98 1-4. Closing slightly above that figure for a net loss of nearly 2 points on the day.

Rails were heavy from the start but some of the industrials made moderate gains in the first hour on short covering operations. The volume of liquidation in the rails and the absence of fresh buying power elsewhere induced general short selling which resulted in recessions of 1 to 4 points throughout the list. One of the sharpest breaks took place in Dupont, which dropped 9 1-2 points to 107.

In some parts of the list there were substantial recoveries in the last hour but the list, as a whole, did not benefit much from the support offered. Considerable buying on a cash basis was reported during the day.

Moderate buying of French francs and Italian lire, both of which advanced slightly was the feature of the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling yielded 3-8 of a cent to $4.50 5-8 and German marks after selling around .0006 cents rallied to .0007 1-4.

Call money opened at 5 1-2 per cent. and advanced to 6 before the close. The time money market was somewhat firmer with bids put in at 5 per cent. for all maturities but business confined largely to renewals. The ruling rate for prime Commercial Paper continues at 5 per cent.

BOND MARKET.

New York June 27.—Price recessions of unusual size and extending through the entire list were recorded in today's trading in bonds the weakness of the stock market having spread to the investment securities. While the railroad mortgages were hardest hit industrial liens also were offered freely and foreign government bonds also sagged.

Almost the entire list of foreign bonds moved downward one point and Lyons 6s and the Mexican 4s sank more than two points.

More than a score of the railroad mortgages yielded a point or more and in a few instances losses of 2 1-2 to three points were recorded. Tractions slumped along with the rails. Third avenue adjustment 5s dropping 6 points and Interborough Rapid Transit 5s stamped, 2 1-4 points.

Industrial liens were sold freely but extreme losses were not so great as in the case of the rails, and most of these issues closed firm from 1 to 1 1-2 points lower than yesterday's final quotations.

Total sales (par value) were $11,468,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 27.—Influenced largely by weakness of the New York stock market, all future deliveries of wheat fell today to a new low price record for the season. The close was unsettled at 5.8 to 1 1-2 net decline, September 101 3-4 to 101 7-8 and December 104 1-2.

Corn finished 7-8 to 1 1-4@1 3-8 down oats varying from 1-4 to a like advance, and provisions at a setback ranging from 5c to 20c.

Preceding the break in wheat prices the market had shown an upward tendency as a result of rains which it was assumed would interfere with cutting and threshing of winter wheat. The fact that Liverpool quotations were comparatively unresponsive to yesterday's sharp decline was noted also as a check on Brazil shipments. Lower prices of all wheat belt led to considerable selling, and the ensuing downturns in price were given much greater impetus when the market began to feel the effect of shrinkage in the value of securities.

Persistent liquidation on the part of houses with eastern connections forced the wheat market down-grade until the July delivery went under 101 1-4 for the first time since October. At this point signs appeared that a good export business had developed. Besides, country offerings were of only fair volume, and it was said no big after-threshing movement would take place before next week. Rallies at the last also were encouraged to some extent by gossip to the effect that black rust possibilities northwest were in need of careful watching.

Corn and oats showed more resistance to selling than was the case with wheat. The chief sustaining factor was smallness of stocks of corn. Provisions were depressed mostly by lower quotations on hogs.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

The Pig That Ran Away from Home.

"Well, we finished the last story just as the little red ant slipped off the tree and fell to the ground, but she wasn't hurt. Oh, my no! Then the voice spoke again:

"Oh, please come here and stay a while,
I'm lonely for a smile.
Don't go away, but come and play,
Come and play a while,"

"Why are you so lonely?" asked kind Uncle Lucky.

"Because I am away from home!"

"Let's take him with us," said the little bunny boy.

When the little pig had scrambled into the Luckymobile, away they went and by and by, not so very long, they reached Uncle Lucky's house. Right on the front lawn, weeding the flower beds, was the Old Red Rooster.

"Open the barn door," shouted the old gentleman rabbit. "I've got somebody to live there."

You see, Uncle Lucky hadn't used the barn for a long time because he kept the Luckymobile in the garage.

As the Old Red Rooster opened the door, an old owl who lived upstairs in the loft began to toot:

With curly tail and bristly hair,

"Make yourself comfortable," said Uncle Lucky. "I'll go into the house and get you some supper. What would you like to eat?"

"A bowl of milk and ginger snaps," answered the little pig, "and if you have any corn crisps or cracked oats I'd like them, too, for I'm as hungry as a bear."

"Toot! toot!" cried the old owl as the little rabbits hopped into the house.

Pretty soon, not so very long, Uncle Lucky came out with the little pig's supper and after making a nice bed of straw for him to sleep on, he locked the barn door and put the key in his waistcoat pocket.

But, goodness me, I forgot all about the Old Red Rooster. You see, Uncle Lucky had to open the barn door again and let him in.

By and by, the two little rabbits went to bed, after a nice supper, and Mrs. Moon came out and shone down on the old barn and the little white house until Mr. Merry Sun got out of bed in the morning.

A PRETTY GOWN FOR A SLENDER FIGURE

Embroidered crepe, voile or linen would be attractive for this model. It is also good for taffeta, and crepe satin and will develop well in gingham or batiste. The bertha may be omitted.

This pattern is cut in three sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. An 18 year size requires 5 5-8 yards of 40 inch material. The part of the skirt covered by the blouse and flounce may be of lining, of which 1 1-2 yard 27 inches wide is required. The width of the skirt at the foot is two yards.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of ten cents in silver or stamps.

TAFTVILLE

The storm Tuesday evening clogged most of the closed gutters in the village, and caused small, mixed floods on several of the streets. A large quantity of sand, gravel and stones was carried down Merchants avenue and spread all over the road and sidewalk at the base of the hill. It took a force of several men working most of the day Wednesday to open up the gutter again. During the storm, and on Wednesday morning, parts of Norwich avenue were several inches under water, when a drain became clogged with dirt and dead leaves. Repairmen opened it up Wednesday morning, and allowed water to run off. Many telephones were reported out of commission and linemen were working throughout the day about the town. Some wires were crossed, also which added to the troubles of the telephone company.

The Clarks and the Blackbirds will stage the Thursday evening game in the Twilight League on the Providence Street grounds. Gaudette and Eccleston will perform for the Clarks and the Pepin brothers will be the battery for the Blackbirds. As usual Tubbs Military band will render a concert between the innings.

Who Has Burning Sore Feet, Corns or Bunions?

Here Is Wonderful News!—"For many years the callouses on my feet, the burning and corns between my toes nearly drove me crazy," says Mrs. Anna Beckman. "I tried all kinds of things without relief. Hearing about the quick relief and wonderful results obtained by dancers and athletes who used Gypsy Foot Relief, my husband brought home a box. I used it a few times as directed, and to my surprise, the burning and soreness stopped, and the callouses just peeled off in my fingers, leaving the skin smooth. The soft corns between my toes seemed to fade away, and now I feel as if I had a pair of new feet. Before I used Gypsy Foot Relief, my feet were constantly swollen, and now I can easily wear shoes a size smaller, with perfect comfort."

Burning feet and callouses are caused by weak foot muscles which allow the little bones in them to get slightly out of place, causing the tissue to bulge out, making the shoes feel too tight, when friction from the lining of the shoes at these places cause callouses and a feeling as if the feet were burning. Powders, cutting and plasters afford only temporary relief at best, as shown by Mrs. Beckman's report and in legions of other cases. But Gypsy Foot Relief ends the trouble because it penetrates, goes right into the weak, flabby muscles and strengthens them, thus the little bones are pulled back into their proper places by the strengthened muscles, callouses disappear and burning, aching and soreness become a thing of the past. Then again, the ingredients in Gypsy Foot Relief are soothing, cooling, healing, and invigorating, and unlike the old methods, it can be applied in one minute, night or morning, then you walk, work, dance or stay on your feet as long as you please with perfect comfort. It is guaranteed to give successful results in every case, or you get back the little it costs. It is sold in this city by all good druggists.

TEXTILE OPERATIVES OPEN CONVENTION WITH DELEGATES FROM 29 LOCALS

With 29 out of 35 locals represented by 96 delegates the eighth annual convention of the American Federation of Textile Operatives opened a four day convention Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock in Odd Fellow's Hall, President James Tansey of Fall River presiding. The total attendance numbers 106, including 16 fraternal representatives. The first business of the convention was the naming of a credentials committee as follows: William Lomax, Charles Thom, Charles Krob, A. J. Gauthier, Stanislas Breault, Ernest A. Gagnon, Henry P. Pechie, William Hill, Jr.

Mayor Milo R. Waters was introduced by President Tansey and made the address of welcome to the delegates. In his address Mayor Waters spoke of what the organized union means to the civic life of any community, stating that it was bulwark against bolshevism and other forms of disruption. At the close of the address Mayor Waters was presented an honorary delegate's badge.

President's Annual Report

A short recess was then taken while the delegates went to the rear of the postoffice building where their picture was taken by a Newport photographer. Upon returning to the convention hall President Tansey delivered his annual address. During the course of his address he said:

As usual each year in the various states we find many and varied bills being introduced directly interesting to labor. In Massachusetts our principal and most determined efforts were centered in opposition to bills dealing with this question were introduced by those representing manufacturing interests, one of the bills requesting the legislature to enact a 54-hour law, or in other words to repeal the present 48-hour law. All of them in a general way having for their object the increasing of the hours of labor in some form, and thereby destroying the principles and benefits derived from the 48-hour law. Some very interesting and lengthy hearings were held on these bills, the officials of your national organization being present and presenting arguments in opposition to any change being made. Without further comment would say, that the committee hearing same, reported strongly against the petitioners, being apparently of the opinion that such legislation is unwarranted, and that Massachusetts believes there should be no turning back, but always advancing forward towards better and more progressive laws.

We very much regret the defeat of the 48 hour bills in other states in New England, after the splendid and earnest efforts of the representatives of organized labor to bring about their enactment. Recent reports showing the large sums of money spent by the employers to bring about defeat of these bills were before the respective legislatures of the unscrupulous methods and tactics resorted to by the opponents to organized labor and the workers generally, should be a warning to us to ever be on the alert and never even for a moment cease our vigilance in protecting whatever protective laws we have secured for labor's interest.

Putnam Strike

In his effort to bring about an adjustment of the Putnam strike the president in his report said:

After inquiry, I was informed that the president of the corporation was not an active official in this particular mill and had no authority to do anything in the matter, but was informed that the treasurer who had offices in Providence, R. I., was the only official with power to act in such matters. Later I got in touch with the office of the treasurer by telephone, and after some conversation stating the object of my call, a conference was arranged. Whatever thoughts I had of getting a satisfactory settlement was very soon driven from my mind after listening to an oration which began with a statement of the financial condition of the corporation, how fair they had been and desire to be to their employes, and ended with a charge against the operatives of ingratitude; that the latter was fully and wholly responsible for the strike and everything connected with it.

Your president challenged the statement and denied the charges made against the operatives, declaring that they were fully justified in the stand they had taken considering the treatment they received at the hands of the mill officials; that the full responsibility of the strike and all the evils attending it, rested solely and entirely upon the shoulders of the officials of the mill, owing to the autocratic and high-handed policy they had adopted, by ordering out of their office and refusing to meet any committee representing their employes and further by driving the operatives out of the mill without giving them a chance to discuss with them in an intelligent manner any proposition or terms of settlement; and finally requested as a basis of settlement that the full 12 1/2 per cent. advance in wages, withdrawal of injunction and contempt proceedings, stoppage of their cruel evictions, and removal of the sheriffs. No promise or response of encouragement was made to the request and have not heard anything further in the matter up to the present.

The report of the treasurer, William Haswood, was heard and the following were appointed a committee to audit the report: James Simpson, New Bedford; Joseph Lang, Plainfield; John Keefe, Salem, Mass.

Secretary O'Connell's Report

The report of the secretary, John P. O'Connell submitted his annual report which was accepted.

To Local Unions and delegates of the American Federation of Textile Operatives in Convention assembled.

Greetings:—Another year has closed and our organization here gathered together in this the Eight Annual Convention, has every reason to be proud of the progress made in the administration of affairs, the contributions to the cause of trade-unionism, and the general interest and efforts in benalf of the textile workers of this country.

The slogan of this report is "Brevity" because of the immense amount of work and the manifold duties required of the General Secretary, and likewise this slogan can be made invaluable if adopted by the Convention in the consideration and action on the numerous matters which will come before the delegates here assembled.

Strikes

Lawrence, Mass.—At the close of the last Convention we were in the midst of a general textile strike, for the restoration of a 10 per cent. reduction in wages. Lawrence again proved itself to be the battleground where victory turned to the side of the workers. We can point with pride to the vigorous stand taken by the A. F. T. O., in this struggle. President Tansey and myself were the first to visit Lawrence to protest and call upon the [illegible] being the mandate of our organization to resist at every turn, every attempt to cut wages.

Our Loomfixers Union were the ninth town in this struggle, the first to vote to strike, and to notify the manufacturers accordingly, backed by our newly formed Weavers Union, Beamers & Warpers Union and Metheen Industrial Union, our locals were the shock troops during the strike, ably supported by their officers and Organizer Christian, all Lawrence had the profoundest faith in our sterling trade unionism, especially after repeated overtures were made to the Loomfixers for a return to work at the old wages and some extra, but the altruistic spirit to seldom witnessed, gave courage to all Lawrence when the open and public refusal was announced that no agreement on wages could be made unless it included all Lawrence workers in the restoration of the old wages. Hope was then raised in every heart, and our organization in order to secure itself in the stand it gathered together the several contending organizations into open meetings at City Hall, which proved to the employers that these organizations could be united in battle. It was the rank and file which made possible this coming together, a plan whereby a united stand could be taken, on the eve of victory, shortly after this had been accomplished the victorious end came and followed on to other strike districts.

Pawtuxet Valley, R. I.—Aside from our active participation in the Lawrence strike, we as an organization turned our greatest financial efforts to aid the Pawtuxet Valley strikers who allied themselves with the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America, a small and dual organization, which was incapable of providing the necessary funds to carry on successfully, and with vim and energy contributed the greatest amount of funds to the strikers of that district ever given in any textile strike. Had we not come to their aid it is need saying that the strike would have been lost, for the Amalgamated could never have made any progress towards financially supporting these workers.

Now we find the officers of the Amalgamated going around condemning our organization for every thing imaginable, and failing to cooperate with the Federated Textile Unions of America, who likewise contributed money and energy, in greater amounts than heretofore. However we do not feel the rank and file of the Pawtuxet Valley workers can be held responsible for their leaders actions, but we know that they are wondering what manner of labor men is it that going about heaping abuse on his fellow unionist, and already we are quite reliable informed that the rank and file are now talking affiliation with the A. F. T. O.

The reason for sending a greater amount of money to Pawtuxet Valley, was because of the fact that these workers had never had a serious strike situation before and it was felt that could they be ably supported in their first real strike, that if they could be kept fighting the battle would be eventually won by the battlescarred workers of Lawrence, who fight with their spirit and courage. The opinion of your officers, proved correct in this respect.

Moosup, Conn.—A newly formed local union at this town met with some unfair discharges of their fellow workers, which were claimed to be of a discriminating nature, and a hasty strike action ensued to reinstate these workers, their being no grievance as to wages or hours, the strike endured for six weeks when the workers broke ranks and returned to work. Financial aid was rendered and legal counsel supplied to defend these strikers in charge of violating the injunction which had been granted in favor of the Company and every thing possible done under the existing conditions the time was the wrong time for a strike of such nature, though the workers rightfully struck to defend the fellow member, it might have been postponed until the later date when all energy could have been turned upon the Company for its un-American act of discharge of members for official affiliation with a labor union. However the charter has been retained and the workers in Moosup are wiser than before, and high hopes are held for a reorganization of this local and a real fight made upon the Company for the right to organize and bargain collectively.

Salem, Mass.—A strike occurred at Local No. 36, when a non-union man replaced a union brother, the strike lasted but five hours after 600 members of Local No. 36 in the spinning departments quit and supported Local 36, the struggle ended quickly and victoriously.

Putnam, Conn.—Local No. 37 is now in the throes of a merciless fight waged by the Masbasset Company, every inhumane and conceivable method to force these strikers to break ranks has been employed, gunmen, sheriffs, injunctions involving scores of arrests for intimidation and contempt, strikebreakers evictions by the wholesale these strikers are as solid as the day they came out. Determined that this Company shall pay them 12 1-2 per cent. in wages as received by all other textile workers in New England.

Counsel has ably presented our side before the court and every means has been utilized to provide homes and places to eat for these workers and their families. The effort of the Company to produce has been wasted and the elements of victory in each instance has been on the side of the strikers. Organized Christian, assisted by brother William Hill of Wauregan have done excellent work in directing this strike to its present status.

Baltic, Conn.—Two strikes were reported by Executive Officer Gauthier at the Shetucket Mills, Baltic under the jurisdiction of Local No. 35 the first of short duration and the second lasting several weeks, when through the solidarity of this local and the efforts of Brother Gauthier a complete victory was had.

Four new local unions have been chartered since last Convention. Industrial Local at Putnam, Conn., Industrial Woolen Local at Baltic, Conn., Doffers & Spinners at Fall River, Mass., Weavers Local at Lawrence, Mass. Two locals have disbanded: Loomfixers Local at Augusta, Maine; Industrial Local at Moosup, Conn.

Our affiliation with the unions affiliated with this body has been to our welfare in our determination to build the unity so necessary for the advancement of textile workers, and it has been a natural source of strength to all attached. Since the Convention of last August it has exceeded the expectation of its most ardent supporters in its ability to successfully finance strikers and its wholehearted attention is ever directed in the interest of the textile labor movement. It has now started to construct one union of textile workers and before its next convention in October will be able to make a very interesting report on the matter. We are glad of our association and will carry on to ensure its success.

Legislation

Maine—Our locals, after three years of defeat by the legislature, has succeeded in the petition for a referendum vote to the people on the 48 hour law and governor Baxter, a noble friend of labor has set the date for a special election to be held this October.

Connecticut—Executive Officer Gauthier ably presented our organization at the State House hearing for a 48 hour law but the bill met defeat. However many of our unions in this state already enjoy the 48 hours will continue in this state.

The shout the name of the U. T. W. or Amalgamated does not get conditions. Power to be effective in any emergency is the only thing the textile workers need. Let this convention give serious consideration to this matter, as to the best method of bringing about one union for textile workers, as in the interests of our membership.

Finance

Some consideration must be given to this question, as our union has grown the demands on it also has increased, this also means greater expense and with the opportunity before us now it would be failure not to find the ways and means to increase our revenue. For to be able to meet every need and emergency of the coming year will mean success.

Strike Aid Contributions

According to the secretary's report contributions made for strike aid during the past year from 26 locals totalled as follows:

Federated, $3,472.34; Lawrence, $74,703.66; Pawtuxet Valley, $28,752.90; Moosup, $961.05.

The remainder of the afternoon was taken up in the hearing of committee reports. In the evening the convention delegates were guests of the Baltic union at a dance held in Baltic.

It was announced that the business sessions will be held from 9.30 a. m. to 2.30 p. m. during the three remaining days of the convention and that the election of officers will take place Friday morning at 10.30 o'clock.

NOTED PHILADELPHIA RABBI LEAVES REMARKABLE WILL

Extracts from the remarkable "last will and testament" of the Rev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf, rabbi of Temple Keneseth Israel, Philadelphia, who died on June 12, are published in The American Hebrew.

Rev. Dr. Krauskopf was a relative of the Gadden family of this city.

The document, which was written four years ago, begins by saying:

"When in 1879 I decided to enter the Hebrew Union College of Cincinnati to study for the Jewish ministry I knew that I had chosen a life calling which, even if successful, would yield little more than a respectable living. Experience has proved that I had judged aright. Beyond my home, my library and household effects, and the few thousand dollars invested, which sum represents for the most part, matured endowments from life insurance policies, I own nothing.

"I, therefore, have no worldly goods to bequeath to you, my dear children. And I would not have wanted it otherwise. I believe I have done my full duty toward you in having afforded you a good education, and in having set before you the example of a life consecrated to labor and earnest striving after the higher ideals. Even if Providence had chosen to bestow a fortune upon me I would have regarded myself as having been entrusted with it solely as custodian for the benefit o fothers, rather than as a personal possession to be used by me and by my family.

"Too often have I seen a father's fortune become the undoing of his children, and rather than expose you to such a risk I rejoice that I have no fortune to leave to you, my dear children. You have received the necessary education and the home stimulus necessary to enable you to hew out for yourselves a useful career without the aid of an inheritance. With far less advantage to begin life's career than you, have enjoyed, I was obliged to make my way in life from my twelfth year. And I have seemingly been all the stronger for it. The consciousness that whatever fortune you shall have or whatever honorable position you shall occupy is of your making will some day become to you a source of supreme satisfaction. And let whatever encouragement I have given toward attaining that end be one of my legacies to you.

"As to the last rites over my remains; conscious that it will be the wish of my congregation, and the students and faculty of the National Farm School, and of other institutions, as well as of friends and officers with whom I have been associated to pay their last tribute of respect to me, and conscious also that my house will be too small for their accommodation, I consent to the funeral being held from the Temple.

After requesting that no display be connected with the obsequies, that the coffin remain closed, that there be no floral tributes, no eulogy, no speech or other signs of mourning in the Temple during the funeral or after, he will continues.

"I look upon death as the portal to another life. I do not regard it as the end of existence. I believe that the soul passes on to advance upon the work here begun and for which it was created.

"While I have not done all the work I wanted to do, nor performed that which I did as well as I should have liked to have done, still I feel that I have done nothing for which either my family or friends need mourn. If mourners' garb have for its purpose to serve as a reminder of bereavement, I do not think that my dear ones will require such reminders. If it will not be easy to be remembered without outward tokens of mourning, then will I not deserve to be remembered at all.

"It may not be regarded as the least of my work if I shall have inspired my family to set themselves against the mourning practice now in vogue. Men do not mourn nor deck themselves with trappings of sorrow, or shut out the light of their homes and lives, when one of their dear ones is promoted from a lower to a higher station. Such promotions to my mind, comes to the soul at the moment of death, if it have lived worthily.

"Let my obsequies, therefore, be free from any sign of sorrow. Let the festivities consist of a regular service, and no more.

"My fervent wish is that peace and love continue as a family bond. Assist one another. Reflect honor on the family name. Be ye, children and children's children, consecrated to a life of noble effort. Be always loyal Americans and loyal Jews. Take a patriotic interest in all that appertains to the good of your country, State and city, and a hopeful interest in the congregation. Hold fast to education and to faith. Be active in all philanthropic endeavors. See to it that you always give your support and encouragement to the minister, in remembrance of the comfort I derived from such help.

"To Congregation Keneseth Israel my life has been consecrated. I have given it the best service of which I was capable. Having received it from the hands of illustrious predecessors, may my successors prove themselves worthy of them. Formed in the image of progress, and consecrated to high ideals of Judaism, may it continue progressive faithful to its lofty ideals throughout the generations to come."

"Likewise the Farm School. This institution, born of my innermost conviction in the supreme worth of agriculture, the honorable calling of our ancestors, as one of the best means of securing safety and happiness to the sorely afflicted of our people. I fervently trust that all who have aided and supported me in this undertaking will continue to foster the National Farm School, to whose service I have devoted much of my thought, labor and means."

BRITAIN WILL NOT AGREE TO 12 MILE SEARCH FOR LIQUOR

Marquis Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, Stated in the House of Lords, That There Was No Chance, in Any Circumstances Whatever, of Great Britain Agreeing to Proposal Made by the United States Authorities—Lord Birkenhead Recited Vagaries of the Volstead Act—Creating Situations Which No Lawyer Could Foresee—Points Out That Volstead Act Ought Not to Conflict With Sea Usages Which Regulate Commercial Intercourse Between Civilized Nations.

London June 28.—(By The A. P.)—Marquis Curzon, secretary for foreign affairs, made a lengthy and important statement in the house of lords today in reply to Lord Birkenhead, who called attention to the seizure by the United States of liquors on British ships.

The secretary declared that there was no chance of Great Britain agreeing in any circumstances whatever to the proposal that the United States authorities be given the right to search vessels for liquor within the twelve mile limit. The government, he added, was fully alive to the importance of the case, and all channels of diplomacy were being utilized to find an exit from a situation which was undoubtedly disagreeable and ought not to be allowed to continue.

Lord Curzon explained that its was a very difficult and delicate matter raising grave issues in both international law and policy. The British government was not concerned with American prohibition, which was a matter of domestic policy, in which the British government was not interested in expressing an opinion; neither would he discuss the interpretation of the United States supreme court on that country's laws. But it was concerned with the treatment meted out to British ships in United States territorial waters and the decree in which that treatment conformed to or departed from international justice.

It would be premature for him to say, indeed he did not know, what would be the result of their labors.

He would not discuss the legal right of the United States to impose on foreign vessels entering into waters, because on this subject international law was decisive. He next detailed the steps taken by Great Britain, beginning with a note to the United States government from the British ambassador at Washington after Attorney General Daugherty's ruling that the Volstead act applied to foreign ships.

"We pointed out," he continued, "that for any state, even constructively, to project the operation of its strictly domestic municipal law on to foreign vessels on the high seas—which was the practical effect of the American ruling—would be unprecedented and, if adopted by other states, would subject all shipping other than coastwise to the evils flowing from a conflict of authority. The United States government acknowledged receipt of this, but did not enter into a discussion of its arguments."

Great Britain's legal position, according to its legal authorities, Lord Curzon said, is as follows: "There are two recognized principles of international law, which prevent us from contending that the United States committed a violation of international law in forbidding foreign vessels to bring liquor within its waters. The first is that foreigners trading with a country must comply with its laws; the second is that every sovereign independent state is supreme over all persons and properties within its dominions, including ships in its territorial waters."

LORD BIRKENHEAD CITES VAGARIES OF VOLSTEAD ACT

London, June 28.—(By The A. P.)—Lord Birkenhead, in the house of lords today, calling attention to the seizure by the United States of liquor on British vessels at New York, asked what was th government's policy relative to the difficulties with which British shipping is confronted.

Lord Birkenhead said: "An eminent authority (evidently meaning Mr. Lloyd George) has exhorted us to keep cool and let America take the great experiment in her own way without interference. I do not know that any of us has shown an inclination to examine the matter in any spirit but complete calmness, and it is generally recognized that no friendly and reasonable representation to the United States could fail to receive a friendly and reasonable reception. Nobody in this country has the slightest intention or desire to make any criticism at all of the United States' domestic policy."

He passed to the legal aspect of the seizures, and expressed doubt as to whether a single competent lawyer in the United States had ever suspected that the Volstead act would lead to consequences such as has been brought about by the decision of the United States supreme court. A considerable school of international lawyers, he contended, held that the British merchant ship carries its nationality with it. That is the case in the United States and this country.

British shippers, continued Lord Birkenhead, had been advised to make a test case in the United States courts but he failed to see the use of this, as it was extremely unlikely that the decision of the supreme court would be reversed.

"Without one word of friendly discussion with the United States, are we to tell British shipowners that we cannot help them," asked Birkenhead, "and that they must hereafter only take liquor as far as the port of destination, and return without liquor?"

He argued that it would be both unfortunate and unnecessary for the British government to pass over a policy of this kind in silence. No nation in the world had a higher conception of common sense and reasonableness than the United States, and it was inconceivable that tactful and courteous representatives would be received by it with anything but the greatest respect and friendliness. He hoped British diplomacy would ask the United States in the exercise of that discretion which a majority of the judges of the supreme court of the United States had pointed out, if it was assured, to infuse some mitigation into this system, which, while maintaining unimpaired the policy of the United States, would at the same time relieve British shipping of a serious and unnecessary burden.

Lord Birkenhead cited the pronouncement by the American government at the time of a diplomatic discussion with Spain preceding a very difficult period—"We do not question the right of every nation to prescribe conditions under which the vessels of other nations may be admitted to its ports, but nevertheless we point out that these conditions ought not to conflict with sea usages which regulate commercial intercourse between civilized nations."

FRENCH SHIPS BRINGING LARGE STOKS OF LIQUORS

New York, June 28.—A few hours after customs officials had broken the Freich government seals on the liner Sufferen and removed 2,227 litres of wines and liquors, the liner Rochambeau arrived in port today from Havre with one of the biggest supplies of wet goods to come in since the treasury department ruling prohibiting the transportation of liquor over the three mile limit.

The Rochambeau carried 172 bottles of cognac, 425 bottles of champagne, 275 bottles of fine wines, 3,680 bottles of table wines, 2,693 of crew wine, 102 bottles el liqueres, 516 of rum and brandy, and 50 barrels of beer.

The Canopic also arrived today, with a varied supply, under British seals, of approximately 75 gallons of liquors.

So far five vessels have had their seals broken and their supplies taken, while ten others are awaiting action.

French line officials said they had received no word of any court action to be taken, and that if a test case were made, it would be undertaken by government officials.

HOW WASHINGTON VIEWS REJECTION OF 12-MILE LIMIT

Washington, June 28 (By the A. P.).—Foreign Secretary Curzon's flat rejection of the 12-mile limit proposal apparently has countered effectually the effort of the state department to clear away at one stroke the ship liquor controversy and the rum smuggling problem along the Atlantic coast.

What will be the next move related to this particular feature of the much-complicated prohobition question has not been revealed, but the immediate result of the foreign secretary's announcement here was to revive speculation as to possible action at the next session of congress to so revise the law as to render it less offensive to foreign governments.

The positive language used by Marquis Curzon caused considerable surprise, since there had been no previous indication through official channels that any of the European powers was ready to make known its attitude toward the proposal of Secretary Hughes. Under this plan a reciprocal treaty would be made permitting the bringing of sealed liquor into American territorial waters on condition that the right to search suspected smuggling craft was extended to twelve miles from shore.

Ships under the British flag have been in the large majority among those engaged in the smuggling operations. Even should other maritime powers take a different view and agree to the plan proposed by Mr. Hughes, it appears that the British refusal would go far toward preventing the curbing of the smuggling traffic which it had been hoped would result from the negotiations.

RESOLUTIONS DRAFTED FOR VOLSTEAD ACT SEIZURES

Washington, June 28.—Acting Secretary Gilbert of the treasury said late today that a draft of proposed regulations to carry out seizure provisions of the Voistead act had been prepared and was in possession of prohibition officials. He added that formal approval had not been given to the draft, and that he hoped the situation would not develop where formal approval would be necessary.

Mr. Gilbert explained that it had been the treasury view that seizure of ships bringing beverage liquor into American waters would be a drastic step and that such a policy would not be adopted without due notice to the foreign governments. He reiterated, however, that the treasury would deal vigorously with any situation arising from a continued importation in violation of the law.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES IN NEAR EAST CONFERENCE

Lausanne, June 28 (By the A. P.).—England, France and Italy are still short of an agreement in regard to the form of the last word to be given the Turks in an effort to settle the deadlock in the Near East peace conference. According to information in allied circles, the allies have decided to despatch a collective note or make a common statement to the Turks setting forth their final views on the problems of the Ottoman debt and the evacuation of Constantinople and Gallipoli, but thus far have been unable to agree in regard to the text.

The allied plenipotentiaries today compared the latest instructions received from their respective governments, only to find dissimilarities of a nature necessitating further communication with London, Paris and Rome, and several days are expected to elapse before a full accord can be reached.

St. Johns, N. F., June 28.—The steamer Seal, on her way to the Labrador fisheries with 200 men on board, sent word today by radio that she is imprisoned in the ice floes and helpless. The vessel has had all four propellor blades broken. The steamer Ranger, also on the way to Labrador, was ordered to go to the Seal's assistance.

Eleven Telephone Pickets Arrested

Boston, June 28.—Eleven arrests of pickets before the main offices of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company marked the close of the third day of the strike of telephone operators in Greater Boston. The arrests were made when about 200 pickets went on duty as the 4 o'clock shift was to be made. A curious crowd swelled the gathering until traffic was stopped, while the pickets hurled taunts at the girls doing go work, among them a number of negresses, and the arrests were made while police were attempting to disperse the crowd.

Telephone service here today and tonight apparently had suffered little from the strike, which was called by the telephone operators' department of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in an attempt to enforce a seven-hour day and a wage increase. The work was being carried on largely by members of Local L-A, whose charter as a union in the brotherhood was revoked recently and whose members did not vote on the strike and have refused to participate in it.

The girls arrested today were hailed out a short time later by Julia S. O'Connor, president of the department, and Teresa Sullivan, secretary of the Boston local of the department. Miss O'Connor's home was put up as security for the release of the girls.

Ten girls were arrested and an eleventh, who was 16 years old, was booked as a juvenile. The charge was inciting to riot.

Today Local 142, inside electrical workers, affiliated like the striking union with the American Federation of Labor, held a secret meeting. Before the meeting the local president, Davis S. Morseland, announced that a new wage scale had been presented to the telephone company and that his union, too, would strike if the company refused these demands. It was reported that linesmen were contemplating similar action.

WERE TOLD LIQUOR WAS FOR POLICE INSPECTORS

New York, June 28.—City Detective William Morrison testified today before Judge Crain in the investigation into alleged police bootlegging activities that he and his partner, Detective Lambert, made no arrests after finding liquor in a garage because they were told it was consigned to Police Inspectors Thor and O'Brien and Captain O'Connor.

Morrison said he and Lambert saw an automobile approaching the garage with about five cases of liquor in it, and when they stopped it were shown a permit which appeared "phony" to them. The driver, he said, declared the liquor was for Inspector Thor.

Later, he said, he was told to call up police headquarters, and when he did so a voice he failed to recognize said:

Magistrate Corrigan, who will Assemblyman Cuvillier is defendant in a criminal libel action brought by Commissioner Enright in connection with charges of police bootlegging, grinned broadly at the sudden turn in the testimony.

Earlier in the day Commissioner Enright took the stand to press his criminal libel charges against Corrigan and Cuvillier. He gave a detailed statement of the private business he was in when the state prohibition law was passed, and in April, 1923, when the charges are alleged to have been made. The statement showed that the commissioner had less money in the bank, and invested, at the present time, than he did before the Mullan-Gage law was passed.

QUESTIONS THE FITNESS OF THE ANGLICAN EPISCOPATE

New York, June 28.—Questioning the fitness of the Anglican episcopate to survive in an age of democracy, the Rev. Dr. Newman Smyth, Congregationalist clergyman of New Haven, Conn., has written a letter to Bishop Brewster, Episcopal bishop of Connecticut, asking for an explanation of the failure of the Congregational Episcopal concordat.

The letter, published in Saturday's issue of the Churchman, a liberal organ of the Episcopal church, declared that the house of deputies of the Episcopal church had silently and skillfully smothered the concordats under a heap of ecclesiastical and legal objections.

As a forward step in inter-church unity, the Episcopal general convention fifteen years ago proposed bringing the various Christian faiths together as a common ground and under the provision of the concordat. Congregational ministers could be ordained by Anglican bishops. When the proposal came up at the 1922 general convention after having been considered by a special committee, it was voted down by the house of deputies.

Dr. Smyth informed Bishop Brewster he needed the information to prepare a report to the general conference of state Congregational churches, asserting that whatever the cause, the junking of the concordat had dragged down a great onward Christian movement into a tangle of legal difficulties.

CHARGED WITH FRAUDULENT USE OF THE MAILS

Boston, June 28.—Albert E. Frankel, alias Joseph E. Martin, was indicted today by the federal grand jury on the charge of fraudulent use of the mails, in offering 75 pounds of sugar free with special grocery orders. He was recently taken from the Cambridge jail by federal officers to Omaha, Neb., to face similar charges based on a like scheme there.

The grand jury also indicted ten persons charged with violations of the narcotic laws, of whom one was S. Freeman of Springfield, charged with selling narcotics.

Indictments were found against Joseph Blome, Joseph Kovalsky, Frank Kovalsky and Bruno Pophasky, all of New Britain, Conn., charged with transporting a stolen automobile.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED IN BEDS IN NEW BEDFORD

New Bedford, Mass., June 28.—Manuel Almeida, 5, and Amanda Almeida, 4 months, were burned in their beds at an early morning fire here today. They were trapped in their room, from which their mother had fled in hysterics after being awakened by flames. By the time a cousin of the mother, whom she aroused to ring the alarm, realized the children were in the burning house, the fire was so intense as to prevent him entering the room. The mother, Mrs. Ernestine Almeida, is recovering from shock at St. Luke's hospital. The fire is believed to have been caused by the ignition of curtains from a burning oil lamp.

To Help Clean Out Irregular Brokers

New York, June 28.—Laurance Tweedy, who recently succeeded William S. Silkworth as president of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, today visited the office of Attorney General Sherman and pledged his whole-hearted support in the attorney general's campaign to clean all bucketshops and irregular brokers out of Wall street.

Mr. Tweedy took office on a "house-cleaning" platform after President Silkworth resigned under fire because of his alleged connection with consolidated brokerage houses which recently have failed.

Mr. Tweedy, accompanied by Thomas F. Maloney, chairman of the exchange's law committee and a member of the ways and means committee, suggested that, in order to avoid the immunity clause in the Martin act, exempting brokers examined by the authorities from prosecution, officials of the exchange conduct investigations of houses under suspicion and turn the evidence over to the attorney general. They said they would use every effort to induce the exchange to authorize such a course.

Pointing out that evidence obtained by the attorney general in investigations of suspected brokerage houses, could not be used by district attorneys in prosecuting law violations, Mr. Tweedy suggested the investigations be left entirely in the hands of the exchange.

The complaints would be made secretly by the attorney general to exchange officials designated by the board of governors. These officials would then place exchange accountants on the books of suspected firms and conduct a thorough inquiry. Should evidence of bucketing or other illegal acts be found, Mr. Tweedy said, it would be turned over to the attorney general who could proceed under the Martin act and obtain injunctions.

DIVERTED CUSTOMERS' MONEY TO HIS PERSONAL ACCOUNT

New York, June 28.—J. Alexander Dingwall, Jr., of Scarsdale, N. Y., who is being sued by Brooklyn investors in his oil enterprises for an accounting of nearly 1,000,000 kept two records of his operations in the Oklahoma fields which enabled him to divert to his personal account large sums accruing from investment of his client's money, according to testimony given before Supreme Court Justice Lewis in Brooklyn today, by George Howard Leigh, a former partner of the promoter.

Dingwall was jailed recently on allegations that he was about to leave the city and was confined until he posted $25,000. He also was enjoined from disposal of any of his assets pending the trial of the case.

Leigh testified he had been persuaded to become Dingwall's "associate principal" when the latter offered him 10 per cent. of all profits and a drawing account of $1,000 a month.

His suspicions were not aroused, he said, until he went to Oklahoma and found Dingwall's books in such shape that his "New England conscience" began to bother him. The books, he testified were six weeks behind.

The trio with J. Stanley Healy of Willimantic and Julian Modean of South Manchester and Theodore Hilton of West Hartford were spending the day at a cottage near the lake. Foley was swimming about 100 feet from shore in about 12 or 15 feet of water, when he called help. Healy, Susbeck and Lovett went to his assistance. When half way from shore Foley sank. Lovett and Susbeck showed signs of weakening and Lovett after twice was pulled ashore and revived. Foley's body was recovered. Foley was a widower and is survived by a seven year old son. He received a deep gash on his forehead.

Medical Examiner Dr. W. L. Higgins was notified and after viewing the body he pronounced death due to accidental drowning.

WITNESS IN WARD CASE MAKES SUICIDAL PRETENSE

New York, June 28.—William Mundin, held as a witness in the case of Walter S. Ward, confessed slayer of Clarence Peters in White Plains, today succeeded in being transferred from his close quarters in jail to a roomy ward in Bellevue hospital by making the simple statement that he had swallowed a handful of pins.

Mundin was drinking some coffee in his cell when an attendant walked by.

"I've done it now," he said. "I've swallowed the pins."

He was immediately rushed to Bellevue, where it was found that he was in perfect health. He smiled broadly as an orderly tucked him into bed to await a more positive examination by means of the X-ray.

Mundin, who is said to have been a friend of Clarence Peters, is to appear before the extraordinary grand jury investigating the case, and will then be taken to Elmira reformatory for violation of parole.

WOULD SHORTEN ROAD FROM THE PRODUCER TO CONSUMER

President Harding Proposes a Plan of Cooperation Among Consumers Conducted on the Principles of the Savings Bank or Building and Loan Society—Declares That One of the Greatest Problems Confronting All Countries and All Societies is the Exorbitant Cost of Living—Would Correct Our Elaborate and Costly System of Distribution—Real Producer Does Not Get Fair Share of Profits.

Idaho Falls, Idaho, June 28.—(By the A. P.)—Declaring that the need of the present is to shorten the bridge between producer and consumer, President Harding in an address here today proposed a plan of cooperation among consumers financed in part at least through a carefully organized and supervised adaptation of principles of the savings bank or the building and loan society.

"I believe the suggestion is worthy of careful examination and consideration" the president asserted. "I am convinced that its discussion will be fruitful of good results and a reminder to some who are disposed to take unreasonable tolls from both the consuming and the producing public, that this public has the right, the power and the ability to devise means to protect itself."

The president further said that as a result of studies and investigations he hoped to be able "to recommend for the consideration of the congress measures which shall represent a beginning along this line."

"One of the most engrossing problems of our time confronting all countries and all societies, is the exorbitant cost of living," the president said.

Complex System of Distribution.

"We realize that the real producer, under our elaborate and costly system of distribution, is not permitted a fair share of his product for his own use and enjoyment. We have become convinced that somehow our system of distribution has grown too cumbersome, too costly and too complex, too indirect, too unrelated to the interests of real producers and legitimate consumer. We must find methods to take up as much as possible of the slack in the long line between producer and consumer; to give the producer a better return for his labor; to furnishes to the community, and to enable the consumer to meet his requirements at reasonable cost.

"To this end many experiments have been made in cooperative production, transportation, distribution and purchasing. To a great extent these experiments have proceeded from the enterprise and initiative of the workaday people, to whom these problems have presented themselves with especial insistence. But for the spirit of cooperation, the willingness to be mutually helpful, the determination to give first place to the interests of the community, you could not have made your west what it is. Working cooperations on a great scale practical in operation and adequate to cope with our problems can never be possible except where there is this spirit, determination and purpose it is because the west has led so far in devising such workable programs that I have thought to say a few words along this line today.

To Cheapen Services For the Public.

"Developments of the last generation have brought the instrumentalities of transportation, of finance, of corporate organization, and operation into a closer harmony with the true public interest, than ever before. The government has sought to make itself helpful, to point the way, to remove ancient barriers of custom or tradition, and to curb the excessive demands of privilege, in order to cheapen for the great public many of the services which formerly were dominated by the private interests and operated with too exclusive a consideration for private profit. Anything tending to break down personal initiative, to destroy enterprise and ambition, must not enter into any program which can hope for the approval of the American people. Ours is an individualistic society and we want it to remain so. We want this republic to remain always the land of opportunity wherein every man's abilities and usefulness shall measure his personal advancement and prosperity. The kind of a program to encourage cooperation and coordination which I have in mind, would not interfere with the freedom of proper opportunity; rather, it would enhance the individual chance to better his individual fortune."

To Improve Position of Producers.

"The need of this time is to shorten the bridge between producer and consumer and to reduce the toll that must be paid for passing over it. We all know a good deal about the various cooperative societies, associations and corporations which have undertaken, in many cases with notable success, to improve the position of the agricultural producers. Such organizations have been successful in all parts of this country and in many parts of the old world. They have already done a great work and taught us many valuable lessons. Where there are obstacles, imposed by unfortunate statutes or public policies, or in the way of expanding such activities as these, they might well be gradually removed through measures of helpfulness and encouragement.

"On the whole, I think the agricultural community has been more alive to the promotion of its interests among these lines than has the urban community. The farmers have seen where their interest lay, and have been more prompt and energetic in adopting effective measures to promote them, than the people of the city, and down have been. There is need to have working and practical cooperative associations of producers in the country, and at the same time to have equally effective cooperations among the consuming communities of the cities and towns; and, finally, to link these two sets of cooperators together in a coordinatoin for mutual advantage to both. I believe it is possible, and altogether feasible, that systems of credit and finance should be developed, under public auspices, to encourage both these kinds of cooperation; and to draw them together into a harmonious working scheme of widespread distribution at the lowest possible expense.

"We have in recent years given much attention to developing a system of agricultural finance, particularly adapted to the needs of American [illegible] Some critics have indeed protested that it were class legislation. Perhaps it were; but as I suggested in discussing the problems of agriculture in Kansas the other day, it was in the interest of a vitally important section of the community which has heretofore had altogether too little consideration. Not only have I no apology for what has been done in the interest of the agricultural community; not only do I regard it as one of the monumental achievements of the lay generation in developing our country's institutions. But I venture that we might with profit to the whole people consider the possibility of effecting an analogous organization to promote and encourage thorough measures of credit and finance, a proper organization of the consuming community in both cities and country. I have not attempted to work out even an outline much in the details of such a system; but I believe it possible, feasible and certain to command the sympathy of men and women who have the true interest of the country at heart. I hope to be able, as a result of the studies and investigations, to recommend for the consideration of the congress measures which shall represent a beginning along this line. It s a big and pregnant subject to which nothing man or woman can deny the fullest and most careful consideration. My thought is that government should give the largest encouragement, consistent with sound economics and proper government functions, to every effort of the people to help themselves in dealing with the high cost of living and the relationship of income to our household budgets."

One of the largest, if not the largest of audiences that have heard the president give an observation platform address listened to the chief executive here.

M'ADOO SECRETARY ON STAND IN MORSE CASE

Washington, June 28.—The Morse trial was continued today by the testimony of William G. Martin, private secretary to William G. McAdoo at the time Mr. McAdoo was secretary of the treasury, regarding a conversation which he said he had with Erwin A. Morse, one of the defendants, at the court house recently.

Mr. Martin, who was treasurer of the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation, a Morse concern, during part of 1919, testified that when he had suggested to Erwin A. Morse that he return some papers which were in the custody of the district attorney's office and which Martin had loaned him, Morse replied that it would be "better to lose them."

On cross-examination by defense counsel, Martin explained that his conversation with Morse had been a jocular vein and that he considered the matter a "joke." Justice Stafford observed that it was for the jury to decide whether it was a joke.

The papers, the witness said, were a copy or a transcript of stenographic notes made during an investigation by government agent at the Virginia plant in 1919. He added that he did not know whether they had been returned by Morse, but presumed that they had.

Other testimony today at the trial related to the advancing of $100,000 to the Virginia company by the emergency fleet corporation in 1919 to keep it out of the hands of a receiver. This testimony was given by Adolph Amade, a shipping board stenographer, who read his short hand notes of a conference between officials of the fleet corporation and the Virginia company, which led up to the advance. The transcript showed that there was one clash after another between auditors of the fleet corporation and the Virginia company representatives as to the amount of money the Morses had put into their plant.

The Virginia company was seeking a loan of $65,000 and it received $100,000 pending an investigation of the conflicting claims by its representatives and those of the fleet corporation. Attorney Stuart G. Gibboney, counsel for the Virginia company declared the company was absolutely solvent." Auditors for the fleet corporation charged that the Morse claims were "distorted," while Charles W. Morse insisted that the claims of the fleet corporation auditors were colored."

MONUMENT UNVEILED TO LATE POPE PIUS X

Rome, June 28 (By the A. P.).—The monument to the late Pope Pius X, in the Basilica of St. Peter's, was unveiled today by Pope Pius in the presence of an immense crowd which filled the great cathedral. The ceremony was carried out with traditional solemnity in the presence of the members of the sacred college and the entire military guard of the Vatican in full dress uniform.

Cardinal Merry Del Val delivered the dedicatory address eulogizing the late pontiff, recalling his services to the church, his philanthropy and his simple, saintly life.

The monument, placed in the left aisle of the basilica, shows his holiness in an attitude of invocation with arms upstretched. At the base there is a depiction in bas-relief of the events for which his reign was noted, such as his condemnation of modernism, his promotion of Gregorian music and his work in the earthquake of 1908.

MASONIC VETERANS MEET IN WILLIMANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, June 28.—The Masonic hall in this city, Thursday, was the scene of the fifty-fourth annual reunion of the Masonic Veterans' Association of Connecticut. At 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon a business session was held and was attended by about two hundred members of the association, with many more arrivals in time for the dinner which followed at the Grand Army hall in the town building. The ladies of Radiant chapter, No. 51, O. E. S., served.

In the absence of Venerable Master John O. Rowland, who is at Green Grove Springs, Florida, Assistant Venerable Master Andrew J. Hallock, superintendent of the Masonic Home at Wallingford, acted as the presiding officer. Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead, pastor of the local Methodist church, pronounced the invocation.

As the roll call of the vice presidents was read they took seats to the right and left of Assistant Venerable Master Hallock and those who responded were: Benjamin Jones, Willimantic; Edward Carpenter, Danielson; H. Wales Lines, Meriden; Nathan A. Tuttle, Terrington and J. Knox Hall, East Hartford.

When called upon for remarks, Grand Master Arthur M. Brown of Jewett City of the Connecticut State Lodge of Masons, arose and delivered a most inspiring address on the principles of Masonry and all that the word stands for. Grand Master Brown stated that he lacked two years of being eligible to become a member of the Veterans' association and he looked forward with eagerness to the day when he could join.

Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead delivered the address of welcome and received an address of acknowledgment from Chairman Hallock. The officers of the association then read their reports which showed that the association was prospering in membership and finances. According to the necrology report, there were about fifty deaths in the association during the past year.

The chair then appointed the following nominating committee: Walter B. Boynton, Branford; Edward A. Avery, Windham and Henry H. Goddard, Simsbury. The committee retired for some time and upon their return they presented the following candidates for office and all were unanimously elected: Venerable Master, Andrew J. Hallock, Wallingford; assistant venerable master, William A. Lewis, Bridgeport; secretary and registrar, William E. Hall, Meriden; chaplain, Rev. Worthy P. Maylott, Derby; marshal, T. Edwin Hawley, Hartford; sentinel, Nathan A. Tuttle, Terrington; auditors, Henry A. W. Pregemann, Meriden; William N. Barber, Meriden.

Following the business session a number of brief addresses were made by several visiting veterans. When the vote was taken, it was decided to hold the next annual reunion at Stamford on the fourth Thursday in June, 1924, under the auspice of the Masonic lodges of that city.

Included in the names read from the necrology list were those of James Harries and Henry W. King of Eastern Star lodge of this city, who died during the past year. The session was adjourned at 12.30 o'clock.

Mrs. Mary E. Lovett, president of the state assembly of the Daughters of Rebekah was recently tendegi a delightful reception by Violet Rebekah lodge, No. 57, in Odd Fellows' hall. Over one hundred and twenty-five members and guests were present. A delegation of members of Obwebetuck lodge, No. 16, was present and Mayor Charles A. Gates participated in the festivities in his official capacity as mayor of the city. Mrs. Lovett received a beautiful traveling case with a gold piece, bearing a suitable inscription from Obwebetuck lodge and Violet Rebekah lodge presented her a basket of snapdragon flowers.

The presentations were made with remarks by Noble Grand Hattie Cohen, and Noble Grand John J. Hersant. Mrs. Lovett, who was installed his years, now has sixty-two lodges in the state under her supervision. She received the office of presidency in remembrance of the fact that she had been a tireless worker on behalf of the Daughters of Rebekah. The brilliant reception tendered her was a fitting tribute to Mrs. Lovett for the distinction that has come to both lodges by her election as head of the state as-

Decorations of ferns and cut flowers beautified the hall and the colors of both lodges, pink and green of Violet Rebekah lodge, and red and white of Obwebetuck lodge were also in evidence about the room.

During the course of the banquet, remarks were made by Mayor Charles A. Gates, Past Grand and Secretary Walter Thompson, Past Grand L. C. Clifford of Manchester, Past Grand Charles E. Lovett, Charles H. Beebe, deputy grand patriarch of Windham Encampment; Noble Grand Mrs. Hattie Cohen and Vice Grand Mrs. Margaret B. Sears, the last two of Violet Rebekah lodge and Marshal of the Assembly Mrs. Minnie E. Mathieu.

Dancing was enjoyed after an excellent programme had been carried out. The features were a solo, by Eugene Clark, readings by Mrs. Charles H. Beebe, solo by Miss Florence Goutu and an original act by Leroy Howlett.

The committee of arrangements included: Mrs. Minnie Mathieu, Miss Sadie E. Curley and Mrs. Margaret B. Sears, Mrs. Mabel Brooks and Mrs. C. H. Beebe, Mrs. Lillian Hersant was in charge of the decorations.

The Entre Nous club of which Mrs. Daniel French is leader, was entertained by Mrs. William Lutton of Park street in the afternoon. Mrs. Lutton served a dainty luncheon. Fourteen members were present and Mrs. William Johnstone and Mrs. Robert Mitchell and daughter, Harriet, were guests of the club.

A freight train of the Central Vermont Railway was wrecked at 7.30 o'clock Thursday morning at Jones' Crossing, northwest of Merrow, when twelve of the cars left the rails and the road bed was torn up for a considerable distance. It was said Thursday that the wreck was caused when the tender of the engine jumped the tracks when it struck a defective joint at the crossing. The twelve cars were derailed and seven of the number piled up in a heap. None of the train crew were injured.

As the result of the wreck, north and southbound traffic over the road was tied up. It was reported that the front wheels of the engine remained on the rails. The wrecking crew from East Hartford worked all day Thursday and practically all night in clearing up the wreckage. The work will be resumed this (Friday).

The Salvation Army Building drive in Willimantic is meeting with a great deal of success and when the reports of the first day's work were handed in at the campaign headquarters it was found that a total of $771.15 had been raised on the initial day. The campaign is now in full swing and the solicitors are sparing no effort in order that the hopes of the Home Service Appeal committee may be fully realized. The goal is set up at $7,000 and every contribution, regardless of the amount, is a new rung added to the ladder of success. The Salvation Army are depending solely on the generosity of the public to raise appropriate funds for a home and citadel in this city and the largest sum given can only in a measure repay the organization for what it did for our boys "over there" and is doing at all times to save the morally and physically stricken of our cities.

The new citadel on Walnut street is already under course of construction and will soon be closed as a credit to this community and add much to the beauty of the locality.

The campaigners are conducting a fruitful canvass of the homes and manufacturing plants about the city and the headquarters at the Chamber of Commerce rooms will be kept open all day for the receipt of contributions. Checks or money may be handed or mailed to Herbert W. Huber at the Willimantic Trust Company who is treasurer of the fund.

The local Baptist church is to be altered and improved in the near future according to votes taken by the improvement committee of the church. The committee includes, Fred Rossbrooks, chairman, Albert Fryer, Byron Hawkins, Mrs. Carrie Hall and the Misses Clarrie Stiles and Ada Bowen. The lower floor will be made over into eight class rooms. Some three years ago when a campaign was taken among the Baptist churches of the country to raise funds for church and building improvements an allotment was made for the local church property, of which Rev. A. D. Carpenter was pastor at that time. The plans have been prepared by the board of the Home Missionary society in New York and when the change is made in the lower floor, every organization of the church will have its own quarters for meetings. There will still remain a good sized vestry for social gatherings. It is also expected to lower the vestibule of the church to the street level. The church services will of necessity be suspended during the months of July and August according to an announcement made Thursday. During that time the local Baptists will unite with the Methodists in Sunday services.

WEAK-LEGGED FOWLS NEED NOT BE KILLED

No matter from what cause, if poultry of any kind are unable to stand on their feet the ailment is called leg weakness. This leg weakness is not rheumatism, although it may be a sign of rheumatism. It is not paralysis, although it may be a symptom of paralysis. Neither is it intestinal disease nor due to any trouble, although it may be a manifestation of either of these disturbances.

If the fowls are valuable, do not be in a hurry to kill them if they seem to be suffering from leg weakness. They will often recover if properly treated. This trouble is probably more frequently noticed in the heavier breeds than in the lighter ones, but is by no means confined to any one breed. Therefore it is not advisable to discard the breed you may handle on the assumption that you can secure another breed that will not be similarly affected.

If young chicks are affected with leg weakness, brooder conditions are probably at fault. There may be too high temperature, or not enough moisture, or a combination of both, making a hot, dry atmosphere. A frequent cause during the brooder stage is too long a stay on board floors. Among half-grown chicks, long-legged cockerels are more liable to be affected than the shorter legged fowls. Here the trouble is largely nutritional. On account of the rapid growth of the fowl it is unable to appropriate sufficient bone-making material from its food. Sometimes the food is deficient. It may contain too much fattorming food and not enough bone-makin gmaterials.

Leg weakness is rare in full-grown fowls. Occasionally, however, specimens of the heavier breeds may become so heavy, through forced feeding, that their legs will not support their bodies.

When a chick or a fowl without any evidence of injury or disease of the legs manifests unsteadiness or lameness in walking, staggers on attempting to rise, or is unable to rise to its feet and rests with its breast on the ground, it is customary to say that the fowl has leg weakness.

To treat leg weakness properly, the cause should first be removed. The "climate" of the brooder should be changed, and if had been suggested where the heat has been too dry, and particularly if the fault has been bottom heat, that the chicks be permitted to scratch a little in slightly moist green grass or litter. A little Epsom salts in the drinking water will prove beneficial.

Growing chicks suffering from leg weakness should be given Epsom salts, room to run, plenty of fresh air, vegetables, and green food, lean meat, bone meal, and green cut bone. Mashes, especially wet mashes, fat meats, and condiments or stimulants of any kind should be avoided. Bicarbonate of soda, phosphate of lime, and such salts have been recommended, but in most cases it will be found that dietetic and hygienic treatment will prove sufficient.—S. W. Shoemaker.

GIVE CHICKS PLENTY OF ROOM AND WATER

"Be sure that there is plenty of roost room, when the chickens come home to roost." This is an important factor in poultry-keeping that is not generally recognised, says one county agent, with the result that many poultrymen are finding that their birds are growing to maturity as weaklings. The other chief factor in successful chicken raising is to keep before them at all times an abundance of fresh drinking water.

These factors in the growing of chicks are probably overlooked by the average poultryman. It is not enough during the hot weather to have water two or three times a day before them; they should have fresh water all the time. In large flocks this can best be done by having a 50-gallon molasses barrel in the shade with a trough underneath, and the spigot turned just enough to keep the trough full.

Just as important as fresh water is range and sufficient roosting space. It is easy to put 200 to 400 chicks into an 8x10 brooder coop and think, "well, when the chicks get big enough high temperature, or not enough moisture, or a combination of both, making a hot, dry atmosphere. A frequent cause during the brooder stage is too long a stay on board floors. Among half-grown chicks, long-legged cockerels are more liable to be affected than the shorter legged fowls. SILO SHOULD GET SPRING CLEANING

Now is the time to clean the silo out, even though one is not to fill it until the harvest of corn in September. There are two very important reasons why the silo should have a thorough cleaning each spring. First, to prevent spoiling of the silage, and second to prevent the rotting of the staves in the silo. At this time also all the hoops should be tightened up to prevent the loosening of the joints.

In filling the silo with summer crops there are several things to keep in mind. Previous to filling, the silo should be opened up and aired as much as possible, so that there will be no danger to the health of the man who is to pack the silage. Next, the oats or clover should be cut while in the milk stage and with the dew on them if possible, then it should be cut up very fine, and water running on the silage, as the silo is being filled. The silage should be thoroughly packed down and the silage should be kept packed tight all the time, especially at the greater circumference.

If one will remember that he must first prevent mold infection by keeping it out at the start, that he must have green immature plants that are not fibrous, that he must keep the air out by thorough packing and drenching, and with water to drive out the air, he will have no trouble with silage spoiling.

SPRAYING WITH BLUE VITROL SHOULD START

In some spots spraying with blue vitrol to control certain weeds is practicable if done at the right time. Now is the time to put on the first spray. Four or five days later the second spray should be applied. Blue vitrol used in the proportions of 15 to 20 pounds to 50 gallons of water and sprayed with the potato or orchard sprayers, will kill mustard, kale, pig weeds and similar weeds having a large rough porus hairy leaf. If these weeds cover a field of oats or corn spray them instead of trying to pull them. I have seen fields of oats and corn, says one agent, in which not a spear of either corn or oats could be seen because the weeds were so bad, but after the fields were sprayed the corn or oats grew very well. The reason blue vitrol does not kill cereal crops is because on these plants the leaves are narrow, smooth and oily. When the spray falls on these plants it rolls off as water does from butter, but the leaves of the weeds are of such a character that the blue vitrol adheres to the hairy rough surface and destroys them.

NEW CHAMPION HOLSTEIN IN CONNECTICUT

Nutmeg Elsie Hibma, a Holstein cow owned by F. M. Peasley, of Cheshire, has surpassed all former records of butterfat production for the breed in 30 days as a junior three-year old and is declared new state champion by the Advanced Registry.

In 30 days she produced 3046.3 pounds of milk and 90.164 pounds of butterfat. This fat production is equal to 112.705 pounds of butter.

EARLY CUT HAY BEST IN EVERY WAY

There are many reasons why hay should be cut early and only one why it should not, but still that one seems to rule, hence the hay is always cut too late. The one and only one reason is habit. Habit is certainly a big thing, but when it gets the best of us, let's break it.

The reasons why we should cut hay early are:

3—More vitamines in early cut hay.

Because of these reasons it means that a farmer using early cut hay instead of late cut, can get along with less grain or get more milk with the same amount of grain, either way he chooses.

Of course, it is impossible to cut all hay just the way one knows it should be, because of unfavorable weather conditions, lateness of season this year, lack of help, etc., but one should make an extra effort to get hay cut just as soon as it comes into bloom. This applies to clover perhaps more than to other grains, but it is applicable to all.

The average beginning salary of our day graduates compares favorably with the average beginning salary of graduates in engineering, law, medicine, and other professions.
The majority of our evening graduates were experienced when entering the School, at which time their average salary was less than that of day graduates during the first year of employment. The remarkable increase in the salaries of evening graduates is largely the result of the training obtained at this School, thus demonstrating the possibilities for graduates through our training and the accumulation of practical experience.
This is the largest professional school of college grade in the world devoted exclusively to the training of accountants. Enrollment for past year 2295.
Day courses require 2 years for completion. Tuition $200 per year.

Brevity the Soul of Strength.

Small words are the strongest words. They are more easily understood and make deepest impressions. It takes more skill to use small words right than to use big words because the small words have to mean something.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sale of Spring Garden Ave. Property.

Sadusky, the fine residence property located at No. 21 Spring Garden avenue, consisting of a tract of land about 100x105 feet, together with a one family residence of eight rooms and bath, and garage for two cars. The house is of frame and stucco construction. Mr. Sadusky has made the purchase for a home, and will occupy it in the near future.

Breed Theatre

John Gilbert will be seen at the Breed theatre today and Saturday in a Fox production that portrays him in a role entirely different from any this popular star has before essayed. He plays the part of a breezy, devil-may-care sort of fellow in "The Love Gambler," a story wherein Cupid deals and hearts are trumps.

This screen drama is based on a theme of sacrifice and its various elements are said to be cleverly woven together. The director, Joseph Franz, has handled the sequence of the tale in a rarely skilful manner, according to the New York reviews.

Playing opposite Gilbert is that extremely beautiful actress, Carmel Myers, who was especially engaged to appear in the picture with John Gilbert. Her sympathetic interpretation of difficult roles makes her a welcome addition to the Fox staff of screen artists.

The story is warranted to hold the spectator's interest to the very end. The photography is said to be unusually praiseworthy. Summing up the qualities of the film, it seems that it has ever requisiteness of good entertainment; an engrossing story, careful direction, good photography and actor of the first rank. Those who see "The Love Gambler" during its run at the Breed are promised an evening of keen diversion.

Why People Become Nervous and Run-down
Prominent Health Official Explains
By C. M. Lipinski, M. D.
Former Member of Philadelphia Health Department
"The reason why persons who are weak, nervous, anemic and run-down have gotten into that condition is because they are so constituted that they use up their vital energy and nerve force quicker than their bodies can replace it.
"Their systems fail to extract from the food they eat and retain in sufficient quantity those mineral elements without which the body is absolutely unable to create vital energy and nerve force. And as they go on expending day by day, their vital energy without adequately replenishing the supply until their systems become entirely run-down, their blood gets impoverished and their nerves are enslaved. The mineral elements which are essential in the creation of vital power are particularly calcium, potassium, sodium, phosphorus and iron. And these elements must be administered to those patients whose systems do not extract them in sufficient quantity in the natural way from their food. That is why I always recommend Wincarnis in the case of anemic, nervous and run-down patients. For Wincarnis contains all of these vitally necessary elements in a form that enables the system to readily assimilate them and which is acceptable to the most delicate stomach."

WASHINGTON WINS POUGHKEEPSIE REGATTA IN A GRUELLING RACE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y. June 28.—(By The A. P.)—Eight stalwarts of the University of Washington, striked by a brilliant young oarsman who rose from a sick bed to row the race of his career, smashed the two year reign of the Navy's crews and swept to dramatic triumph today in the premier test of American college rowing, the three mile race concluding the twenty-sixth annual regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing association.

Through a driving downpour, Washington and the Navy fought it out for supremacy over the last mile of the varsity struggle, after practically distancing their four other rivals, and the Pacific Coast oarsmen won because they possessed the greatest stamina and finishing power. They crossed the finish line fully a length ahead of a decisively whipped Annapolis eight that failed to demonstrate the qualities that carried its predecessor to spectacular victories in 1921 and 1922.

Trailing two lengths behind the Navy came Columbia, which weakened after setting the pace for more than a mile. Syracuse, fast overhauling the New Yorkers, finished fourth, another three quarters of a length back. Cornell, but a ghost of the rowing power that once ruled supreme in college seas, finished fifth, half a length behind Syracuse, and Pennsylvania was nearly another length in the rear.

Only inches separated Washington from a double triumph, for its rangy and powerful freshman eight, the only other purple and gold entrant, lost to a great Cornell yearling crew by that margin in the closest winning finish in intercollegiate regatta history.

Brilliant as was the fay Western's varsity victory—the first time that the west has triumphed in the quarter of a century that its oarsmen have sought this blue ribbon crown of rowing—the struggle for freshman honors was the most spectacular feature of the day. The finish, which looked from the shore to be a dead heat, was to close that it was only by a two to one vote of the judges at the finish that Cornell was awarded the decision over Washington.

The Orange sweeps of Syracuse flashed across the line first in the opening event of the regatta, the junior varsity contest. Cornell finished second, by a narrow margin over Columbia and Pennsylvania, which had a drab day of it, brought up the rear.

The hero of Washington's victory tonight was Dow Walling of Bellingham, Washington, 20 year old stroke oar. Forced out of his seat last Saturday by an infected knee that for a time threatened to develop into blood poisoning, Walling rejoined the eight only last evening and proved his remarkable grit by pacing the far westerners brilliantly and smoothly from start to finish.

His knee was bandaged and his face showed the signs of the physical strain he had undergone but there was no evidence of handicap in the irritable pace e set for his crew. His own words after the race were that he "just forgot all about his knee."

For the first mile of the varsity race, which started in a drizzling rain after a delay due to mishaps in the Navy and Cornell shells, Columbia seemed on its way to fulfill the predictions of its most ardent supporters. The Blue and White shell was the first to catch the water and immediately shot out into the lead, holding an open-water advantage over all the crews, but Washington, at the half-mile mark.

The Navy, departing from its strategy of former years, started slowly, holding third place by a scant margin over the other eights and apparently content to let Columbia set the pace.

Washington, a half length behind, lifted its stroke a beat or two and slowly drew up on the New Yorkers, taking the lead shortly after the mile and a half stake, never to be headed. That spurt of the westerners soon carried them a length ahead of the Columbians, who in turn faced a new challenge from the Navy and Cornell.

Rowing under the bridge that marked the two mile point, Washington showed a length and a half in front with Columbia fighting gallantly to hold a third of a length advantage over the Middies. Here the Navy, realizing that it must row as it had not been called on to row this season, started its final dive, deepening their catch and lifting their stroke to 36, the Middies forged ahead of Columbia, which was weakening rapidly from the effects of its early pace, and set out after the flying westerners.

Down toward the finish they raced, through a pelting rain, making its supreme bid, the Navy for a time seemed to gain slowly but steadily on the westerners, but Washington, putting renewed drive into its stroke, flung back this challenge with a closing spurt that carried the crew across the finish line a full length ahead.

The Navy found its strategy sufficient to dispose of four of its rivals but it had not counted upon the staying powers of that stalwart eight from the Pacific Coast. The Middies had started their challenge too late to overcome the lead that Washington had gained and proved able to maintain.

Cornell outside of a brief spurt near the half way mark and Pennsylvania never were factors. It was the first time in regatta history that the Ithicans failed to do better than fifth place.

Washington 14.03 1-5; Navy 14.07 2-5; Columbia 14.15 4-4; Syracuse 14.18 4-5; Cornell 14.19 4-5; Pennsylvania 14.21 3-5.

Baltic vs. Quinnebaug

The Baltic A. A. will clash with the Quinnebaug team at Baltic on Sunday in what is expected to be a fast game. The Baltic team has been in a slump for the past few Sundays but expects to bring in a victory in this game.

The city of Athens gave a farewell reception to the American Red Cross nurse relief workers in Athens 3000 years to an end officially.

Wimbledon, June 28—(By the A. P.)—Twenty thousand tennis devotees crowded the stadium at Wimbledon today to watch Vincent Richards, the youthful American star in his match with the dashing young Frenchman, J. Brugnon. Richards winning handily, 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

The king and queen furnished the only surprise of the afternoon when they appeared in the royal box, just before Richards and Brugnon walked on to the centre court. The great assemblage had not heard that the king and queen intended looking in a Wimbledon, and their unexpected arrival brought play to a stop and everyone to his feet.

Everything else today came off just as expected the favorites winning in each match. Thousands were unable to get inside the enclosure, and so watched the matches on a dozen outside courts. Every seat and every bit of standing room was occupied while Richards with great dash, terrific speed and artful strokes disposed of the Frenchman.

As soon as this match was over the crowd began to leave, going to the tearooms and the outside courts, so that only about a fourth of the seats were occupied when Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the American champion, a few minutes later began her match with Mrs. Edgington, of England, who she defeated, 6-4, 6-0. Mrs. Mallory showed her very best form in the second set, which she captured without losing a game. Because of her various recent defeats, however, she is not praying the attraction that some of the other Americans are, and, of course, Suzanne Lenglen, the Little French woman who holds the world's championship, is always a spectacular player and draws the spectators to her court.

WHITHAM AND WALSH TO MEET IN FINALS

Washington, June 28—Two New York public links golfers, J. Stewart Whitham a former caddie and a chum of Gene Sarazen, open champion, and Richard Walsh, reached the final round today in the national public links championship. They will play 36 holes for the title tomorrow over the East Potomac Park course where the championship has been in progress the last three days. Walsh was runner up in the first public links championship last year, while Whitham is a comparative unknown and was not picked as a member of the New York team which competed for the Harding cup earlier in the week.

In the semi-finals today Whitham won from Ray McAuliffe of Buffalo on the nineteenth hole, after McAuliffe had missed a two foot putt on the eighteenth to win the match.

Walsh won his semi-final match from Joseph Coble, of Philadelphia, by two up after being two down at the twelfth tee. The New York lad won the twelfth when Coble sliced to the rough, halved the next three and then won three in a row, both players were around in 77. While McAuliffe and Whitham both scored 79.

CORNETS CLASH WITH HARDIGS THIS EVENING

The Cornets and Hardigs will play a postponed game at the Fairgrounds this evening. The Cornets by virtue of the defeat of the Professional Men by the Whirlwinds have moved into second place in the league and intend to stay there. The Cornets after a bad start have been playing a good brand of baseball and from now on it looks like a tussle for first honors between the Whirlwinds and the Cornets.

TROLAND SAYS HE DOES NOT FEAR NORWICH TEAM

Manager Troland of the Taftville A. A. said last night that his team would be only too willing to make good their boast that Taftville can beat the Norwich club and will show the fans of Eastern Connecticut that all the baseball knowledge is not bottled up in Manager O'Leary's cranium when these two teams meet next Wednesday. As for ball games not being won on hot air Manager Troland says he realizes this but remarks that Manager O'Leary has pumped the atmosphere around Norwich full of it during the past two seasons.

If Manager O'Leary thinks he can dispense with any of his men for the game on Fourth of July he is all wet, said Manager Troland, he'll have to use all his subs and furnish his outfielders with motorcycles. Maybe Taftville hasn't won any series but they have pulled the Norwich club out of many a financial hole and brought in the old shekels which is more than any other team has done.

Manager Troland also made it known that he wanted good umpires for this game as the rule book says only nine men shall comprise a team.

The Taftville team will play against Willimantic on Saturday as sort of a practice game for the Norwich team and it is expected that there will be a big crowd from Norwich at the game to get a line on the Taftville team.

DEMPSEY MUST OBEY THE MONTANA LAWS

Helena, Mont., June 28—If the July 4 fight at Shelby does not materialize every dollar which was paid for tickets must be refunded and "Mr. Kearns and Mr. Dempsey cannot sit idly by, knowing as they have known that tickets were being sold without rendering themselves blameworthy and culpable under our law", according to a statement issued this afternoon by Attorney General W. D. Rankin.

Following is the statement:

"The persistent rumor that Dempsey will not fight in Montana unless the last dollar of an unconscionable bargain is in his hands by July 2, if true, presupposes that the laws of Montana against obtaining money under false pretenses are impotent.

"The state of Montana is interested in seeing that its people are not defrauded. Mr. Kearns and Mr. Dempsey cannot continue to sit idly by, knowing as they have known that tickets were being sold without rendering themselves blameworthy and culpable under our laws, unless every dollar is refunded the purchasers of tickets in event no contest takes place by reason of Dempsey's refusal to appear.

"Champions and their managers must obey the law the same as the most inconspicuous citizens."

ALEXA AND GLENNA PICKED TO MEET IN FINALS

Buffalo, N. Y., June 28—That Alexa Stirling of the New Hempstead Country club would meet Glenna Collett of the Rhode Island Country club, Providence, in the final of the annual women's invitation golf tournament of the Buffalo country club was the prediction of the followers of the game who watched play in the third round today. These two present and past holders of national championship honors, won their way to the semi-finals with Ada Mackenzie of Toronto and Anita Lihme of Chicago in a day of superb playing. The semi-finals will not be a walkover. However, for Miss Mackenzie is a former dominion champion and Miss Lihme's defeat of Mrs. F. C. Letts, Jr., another Chicago player on the 20th green today stamped her as a possible dark horse who may upset the predictions of the galleries. Miss Stirling is paired with Miss Mackenzie and Miss Collett with Miss Lihme for the semi-finals tomorrow.

WALLING HAS TO BE CARRIED FROM BOAT

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 28—(By the A. P.)—Dow Walling, Washington stroke, whose courage enabled him to row the greatest race of his career in the western boat despite a painful leg injury, was lifted from the shell after the finish of the race and was unable to bear his weight on the injured limb tonight, it was learned.

It was said that Walling probably would be sent to a hospital for treatment, although he scoffed at the suggestion and insisted that his leg would be all right when the stiffness left it.

Chamois Gives Little Leather.

The chamois, which disports itself on the mountains, has nothing to do with the bulk of the chamois leather which we all know. The latter is really the lining of sheepskins, which is stripped off and treated by a special process to render it soft and pliable. Only a very small proportion of this leather is obtained from the chamois.

There You Have It.

"Mr. Bradley is certainly well read," said Jane. "He must memorize familiar quotations. At any rate he repeated an exquisite one last night." "What was it?" inquired Juliet with interest. "Why, I can't give you the exact words," responded Jane, "but he said he'd rather be a something in a something than a something

TRANSPORTATION.

In connection with the addresses which the president is making on his western trip it cannot be overlooked that he placed great importance upon the question of transportation and the need of dealing with it in a manner that will avoid the evils that might easily result.

Transportation is of vital importance to the country. We have had our experiences with it under varying conditions and it must be realized that there is need of maintaining a construction programme concerning the great highways of commerce. It is a subject that has had much attention in congress and it is due for much more. The best interests of the country do not lie in throwing about the roads such handicaps that they cannot do business at a profit or such restraints that they cannot meet the existing needs or development requirements.

President Harding pointed out what might well be regarded as a programme when he referred to three alternatives in dealing with this problem. These are government acquisition and operation of the weak, small and unprofitable lines; government purchase and operation of all the railroad lines, and intelligent, well considered legislation for the regional consolidation of existing systems and lines with a view to economy, efficient use of available equipment, stabilization of earnings and restoration of investors' confidence in railroad securities.

The president was outspoken in preference for the third proposition. He referred to the fact that government ownership and operation would be politically and economically disastrous and in that the country has had enough experience to strongly support him.

Transportation by water as well as by rail was not overlooked by the chief executive. The country needs to get the benefit of both and such is going to come through encouragement rather than through fighting it.

BLOCKING SERVICE.

How public business is or has to be surrounded by safeguards that cause no such embarrassement to private business is well illustrated this week by the order of the postoffice department holding up all parcel post business to Europe because the funds for such purposes have been exhausted and none will be available until the first of July, when the new fiscal year opens.

Though all activities in behalf of the public are not handicapped by similar restrictions, the keeping down of expenditures is important and funds are appropriated a long time in advance with no positive means of measuring the demands. It was not because there was an unwillingness to give the department a sufficient amount to handle the business offered it, but because it was impossible to read the future the shortage exists. The volume of mail to Europe has increased greatly, Records have been broken and because this added mail has exhausted the funds available for the purpose of transporting the parcel post there is nothing to do but wait until more can be obtained.

It is supposed of course that the money for the transportation of the parcel post is provided by those who purchase the stamps affixed thereto. That is the case for that money does not become available for the actual transportation expenses strange as it may seem. Based on estimates congress provides what it believes necessary but it does not provide a fund that can be utilized in case legitimate outlays require it.

It is a situation that has been developed from long experience. It is bound with red tape and does not take into consideration emergency situations like the present. If congress were in session the trouble might be quickly overcome. But it isn't and hasn't been for nearly four months, and under the existing system there is nothing to do but wait or violate the law. It is a hindrance to service that deserves to get attention.

CANNOT STAND PUBLICITY.

Publicity does much in bringing about needed reforms through the revelation of deplorable conditions. It was only through persistence and difficulty that action was obtained in Florida against the methods pursued in connecion with leased convicts. But the disclosures were such that the practice could not be kept covered up and it certainly could not be countenanced. When it became apparent that Florida was tolerating inhuman conditions it did not take long to bring about a change. Possibly that was not all that was to be expected or all that would have been made in some other states had such revelations been brought to light, but it nevertheless meant a start.

Florida's action has its effect beyond the borders of that state. It was not alone in the endorsement of the leasing system for convicts and it was not the only state that had failed to surround such a system with proper inspection and investigations. Alabama has found that what was said of Florida could to a considerable degree be said of itself. It has given thought to what has been approved in the past and it is demanding through various organizations that there be an end to the practice of leasing convicts to mines and lumber companies. That state has 1600 convicts whose services are sold. It is the abuses that such a system leads to that brings forth the volume of opposition.

Leased to mines the convicts are required to mine a certain number of tons of coal daily. If they do not do that they are subject to flogging. The prohibition of the lash only meant the employment of sticks and other implements to accomplish the same object and to terrorize the convicts.

Alabama stands in no enviable position as the only state that tolerates such a system. Forced to a realization of what prevails there in this respect there can be little wonder that the people of the state are aroused and it will be surprising if they do not succeed in putting an end to it.

THE DROWNING ACCIDENTS.

Nothing stands out more strongly in support of the policy of prevention than the daily accounts of drowning accidents. The great and needless waste of life is appalling at this season of the year and it must be apparent to those who read that the exercise of reasonable care would have done much to prevent it.

The joy of getting into the water as bathers or swimmers is not to be denied. It appeals to a large number, both young and old. But too many fail to realize the risk that is involved especially if the beach or shore is unknown. There are pitfalls galore and they are too often discovered after it is too late.

Deplorable as is the loss of life under the varying circumstances it is even more so that those who are in a position to take a lesson from the fate of others fail to do so, but persist in going into water beyond their depth or in taking unwarranted risks when swimming.

The idea that what has happened to others is not likely to be repeated in the case of other individuals is a mistaken one. The fact that others have lost their lives by bathing in dangerous places, getting into deep holes or by inviting exhaustion or cramps should be borne in mind by all those who go into the water. There are precautions that need to be exercised by both the swimmers and the non-swimmers. Safety first measures are as applicable in the water as well as in the highways or elsewhere and there is no danger of becoming too thoroughly impressed with the fact that it is preferable to be careful than to be sorry.

NOT A COURSE FOR PEACE.

Chancellor Cuno may have been talking for home consumption when he addressed the people at Koenigsburg but he gave no evidence that he was disposed to follow any other course than that on which he is now headed.

He took occasion to declare that there was no disposition among the people of the Ruhr to abandon the resistance that has prevailed there to the French occupation. That opposition he emphasized was the expression of the populace in that region and not that of the government. His purpose was to show that the responsibility should be placed upon them and not upon Berlin, that it was the will of the people and not the order of the government. In his opinion it is a conviction which they intend to adhere to.

In his endeavor to throw the responsibility for the Ruhr resistance upon the people he is not able to, or at least does not, claim that the government has made any attempt to impress upon them the mistake that they are making or that by their policy they are that much longer prolonging the existing conditions in Germany. He takes nothing but the attitude of approval. There is nothing for his hearers and the people of the Ruhr, to do but to get the impression that he gives approval to the course they are following and encourages them in it.

It is not an attitude which is calculated to relieve the situation there. Even though he might feel that the government could exercise some influence in that region he doesn't make any move in that direction. It virtually gives notice to France that it can anticipate no let up in the resistance. It is not a course for early peace.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Colleges that want to be up to date might go in for a short course in plastering.

Now that we are on the edge of the first half of the year how many of your good resolutions have remained intact?

Having expat $18,000,000 in the near east since the Smyrna disaster it can't be said that the Americans are exactly stingy.

It doesn't happen very often but those picknickers who are arrested for leaving rubbish and litter in parks are not likely to repeat such acts.

In that case where a $25 picked-up flivver has accumulated storage charges of $565 figured at a dollar a day it seems advisable to sacrifice the machine.

Even Premier Baldwin refuses to get excited over our seizure of liquor on British ships and to the horror of some declares that we are entirely within our rights.

Out in St. Louis plasterers are getting $14 a day. These are days when it is necessary to sacrifice even the family jewels—faith, hope and charity—to get a home.

That Massachusetts man who thinks he has a right to drink liquor and drive an auto is due to turn considerable money into the city's treasury if he repeats frequently.

Is there any danger that the auto drivers will be so charmed by the many sharp corners of the Laurel Hill detour that they will boycott the new highway after it is completed?

FEMININE SUBTELTY

"The more I think about it," confided the Hyde Park man to his friend from Woodlawn as they finished the last weeds in the smoker, "the more puzzled I am at the fact that these women haven't been the kings and generals and emperors and the statesmen and the bankers who say no, your security would not interest us good-day — and others of the ruling classes of the world! Why, my wife, Imogene—"

"I thought it would finally get around to your poor wife," commented his Woodlawn friend, scooping at the smashed cigar he had just extracted from his pocket. "Whatever she did to you, it was not half bad enough."

"When I decide a thing no, I stick to no!" the Hyde Park man said firmly. "My decisions are the result of profound thought and weighting of both sides of a question! I am a far-seeing and just man and when Imogene first suggested that it would be nice for us to take the Mediterranean trip next January with her dear friends the Pilfley Bottles, I took time before I answered her, I took at least ten seconds.

"I explained kindly that the idea of our going abroad when business was still so precarious an adventure was the most imbecile proposition which I had encountered in some time. Imogene replied that she supposed I knew best and would I like lemon pie for dinner?"

"And you fell for it," the Woodlawn man laughed derisively. "Man, I'm telling you that nothing is so deadly dangerous and packed with subtle, implacable design as a sweet little woman dutifully saying, 'yes, dear!' Aren't you ever going to learn anything at all?"

"My education," the Hyde Park man admitted, with surprising candor, "seems to be progressing by leaps and bounds. The next day Imogene said she had been thinking it over and was still more convinced I was right. Lilly Betts had been telling her about all the trips she intended to take in Europe and Imogene said she did feel so sorry for Lilly because it was awful to be married to a woman who wasted money. Imogene said it was not absolutely unnecessary to spend a cent in the foreign shops if one went abroad with mind made up to get full value from the trip and improve one's mind with the great sights of the world and enlarge one's horizon by meeting new people and let it go at that!

"Besides, Lilly Betts ought to consider her husband and no man enjoys shopping! It was just selfish and unkind! And as for clothes, Lilly always had more than she, Imogene, had, and if it had been herself who was going abroad, she wouldn't have felt she needed a new thing! Her suit was plenty good enough for Asia, Africa or the Sandwich Isles; one dinner dress and an afternoon dress would be all she would need, and crepe de chine fluffydoodles took up no room whatsoever, and you washed 'em out yourself! Why, actually, Imogene believed she could make Lilly's trip with no baggage but one of those big suitcases made for foreign travel! Think of the annoyance saved!

"And it didn't bother her a bit when every last woman, but herself in her card club sat and talked about do you remember that darling little shop on the Rue de Rush or the nice little I-got-it-Bazaar's on the Via Turpentine and things like that.

"Well, all of us couldn't expect to belong to the favored class and she believed in making the best of one's life and accepting what one's income permitted and being just as happy and cheerful as possible. Would I like roast beef and dumplings for dinner? She was going to stay home from Mrs. Stonophile's party and clean and press all my ties and mend those things I had cast aside. Maybe she could retrim last year's hat for herself and make that do instead of getting a new one because, as she concluded sweetly, we must conserve our money and be prudent for our old age. Anyhow there wouldn't be much of anything to go to this winter because every living breathing woman she knew was going to California or to Europe. It certainly was awful the way people seemed able to spend money these days!"

"Today," said the Hyde Park man. "But I'd have you know it is merely because after due thought I concluded it was time we took a trip—Imogene had nothing whatever to do with my decision!"—Chicago News.

Wives of Famous Men

Like so many other men of adventuresome tendencies, Richard I, the famous Lion Heart of mediaeval England, was not marked by domestic constancy. This in spite of the fact that his wife, Berengaria of Navvarre, was one of the most beautiful, gracious and charming ladies of that or any other age.

Their courtship was long and starred with obstacles. Richard, for reasons of state, was betrothed to Princess Alice of France when he first saw the beautiful Berengaria, with her cornflower eyes and her spun-gold hair, at a tournament given by her brother, Sancho the Strong. This was in 1177, and they were not married until 1191. During the intervening years they were secretly engaged, and the death of Richard's father made it possible for him to break relations with his official fiancee. Berengaria, patient in her adoration for the brave and handsome king, lived for some time with his mother, Queen Eleanora. The marriage took place ultimately on the island of Cyprus, where they had taken refuge during a storm at sea. Even so soon as a few days after the marriage the attention of Richard is alleged to have strayed to a lowly daughter of the Cyprian king. Berengaria, either in extreme ingenuousness or in extreme wisdom, took the girl to live with her.

Shortly thereafter they sailed for Palestine, where Richard was engaged in the Crusades. Due perhaps to the fortunes of war, a partial estrangement occurred, and Berengaria set sail for Naples, and finally made her way back to England, where she waited patiently for her errant — in more ways than one—husband. She never lost faith in him, and when, after escaping from prison in Austria, he returned to England but not to her, she still waited. Ultimately, in 1196, they were reunited and lived happily until 1199, when he died. Upon his death she entered a convent.

Wonder If They Were?

Wesley was seven and was spending some time visiting a friend. He had never heard the word "kidding" until this visit and when a diana guest in the house was taking her departure with many words of appreciation to her hostess, who in turn was telling her guest how glad she was to have had her as a guest. Wesley turned to the rest of the company and demanded:

"Now they're kidding each other, ain't they?"

Ship Just Adored Him

A little story exemplifying personality and even faulty mannerisms are often loved by our closest friends.

A young man of Mrs. X's acquaintance was strikingly handsome from the shoulders up, but unfortunately was quite ungainly in bodily movement. Especially when engaged in a football game, he was all arms and legs. About him she tells this story. One day the sweetheart of this young man was talking enthusiastically about him to a group of girls. "Oh, girls," she exclaimed, "I think he is positively the handsomest man I ever saw and I love him dearly, but when I saw him in a ball game with his arms and legs sprawling in all direction, I—I just adore him."

Do They All Do It?

The other day there came to the hotel a young traveling man of a very effeminate type. The other men in the hotel watched him with amusement until he took from his pocket a powder puff and mirror and before the whole assembly powdered his chin and nose. Then they laughed openly.

But he was not dismayed. "I just came from Pittsburgh," he explained, "and the coal dust there is so thick that we either have to wash our faces every hour or powder occasionally."

However, the other men laughed on.

If a painted or varnished floor is to be refinished, it should first be thoroughly scrubbed, and after it has become perfectly dry should be well sandpapered and then wiped with a cloth dampened with turpentine or gasoline, in order to remove the dust caused by the use of the sandpaper.

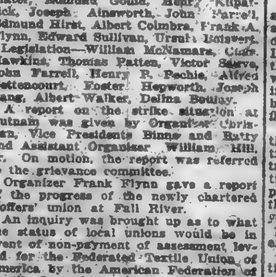
HEDLEY V. HAM DIES SUDDENLY AT EDGEWOOD, R. I. WITH HEART ATTACK

Hedley V. Ham of 65 Strathmore road, Edgewood R. I., manager of the C. P. Darling Box Works, dropped dead at his home at 7.30 o'clock Wednesday evening. Mr. Ham was in his 64th year. Heart trouble was the cause of death.

Mr. Ham had worked all day and had not complained of any ill feeling. After dinner he prepared his automobile to go for the son of William A. Johnson who occupies the apartment over his and is critically ill. Mr. Johnson's son arrived, however, and Mr. Ham went to sit with his wife on his veranda, overlooking Narragansett bay.



HEDLEY V. HAM

He sloughed in his chair suddenly, with his hand over his heart. Mrs. Ham at once called Miss Mildred Lee, a trained nurse in attendance on Mr. Johnson, Miss Lee advised calling a physician. Dr. Earl Forrest pronounced Mr. Ham dead upon his arrival. Medical Examiner Dr. Daniel S. Latham of Cranston gave the cause as heart attack.

Mr. Ham was born in St. John, New Brunswick on March 31, 1860. He was a graduate of Bryant & Stratton Business College in St. John, and also attended private school there. He was employed by the Boston and Maine railroad and went to live in Boston.

In 1894 Mr. Ham came to this city as freight agent for the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, continuing in that position until August, 1903, when he resigned. He had had a varied experience in railroading having acquaintance with all branches of the business and he gave special attention to the requirements of Norwich shippers, giving satisfaction to the local patrons of the road who were sorry to see him leave Norwich.

In 1903 he went to Providence for the United States Finishing company, accepting the post as superintendent at the Silver Springs plant. When the United States Finishing Company took over the Darling box shop, Mr. Ham was transferred to it as manager.

He was a member of the British Empire Club at death, and a former member of the Rotary club, which he served as director for many years.

He leaves his wife, formerly Miss Laura Frain, whom he married in 1911, and three children by a former marriage: Mrs. W. C. Dickerman of Harris avenue, Providence; Miss Ethel Ham of Laconia, N. H. and Arthur M. Ham of Cranbrook, British Columbia.

TOWN HEALTH BOARD ABATES FALLS NUISANCE

It is generally anticipated that from now on there will be a great comfort and relief to humanity, because of the fact that the town board of health has put a stop to a prevailing nuisance, which has existed for some time at the corner of Gem and Oneco streets, at about opposite Yantic cemetery on the lower road, close to the sidewalk. Here a sign has been placed which reads: "No dumping here, per order of the Town Board of Health"

This is because people from far and near have been in the habit of abusing what seemed a privilege in filling in a certain piece of land at this point, which by the way was private property. Here the many careless indulgents deposited anything from automobile fenders to the most repulsive kinds of garbage and even breedsen, the latter much to the annoyance of many of the townspeople, to say nothing of residents in that vicinity.

Certainly anyone who ever witnessed this abominable conditon of affairs which was not only repulsive to look upon but also which had a terrible odor and during the summer months swarmed with hundreds of green bottle flies; could not think that it coincided well with the title of the city, "The Rose of New England."

This year this prevailing condition was far in excess of that of last year, which were surely bad enough; and it is most gratifying to the residents that the board of health has been notified and taken action in this way.

The suit is brought as an injunction against the P. Schwartz Co. to restrain it from erecting and maintain a fense across Lane A, the plaintiffs claiming that the lane is public property. The defendant claims that the lane has been abandoned for many years and also claimed ownership of the property on which the fence was erected.

The plaintiff completed presentation of its case at 11.40 and the trial was then continued until Tuesday morning, July 10 at 10 o'clock in New London.

A DAINTY PARTY OR DEBT FROCK

Canton crepe or crepe de chine would be attractive for this style, but it is nice also for gingham and other cotton weaves. The skirt is joined to a long-waisted underbody. The overblouse, caught up at the sides in soft folds under ribbon trimming or a motif or rosette, is slipped over the dress when worn. One may have both skirt and overblouse in straight or scalloped outline.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10 year size requires 2 3-4 yards of 40-inch material.

DANIELSON

Captain F. O. Armington, commander of the Service battery, 182nd Field Artillery, has received a bronze medal from the state in recognition of his having served ten years as an officer of national guard troops in Connecticut. His first enlistment was in Company M, 3rd Infantry, in June, 1905, and he was commissioned a second lieutenant the following month and a first lieutenant in February, 1906. In December, 1907, he transferred to the 13th company, Coast Artillery corps, and was promoted to a captaincy in which capacity he served for two years before resigning. In 1917 upon the entrance of the United States to the World war, Capt. Armington organized a state guard company in Danielson to replace the battery that had gone into service with other national guard troops of the state and has since remained a captain, organizing the new service battery following the disbanding of the state guard organizations.

A matter that has received attention from time to time during the past year—the formation of a Community church in Brooklyn—will be formally discussed at a meeting to be held in the Baptist church at Brooklyn next Sunday morning. Notices that have been issued, calling attention to the conference are as follows:

One of the notices reads as follows: "In a number of places in our state, federated or community church have recently been organized and the various denominations approve and encourage this progressive and practical expression of Christian unity. Is Brooklyn to fall in line? You are deeply interested in the success of the church life of the community. We are to talk over the matter of church unity in the Baptist church next Sunday morning, July 1, at 10.45. Give expression to your conviction by being present. Every church is organized for the same purpose. We all have a common faith. Let us forget the differences that have kept denominations apart, and emphasize the things we have in common.

"We continue to hold our own religious convictions, but unite with those who may differ from us.

"Let us help to answer the prayer of the Master, 'that they all may be one.'"

Another card reads "During the discussion of the plan to form a community church in Brooklyn the question is often asked, How will we go about it? That matter will be determined on Sunday, July 1, if the plan to form a federated or community church meets with favorable vote. A suggested way would be the appointment of committees, on place of worship, covenant, constitution, membership, Sunday school, benevolences, finances, pastoral supply, music, women's auxiliaries, men's work, social activities, etc. The members of this new organization should be the present members of the Baptist, Unitarian and Congregational church, plus the Christian people in the community who are not now associated with any local church."

Although the formal opening of the Community house at South Killingly will not take place until July 11, it will be used for the first time Saturday evening of this week, at which time one of the features of the program arranged will be a talk by Dr. Nathaniel Hibbard of Danielson on his recent travels in the Near East.

The Community house is a great asset to South Killingly. It fills a want that community has felt for a long time. It is a fine commodious building, located near the church, is appointed for community service and will be the center of many of South Killingly's activities.

As was recently announced, the Windham County National Bank of Danielson, Connecticut, has had such a prosperous and successful six months, and ever having in mind the welfare of its depositors, it desires to express its appreciation of the loyalty of these depositors in some pecuniary manner. The decision of the board of directors was unanimous in declaring a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, and setting aside from the bank's profits of the past six months a sum sufficient to pay this dividend on December 1 next to all depositors in its savings department. This action on the part of the management of this old reliable national bank will most assuredly meet the approval, not only of its depositors, but of all sound business men who recognize the principle that contented customers are the result of good service such as the depositors of this old bank receive. The Windham County National bank invites the accounts of new customers who will share in the distribution of the 6 per cent. dividend.—adv.

PUTNAM

This is the day—Friday—that approximately 100 boys will troops toward Camp Woodstock, at Black pond, in the town of Woodstock, from many points in Windham, Hartford and Tolland counties. The day marks the opening for the season of the tri-county Y. M. C. A. camp, where scores of fine boys will enjoy the camp and all of its features for the next six weeks. Incidentally, the camp leaders are just rounding out two weeks of life at the camp today and are now fully prepared and fully acquainted with the camp and the duties they will be called upon to perform.

Secretary J. H. Corbett of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. expressed himself Thursday as well pleased with the enrollment that has been obtained and is optimistic over the season now opening.

Boys arriving at the camp today will find that a fine baseball field with a skinned diamond has been laid out for their use, that the tennis courts are in readiness for use and that the boating facilities have been increased by the addition of three canoes. In this connection it may be mentioned that all swimming contests, boating and canoeing will be closely supervised and regulated by the camp leaders.

A majority of the boys who go into camp today are to remain for two weeks only, but some of this first contingent have their plans made to remain at the camp for six weeks—the entire period that it will be open. Two weeks hence another group of boys will go into camp to replace those who come out, and four weeks hence still another group of boys will be on hand for the final two weeks of the camp period.

The stage is all set for a massed onslaught on the bass and pickerel in Alexander's lake next Tuesday—when that beautiful body of water, closed to fishing for several years—is reopened in a restricted way under legislation enacted at the recent session of the state legislature.

Manager P. J. Sheridan of Wildwood park said Thursday morning that every boat he owns at the lake has been let for next Tuesday and that he continues to be bombarded with requests for more boats to accommodate all who would go out on the lake on the opening day of the season. In addition, boats are being brought to the lake on motor trucks and wagons, and each day sees the number of little craft increased, and this likely will be the rule right up to next Tuesday morning. But the lake is a sizeable body of water and there will be room for all, and a welcome for all.

Some groups who plan to be at the lake for the season's opening will leave this city shortly after midnight Monday and will be fishing at first break of day. They are enthusiasts who love the sport and can't wait an extra minute. Then there is the matter of getting located on one of the best places, and that is a consideration in a rush period.

It may not be amiss to note that County Game Warden Charles M. Letters of this city will spend Tuesday at the lake. He will have a boat and he will see to it that those who fish do not take bass under 10 inches in length and retain them and that no fisherman gets away with more bass than the maximum number allowed under the law. When the lake was thrown open to fishing five years ago after another closed period, some took advantage of the opportunity to catch more fish than the law allows, but that will be dangerous to try this year.

Not all of those who fish at the lake next Tuesday will fish from boats. There are some good on-shore locations and these will be depended upon for results by those who will be unable to get a boat.

With the coming of July the Putnam Building and Loan association announces its plan for the issue of another series of shares—the 16th—and this announcement is of interest not only to present shareholders but also to many others who have been watching the growth and splendid management of the association since it was formed seven and a half years ago.

At the meeting held this week the association declared the usual dividend and accepted applications for loans totaling $87,000. It is the rule now that the applications for loans are always in excess of the revenue, which is placed as soon as it comes in each month.

Though the time since the organization was formed has seemed short holders of shares of the first series can look forward now to the time of redemption a little more than four years hence. The association has been of real value in aiding in the development of Putnam.

The ghost walked Thursday for members of the city's fire department. Pay checks for the active members of the department come through every quarter and they are now available. It may be said that the firemen, some of whom receive as small an amount as $18 for three months' service, have earned their money this year. They have been called upon to fight two big fires—at the Donahue block and at the Chickering block—in addition to answering calls for numerous minor fires, but all entailing work and risk.

Dr. H. L. Pease will leave Saturday for New York to spend a week attending the national convention of osteopaths. In addition to the business and scientific program, there will be a series of diversions and entertainments for those attending the convention. These will include a trip to West Point to see the cadets at drill. The sessions of the convention are to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Putnam lodge of Elks will get together Sunday afternoon at an open air gathering to be held on the Elks' fair grounds on Park street. This gathering will give many of the members their first opportunity to inspect the grounds and also will provide an opportunity for the fair committee to assign them to posts of service for fair week.

Members here of the American Federation of Textile Operatives are following with interest the doings of the general convention of the organization holding its sessions in Norwich this week. The particular interest here is largely due to the fact that members of the Putnam local are engaged in a strike against the wage scale in force at the plant of the Mechanics company, the strike now well into its eighth week. There were no developments of interest in the strike during Thursday.

Another push forward was given the nurses' home fund of the Day Kimball hospital Wednesday evening when a lawn party that drew a large attendance was held on the lawn at the Congregational church in Wauregan. The illumination and music by the Wauregan band were features of the affair, at which refreshments were sold and a very considerable sum realized.

A motor truck for use in delivering parcel post matter has been added to the equipment of the Putnam postoffice. The vehicle will relieve city carriers of much of their delivery burdens.

Governor Templeton will be in Putnam on Friday evening of next week. He is coming to attend the Elks' fair and to be a guest at a Rotary club dinner.

Fashioned plans for the observance of the Fourth include a parade, a baseball game and dancing.

J. O. Wood has arrived from Columbus, O., and has opened his boys' camp in Woodstock, where about a dozen boys are located, and more will come in early July.

The Beachmont Worsted company, successors to the French River Textile company, are planning to dispose of the mill company herd of thoroughbred Holstein cattle.

NEW LONDON MAY HAVE TROUBLE WITH CRYSTAL AVENUE PURCHASE

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, June 28—The city recently bought a parcel of land at Main street and Crystal avenue, for the purpose of clearing a corner of the and make the approach to and departure from Crystal avenue at the bridge safer than it has been in the past. The price paid for the property or at least the price at which the property was offered and at which it was accepted was $5,000. Now it turns out that Nicholas J. Trakas has a lease of the property for about three and a half years, and that he maintains a store there and rents a tenement in the building sold to the city. Mr. Trakas had an established business which he will have to abandon if the city carries out its plans and the tenement will not be there when the city completes its scheme of clearing the approach to the bridge. If Mr. Trakas is to abandon his place of business and he has to lose the income from it and to give up the tenement which he now rents it is probable that he will seek compensation for his losses. That amount would be considerable for a term of three and a half years. So it is possible that the city will not be able to complete the purchase of the property. The property is the same that Councilor Clark called the purchase a "joke" when the matter was before the council and which Councilor Fox said was a waste of money.

A detail of the state police, ten men, who have been in this city and stations contiguous to it, will finish up their detail of duty tomorrow and they will be succeeded by ten more men who will stay a week and try and get familiar with the work expected of them. These in turn will also remain a week and they will be succeeded by half a score of other officers. Six of the latter will remain in New London and vicinity permanently. The officers are instructed by the older state police men. Officer Carlson is to be stationed here permanently.

Frank Valentine Chappell has received the appointment as trustee of the Mystic Oral school, the appointment being made yesterday by Governor Charles A. Templeton.

At a special meeting of the city council this afternoon at 5 o'clock, called for the purpose of receiving applications of merchants whom desire to sell fireworks for Fourth of July, seven applications of merchants whom desire to sell fireworks for Fourth of July, seven applications were received and all granted. One dealer, however, who had not applied to sell the explosives, will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning, charged with selling fireworks without a permit. He is Louis Fellman, proprietor of the store at No. 453 Montauk avenue and was arrested by Motorcycle Officer William Babcock. Fellman has a large stock in his place and an actual sale by the proprietor has also been established. Heretofore the license fee was $10 and permits were granted by the captain of police. By an ordinance passed by the city council the power of granting the permits is vested entirely in the city council and the license fee is increased to $25.

Dan Cupid has created havoc in the personnel of the working force of telephone operators in the New London exchange of the Southern New England Telephone Company for within the past two weeks four of the "number, please" girls have resigned their positions and been led to the altar, and there are three or four more scheduled to be married before the summer is over. As a result of the several girls becoming brides, the company is instructing about fifteen beginners who will eventually be given permanent position at the switchboard.

Robert Meore and family of New Orleans, summer residents at the Pequot, have arrived here for the balance of the summer.

Edward Callahan, a former resident of New London, now in business at Salt Lake City, Utah, is being entertained by his brother, John M. Callahan of Huntington street.

Alice Curran, the 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Curran of No. 89 Potter street, who ran away from home three weeks ago and who was arrested in Boston Tuesday, charged with bad conduct and failing into ways of vice, will be arraigned in the city court there tomorrow morning. Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield will go to Boston tomorrow morning on an early train so as to reach there in time to attend the session of court as he has received assurances from the prosecutor that the Boston authorities are not desirous of holding the girl and are willing to turn her over to the New London officer.

Another batch of autoists, who continue to violate the city ordinance restricting the parking of their machines on State, Bank and Main streets, will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning, for officers during today summoned nine auto drivers to appear before Judge E. Victor Prince. Included among the alleged violators is Joseph F. Caufield of No. 436 Asylum street, Norwich.

At the annual meeting of the first school district of Groton, held last evening in the Groton Heights school, a tax of four mills was levied, the tax to provide for an increase in salaries of the school teachers if the school committee so decides. Schriver, resigned; and the appointment of a committee to act in conjunction with the school board in investigating the congested condition of the school.

Steamer New York, of the Central Vermont line, departed for New York tonight with practically a full complement of freight, the boat having been loaded last night and today by about sixty stevedores, about half of which number were imported here from New York, Tuesday because of the existing strike of the regular stevedores. Judge Prince was good to several autoists who were arraigned in the police court this morning for failing to pay any heed to the parking ordinance which this city has adopted. He fined a couple of the parties complained against, because they were residents of New London and they admitted that they realized such an ordinance as the city had adopted was in force. One of the operators complained against sought to placate the officer who arrested him by representing that he had a "pull" with the city manager and that the latter would protect him as against the policeman. That attitude of the autoist rolled the police officer and he delivered himself of some facts which were to the effect that the police department was operated according to statute and to ordinance and that the city manager would not interfere with these or would he give the offending autoist any satisfaction if he went to him with a story such as he used on the policeman.

(Special to the Bulletin).

New London, June 28—One of the meanest kinds of thieves that the New London police have encountered in a long time was taken into custody this evening when Bronislaw Pryzbylowski of No. 38 Winthrop street, was arrested charged by his wife with the theft of $100 and two $50 Liberty bonds. Pryzbylowski when apprehended was intoxicated and he was held without bond for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning. Pryzbylowski according to his wife, has worked but little for many months and when he did work, he spent his earnings for liquor, a condition that caused her to obtain employment and support their children. She had amassed about $100 and this she deposited in the savings bank. This morning when Mrs. Pryzbylowski was at her work, she alleges that her husband discovered the bank book and the Liberty bonds, missing Mrs. Pryzbylowski went to the police station and lodged complaint against her husband. Motorcycle William Babcock was stationed to the case and after a brief search Pryzbylowski was found in a saloon at the corner of North Bank and John streets. He was taken into custody and when locked up he had but $15 in his clothing and could not give any account as to where he had disposed of the Liberty bonds.

Physician Has New Method of Reducing High Blood Pressure

High Blood Pressure is one thing that every Insurance Company looks for in its examination. When it is present you cannot hope to be passed. The company will refuse to insure you. You are a bad risk. Yet many people have high blood pressure and do not realize it.

If you have frequent headaches, dizzy spells, sour stomach, ringing in ears, palpitation of the heart, you may have high blood pressure. It is in itself a symptom that usually indicates that your system is clogged with poisonous wastes. Before relief can be had these poisons must be eliminated.

A well-known physician who has given years of study to the subject of blood pressure has discovered a new formula that reduces blood pressure in a natural way by acting upon the cause. This new preparation has been so remarkably successful in thousands of clinical cases, even those of years' standing, that it was decided to dispense it through local druggists under the name of Bi-a-lin with a guarantee to return the purchase price to any rare case that was not wonderfully benefited by the very first bottle.

Bi-a-lin easily and quickly drives out the poisons and lowers Blood Pressure in Nature's own way.

It is mild, pleasant and harmless in its action and brings within a few days a wonderful new feeling of vigor and power.

CANNOT BROADCAST WASTE AND REAP THRIFT WITH THE SAME HAND

(Written Specially For The Bulletin.)

Two young women were coming out of a New York city hotel dining-room. A newspaper chiel happened to overhear the remark of one: "We ate six dollars' worth," she said.

The newspaper man printed the statement and added:

"It seems hard to believe. Six dollars buys about 5 1-2 bushels of wheat, or 3 1-2 bushels of corn, or about 55 pounds of pork ribs at wholesale," which is the way New York city hotel-keepers buy. "The girls didn't seem equal to any of these feats."

This city newspaper man needn't have confined himself to wheat, corn and pork. He might have gone on to show how that six dollars would have bought, at like wholesale prices, something over seven bushels of potatoes; about fifteen dozen eggs; three barrels of apples; eleven "broilers;" two crates of oranges; twelve gallons of milk, or twenty-four pounds of the best coffee.

Instead, it bought just two dinners for two girls. But—and don't minimize the importance of that "but"—but they were bought and eaten in the swell dining-room of a swell New York city hotel in the swell district.

Catch on?

Once more I quote our city newspaper man: "One dollar would be a liberal estimate of the real worth of the food served." The other five dollars represented service and show.

Now, when any of my consumer friends begin to wail to me about how much it costs them to live and how high prices are and how you "can't just go into a store and come out again without it's costin' you a dollar," etc., etc., I think of these two New York girls and their six dollar dinner. Not that it was anything unusual or calling for remark, in New York city. I've heard other tales from that modern Gomorrah that discount it. A friend, called there in punishment for some sin of his past life, I suppose; recently saw asparagus noted on the bill of fare where he was dining. He is very fond of asparagus. So he ordered some. He got f-o-u-r stalks of canned California asparagus on a side platter, three-quarters of every stalk being too woody to eat—and paid ninety cents for them. I have sold thousands of bunches of better asparagus, averaging fifty stalks to the bunch, for eighteen cents each. Another hotel charged another friend a dollar and a quarter for two ham sandwiches and a cup of coffee. I read with interest the menu of a $3-a-plate dinner served a large party the other night. I'm a very big or hearty eater, but I reflected as I read that it would have seemed a pretty shimpy meal to me. Of course, I don't know what the hotel-keeper paid for the materials of that dinner, but if the cost to him was fifty cents a plate, he was cheated. I've been told of another case where two men, in the city on business, were charged eleven dollars for a lobsterless and wineless dinner, and then mulcted two dollars more for a "cover" charge, beside fifty cents each of the waiter as a "tip."

Despite all these forms of conventional robbery, the hotel-keepers of the big city assert that they are not making big money; are, in fact, doing well if they make both ends meet.

I'm inclined to believe them, too.

This may be simple rural credulousness on my part. You are at perfect liberty to hold that opinion. It is your royal prerogative to condemn the hotel-keeper as a profiteer and sneer at me as "an easy mark" for crediting him. It won't make the least little difference with the facts whatever you say or think. But, before you come down on me too heavily, I want you to consider a few of the facts aforesaid.

In the first place, that hotel-keeper has to pay a huge rental for his hotel. In some cases it runs up to as much, every day, as you or I could sell our farms for at forced sales. And yet he rents for the simple reason that the paying of the most exorbitant rent is, in the end, cheaper than an attempt to build his own at present inflated costs of building materials and labor.

In the next place, his hotel has to be decorated and aestheticized and pretty-fied like a royal palace, or some rival house will attract his custom away from him. This sort of puffle costs money, too; more money, perhaps, than the mere shell of the building.

He must keep and pay an army of cooks and waiters and porters and chamber-maids and bell-boys and clerks and sweepers and the like. He must keep every corner spick and span, renew daily breakages, repair wherever repairs are needed. Not least of all, he must supply new towels and spoons and other things stolen regularly by his guests as "souvenirs."

He must keep right up to date with the very latest fads in napery and table furnishings and dining-room decorations. He must always be ready to supply anything which any one of ten thousand whimsical and cantankerous guests may demand. He must daily pay for a simple heart-breaking amount of sheer waste by careless and irresponsible employes.

When you come to think of these and other cognate facts dispassionately, I'm sure you'll begin to appreciate that, after all, the mere cost of "the eats" is about the smallest item in the city hotel-keeper's budget. That's why if isn't food which his guests pay most for, but fads and folderol.

You'll agree and I'll agree that this is reversing the proper order and putting the cart before the horse. So, I suspect, will the hotel-keeper, for he isn't primarily responsible for this condition of things.

It is the people to whom he caters, the people who want fads and folderol, the people who insist upon fads and folderol, the people who will go only where fads and folderol await them, the people who refuse to patronize him if he doesn't have them, and then kick at paying the costs of their own demands—it is these who are responsible for hotel high prices.

And, let it be added with all the emphasis possible, for the larger part of all other high prices.

I haven't been talking all this while about city hotel-keepers because I particularly love them or have taken any brief for their defense. In fact, I don't like defending anybody. I am much more inclined to pound a whole lot of wastrels over their heads. That's really what I've been leading up to. It's taken me some time, but I've got there, at last.

It may be that our dads and grandads bore down a little too heavily on the necessity of thrift. If they did, their descendants have got bravely over it. I think we need not worry over anybody being "too thrifty," these days.

Some weeks ago in a neighboring city where I was stopping over night, I passed a grocer's window in which was exposed some very attractive looking sliced boiled ham. Now, sliced boiled ham is one of my weaknesses. I can resist the enticements of the punch-bowl much easier than the allurements of sliced boiled ham. So I went in and, very casually, so as to hide my interest, made the clerk put me up a pound of it. He did so, "How much?" I asked. "Seventy-eight cents," he replied. I paid him, picked up my ham, walked dazedly to the home where I was guest, and humbly presented the unopened parcel to my hostess, as about the costliest sacrifice I could lay on the altar of hospitality. It was too rich for my own blood.

Two hours later, passing that same window, I observed that the ham-platter was empty. The meat had all been sold. I confess that my own purchase was due to a combination of appetite and ignorance. But that certainly couldn't have explained the other purchases which had used it up. Those city people knew what they were buying and what they were paying. Trust them for that. Yet they bought it, certainly six or eight pounds of it. Doubtless the same thing was going on that day at scores of similar groceries in other parts of the city.

The other day a neighbor sold a "side" of pork, containing a twelve-pound ham, for fourteen cents a pound. The cost of pickling and smoking the ham isn't a cent a pound: Salt and water and smoke are all, fortunately, still cheap. I don't know how much the fuel to boil it would cost. At present prices of coal, perhaps five cents a pound more. That makes, let's see, fourteen cents plus one cent for curing is fifteen cents, plus five cents for cooking is twenty cents a pound. Seems as if we might "throw in" the items for wear and tear of the pot, the poker, the platter and the carving-knife. If you're good enough to allow that, then we get twenty cents as the actual cost to a really "thrifty" housekolder of the most delicious sliced boiled ham attainable.

But—

The cutting of the pork, the trimming of the ham, the curing and smoking and cooking and slicing of it all involve some little management and some little trouble. And it's easier for the 1923 consumer to pay seventy-eight cents and have somebody else do it for him than to save fifty-eight cents and do it himself.

Then he wanders home, telling every acquaintance he meets on the way how it takes the last red cent he can earn merely to live. Also denouncing with heat the greedy and grasping hog-raiser who is robbing the breakfast tables of the poor!

We've talked, before this, of the truth in that mealy old saying that "You can't eat your cake and have it too." It's as true as if it were in the Gospels. Nor can you broadcast waste and reap thrift with the same hand at the same time.

There's another truth which ought to be if it hasn't already been condensed into a proverb. It is that you always pay, some time and some way, for all you get.

If you want a gorgeously decorated dining-room and a waiter in dress coat and white tie and spotless gloves and desire to sit in state while you dine like a prince in a royal pavilion, why, you can do so, by paying the price.

But for heaven's sake don't kick when the check comes—unless you are so built that you can kick yourself!

If you would rather buy sliced boiled ham and pay seventy-eight cents a pound for it than prepare it yourself for twenty cents a pound, why, you can do so.

But for heaven's sake shut up your yawp about the cost of ham, unless you can steer that yawp into your own long ears!

SOUTH WINDHAM

The annual meeting of the South Windham Fire company was held Monday evening in the fire department room of Guilford Smith hall. During the year new rubber boots and coats have been purchased for the use of the company. Officers were elected as follows: Chief, James M. Larkum; assistant chief, Carl Sundell; foreman, Charles E. Smith; chief engineer, Alfred E. Card; assistant engineer, Charles Maynard; foreman of chemical, Lyle Smith; secretary and treasurer, Clarence Avery; stoker, Charles Huntington; steward, Fred Lewis.

Chief Larkum and other members of the fire company have been meeting with good success in their canvass for funds for an automobile truck. Anyone desiring to add to the fund may leave a contribution with any one of the committee, Clarence Avery, James Larkum and Carl Sundell.

During Sunday's electrical storm lightning entered the houses of Michael Healy and Richard Perry, damaging two rooms at Mr. Healy's home.

Miss Avis Cobb and Walter Healy were graduated from Windham High school Thursday. A number of local people attended the graduation exercises, which were held in the high school auditorium Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Price of Norwich were the guests recently of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bell.

There were two automobile accidents here Sunday night. A New Jersey man had the wheels of his car locked in the trolley track and ran into the fence at Judge Foss'. A New London machine ran into a tree at Edward Avery's, damaging the wheel and fender and throwing out the occupants of the car. A bottle of liquor found near the car seemed to explain the cause of this accident.

CHAPLIN

The funeral of Mrs. Eliza A. Healy, 66, who fell dead last Thursday morning while mowing her lawn, was attended at her home on Monday at 10.30 o'clock. A large number of relatives, friends and townspeople attended the impressive service. Rev. John H. Knott, pastor of the Congregational church, officiated. A quartet—Mrs. Charles Gallup, Mrs. Wesley Deming, J. Wilbur Lanphear and Burton M. Welch—sang three appropriate selections during the service. The tribute of flowers was beautiful. The bearers were Robert O. Snow, Walter Snow, Harry E. Snow and William Barton. The burial was in the North cemetery, Providence, R. I. Rev. Mr. Knott read the committal service. Avery & Van Zandt were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Eliza A. Healy was born in Hartford, the daughter of Hollis A. and Samantha Lucinda Lyons Snow. She was the widow of James Healy, a veteran of the Civil war. Mrs. Healy had resided in Chaplin for 18 years, coming here from Providence, R. I. The deceased was a worthy member of the Chaplin Congregational church and active member of the Ladies' Aid society. She made many friends and was held in high esteem by all. The deceased leaves three brothers, Newton H. of South Manchester, Edwin L. of Burnside and George H. Snow of Chaplin; one sister, Mrs. Henry M. Clark, of Chandler, Fla., and several nephews and nieces.

Katie and Pauline Landeck are visiting two weeks with relatives in Trenton, N. J.

LIBERTY HILL

Through the untiring efforts of Rev. W. S. Woolworth and Mrs. E. C. Payson the past week in arranging and practicing the children in songs and recitations, the Children's day concert Sunday morning was excellent. About 30 children recited and sang. During the concert occurred the christening of Carl Harvey, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Payson, which was preceded by an appropriate and finely rendered duet by Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Caples. The decorations were very fine. The weather was ideal and the church was well filled with people.

A piano has been purchased for the use of the church from Rev. Mr. Owen of Columbia, who is going south to take up work there. The money for the piano was raised partly by subscription and a strawberry supper. The strawberries were given by Fred Green, chairman of the trustees of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cochran of Webster, Mass., Arthur Dimon of Hartford and William Harvey and a friend of Norwich were attendants at the Children's day concert Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Payson and son Carl and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bishop spent Tuesday in Lyme. Mr. Bishop and Mr. Payson as selectmen transacted Lebanon town business in the above place.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Noyes and Mrs. Ella Loomis of Schenectady, N. Y., came from New Hampshire, where Mr. Noyes has been spending his vacation, Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. John Clarke's and Sunday morning started for their home in Schenectady, going by auto. Mrs. Loomis is Mrs. Clarke's sister.

ROCKVILLE

Charles Boss of this place died June 24th at his home near this village. Mr. Boss had been in poor health for a long time but died quite suddenly, as he had been out in the yard talking with friends only a short time before. He leaves a widow, a daughter, Mrs. Fred Boss, and a son, Howard Boss, and six grandchildren, besides two brothers and a sister.

Carlton Irish and family were callers in Westerly Saturday evening.

Charles Crandall and N. H. Lanphear of Westerly were callers here Sunday.

The Loyal Wokers served a strawberry supper in the parish house last Thursday evening.

H. A. Saunders was home from Lord's Point over the week end.

Speeders' Licenses Suspended.

So far as discipline by the department of motor vehicles is concerned, the emergencies of traffic have during the past month required a more rigid application of the suspension law. The methods of suspension provided by law in wilful offenses have been tried out thoroughly during the past year and the suspension of licenses has been continued in all those cases of wilful offenses where it did not appear to the department, at the end of the statutory suspension period, that a reform had been had. Speeding by motorcycle operators either on the highways of the state or in streets of the cities has been unusually serious and the department has summarily suspended the license of every motorcycle operator either convicted or authentically reported as speeding and has brought him up to the office for a conference to discuss the whole subject with him and to determine whether on the basis of his driving record, he ought to be operating a motorcycle or not. To a somewhat limited extent the same policy has been followed out in connection with the speeders of motor vehicles. The department is asking the police forces throughout the state and more especially the state police, to see that the drivers of commercial motor vehicles keep a good watch behind and do not detain traffic unduly, also to arrest and promptly prosecute any driver of any heavy commercial motor vehicle who coasts down hill with his car out of control or who travels at a faster rate of speed than that for which the vehicle is rated. In other words, to promptly and vigorously enforce the speed law in connection with commercial motor vehicles. Driving of delivery wagons in cities has been somewhat improved during the month preceding. Many of the worst instances of speeding delivery wagons, meaning the type which cuts in and out of traffic, have been punished and many more have been warned through their employers.

Fatal Accidents Increase.

State traffic was unusually heavy, especially on Memoral Day and there have been an unusual number of fatal accidents during the month of May. As the fatal accident stands today in Connecticut, unless there is a change in conditions, there will be more deaths occasioned by motor vehicles in 1923 than in 1922. In 1922 Connecticut and Massachusetts were the two honor states in the Union. Each had a reduction of accidents to its credit and they were the only states that did. If this record is going to stand and Connecticut is going to remain at the top, the effort of every police department of every enforcement agency and of every state department dealing with the subject must be promptly put into complete activity and the driving public must be taught that a higher plane of driving is expected of each forthwith.

General accidents have increased to almost double what they were in May of 1922. This specific type of accident, however, has a somewhat lower average loss, indicating apparently that, while operating conditions on the highways and in the streets of cities have, on account of congestion, become much more complicated, this very fact has brought out better driving on the part of the average operator and that while there are more accidents on account of the severity of traffic conditions those accidents cause less average damage because the average control of the car is better.

The Record for May.

Appended hereto will be found some of the statistics which this office has gathered for the month of May.

General accidents for the month of May	1,200	878
Fatal accidents for month of May	23	10
Suspensions for month of May	346	109
General accidents for first five months	4500	2,646
Fatal accidents for first five months	82	49
Suspensions for first five months	1,411	709

How Citizens Can Help.

The specific suggestions which this department has so often put before the public of the state are as follows:

1. That, so far as possible, even during vacation time, the education of children in accident prevention be followed up; that fathers and mothers and guardians in charge of children be urged, through the press and by such other publicity means as may be available, to see that children do not play in dangerous locations.

2. That the discipline by police forces of the state take especial note in cities of bad passing of trolley cars and of speeding at intersections.

3. That municipal authorities in the state take especial thought for congested parking districts and, so far as possible, prevent the parking of cars too near corners, especially where the sightline is concealed. The object to be attained is to arrange the parking so that the standing cars will not at any time so narrow up the road that there will not be ample room for two vehicles to pass. In other words, parking should be so directed as not to throw traffic going in opposite directions into the same right of way.

4. On the highways every case of cutting in should be reported to the department by any citizen who sees it and it will be promptly punished. This does not mean that no one should ever pass a car from the rear, but does mean that when such passing is done it is imperative that good judgment be exercised and if such is not the case, then the man who makes the error in judgment should be punished. There must be punishment for errors in judgment in this matter and not only for actual accidents occasioned thereby.

5. The state police will enforce strictly the law of improper parking on curves where there is not sufficient space ahead so that the parked car can be readily seen and wherever possible will insist that parking on the highways of the state be off the traveled path.

6. The state police will enforce the rulings of this department relative to identification of cars, and persons, whose numbers are badly mutilated or defaced, or so dirty as not to be readily legible, may expect to be disciplined. Road driving will be more carefully supervised, arrests for errors will be more frequent and it may be generally stated that throughout the state the operator of a motor vehicle will be under stricter control than ever before.

Alloy for Gold.

A French chemist claims to have invented an alloy with all the brilliancy, durability and resistance to tarnishing of gold.

Foreman Thibeault Says Tanlac Is Worth Weight In Gold

"Tanlac has been worth its weight in gold to me, for besides relieving all my troubles, it has built me up over fifteen pounds in weight and made me feel like an altogether different man," is the statement of Marc Thibault, well-known foreman for the Union Street Electric Railway company, residing at 166 Nashau St., Fall River, Mass.

"My trouble started with my stomach, and I got to having rheumatism, constipation, headaches and dizzy spells and I guess about everything a bad stomach could cause. I couldn't eat or sleep to do any good, was always bloated with gas, and at night I often suffered so I would break out in a cold sweat.

"But Tanlac put an end to my troubles a year ago and left me with a wonderful appetite. Even now I get so hungry I wake up sometimes at night and eat a bite, and everything digests perfectly. I never expect to be without Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggist. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Proper Thing Now Is to Peel Off Soiled Skin

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions should use creams and rouges sparingly during the heated days. Better to use ordinary mercolized wax instead. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you've been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning, the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercolized wax gradually peels off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It accomplishes much more than cosmetics in keeping the complexion beautifully white, satiny and youthful, free from freckles, pimples, blotches and other blemishes. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

Mary has rosy cheeks now too

Mother says it's good for me
Because it's bran and all, you see.
I'll eat this bowlful, then another,
So I will grow as big as mother.

Mapl-Flake is a whole wheat flake with all the bran left in it. Not too much bran—why, you'd never know it's there unless we told you! But enough roughage to "sweep" the digestive tract—a natural regulator such as Mother Nature intended us to take.

No wonder Mary has rosy cheeks. In addition to the bran, she gets a well balanced, appetizing food. This whole wheat flake is rich in life-giving vitamins—it not only stimulates the appetite, but furnishes fuel to feed it.

Mapl-Flake is food—far better than medicine. Be a "Mapl-Flaker," forget about "taking bran" as a duty—eat it in Mapl-Flake as a pleasure.

By DAVID CORY

The Rooster's Favorite Story

"Awake, awake! It's early morn,
Don't stop to rub your eyes and yawn.
The morning glories are open again,
And the grass is wet with the dewy rain.

Merry and drear or the day has begun,
And the sky is bright with the merry sun."

Sang Little Miss Mousey at the foot of the stairs.

Out of bed hopped the two little rabbits and pretty soon they were dressed and ready for breakfast, after which they hopped out to the barn to see the little pig they had brought home with them the night before.

Mr. Lucky Lies in the Hammock

On reaching the barn, they found the old Red Rooster sitting on the wheelbarrow telling his favorite story to the little pig, and as I don't believe he ever told it to you, I'll let you peek in at the door and listen:

"Once upon a time, not so very long ago," commenced the Old Red Rooster, "a motherly old hen sat on thirteen eggs. After keeping them warm for maybe twenty-one days and a half, thirteen little chickens came out of the shells. Day by day, we grew larger and stronger, until by and by I was big enough to crow, but not so well as now," and the Old Red Rooster flapped his wings and shouted, "Cock-a-doodle-do!" and waking up the old owl in the hay loft who grew dreadfully angry as he was tired out hunting mice all night.

"Well, by and by," continued the Old Red Rooster, "I made up my mind to see the world, so one day I left the old farm and started off by myself. After a while I came to Bunnyville, where I met Mr. Lucky Lefthindfoot, who hired me to take care of his little garden in the summer time and rake up the leaves in the autumn. But pretty soon, I got tired of that and became a conductor on the Bunnybridge railroad. Then a letter carrier, carrying letters to all the little bunnies in Rabbitville and after that I came back to dear old Uncle Lucky—and here I am," and with a flap of his wings the Old Red Rooster shouted, "Cock-a-doodle-do!" three times and a half.

As he finished, he turned around and saw Uncle Lucky and Little Jack Rabbit standing in the doorway, picked up a hoe and went out into the garden.

Turning to the little pink nosed pig Uncle Lucky said: "Now whatever you do, don't dig up my vegetables and flowers."

"I promise," answered the little pig and jumping up on the front porch he lay down in the hammock to listen to Mrs. Sparrow teach her little birds the alphabet and in the next story if the hammock breaks, the little pig will roll on the porch and maybe hurt himself.

S. F. NOYES MAKES RECORD REAL ESTATE TRANSACTION

Through a sale consummated Wednesday, Sheepshead Bay the last of the former racetrack properties in Brooklyn, is to follow in the wake of the other courses in Brooklyn—that is, it is to be subdivided and sold for home sites. A deal long pending for the property was closed when Max Natanson became the owner of the realty acquiring it from the Harkness estate and other interests. In addition, Mr. Natanson also bought sixty cottages, bungalows, and Plum Beach Island, in Sheepshead Bay, together with other valuable acreage in the vicinity.

In all, Mr. Natanson becomes owner of nearly 660 acres in the vicinity of Sheepshead Bay, with a bay front age on Emmons avenue; also more than twenty blocks on Gravesend road and more than 5,000 feet on Ocean avenue at the foot of which there is a bridge crossing to Manhattan Beach. More than 6,000 lots are involved in the transaction, which was negotiated by the Charles F. Noyes Company.

Mr. Noyes, a former Norwich boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Noyes of 18 Lincoln avenue, closed the deal just before he left for a European trip. He sailed Thursday on the steamer Paris and will spend a few days in London and Paris before he returns next month. He takes the trip in the interest of his health in order that he may secure a needed rest.

The property is the largest piece of land in one ownership in the metropolitan district and the purchase is one of the largest ever closed in the history of New York real estate. Definite figures as to the selling price were withheld, but it is known that the Sheepshead Bay race track unit was mortgaged originally for $3,500,000 and that the property was assessed by the city at $2,600,000.

It is also understood that Mr. Natanson's original outlay on all his purchases, including the development of the parcels, will run close to $8,000,000, and that with the improvements to be begun this year the total will run close to $20,000,000.

Mr. Natanson's offer to purchase the property as a whole and to pay cash were the attractions which caused the sellers to accept his offer of the many received for the property, according to the brokers. Soon after the purchase the new owner resold a substantial portion of it to the Maridelbaum-Lewine syndicate, while other negotiations are pending with a combination of western capitalists to take over one thousand lots for immediate development.

In the days of horse racing in Brooklyn the Sheepshead Bay course was more popular than Brighton Beach and Gravesend, which have since been cut up for home building development. The Sheepshead Bay course was sold by the Coney Island Jockey club, in April, 1915 to a syndicate of automobile manufacturers for a motordrome. The late Harry S. Harkness was the president of the Sheepshead Bay Speedway Corporation. A bowl saucer track was erected and the first race for the Astor cup was held on it on October 2, 1915. Early in 1917, a judgment of $2,040,000 was entered in favor of the Coney Island Jockey Club against the Sheepshead Bay Speedway Corporation and shortly thereafter the property was taken over by the late Harry S. Harkness. The saucer track built at considerable expense for automobile racing has since been removed and the property has been used for exhibition purposes. The police department has held its annual field day contests there.

LESSONS FROM GIDEON IN BIBLE STUDY CLASS

Wednesday evening at the Norwich Y. M. C. A. a group of men met to spend an hour in the study of the Bible and the discussion proved most interesting. The topic of the study was The Call of Gideon, and the scripture used was the sixth chapter of Judges. In the discussion the following points were brought out: When Gideon really came to see that God had called him to the hard task, he yielded himself to it, and at once threw down the altar of Baal, even though his own father was a worshipper of that false God. Gideon not only threw down the altar of Baal, but he also built an altar unto the true God. The angel told Gideon that he was "a mighty man of valor." God wants the real men; He has no place for weaklings; it takes all there is in man to be true to God and the tasks God gives him to do. Though God expects us to do the hard things, He does not ask us to do them alone; He is always with us in the task. It seems as though there are all too few men who are willing to attempt the hard things; to go with the minority. There are too many followers, and too few leaders. One of the reasons why the prohibition law is not better enforced is that there are not enough men who are willing to show the spirit that Gideon had when he once saw what his duty was. The best citizens of any city can have what they want in law enforcement, if they are fearless and stand together long enough. What the world needs today is more Gideons or men who have the heroic spirit.

TELLING IT STRAIGHT

Said Dan McGann to a foreign man who worked at the self-same bench:
"Let me tell you this," said he for emphasis he flourished a Stillson wrench.
"Don't talk to me of this bourjoisee, don't open your mouth to speak
Of your Socialists or your Anarchists, don't mention the Bolsheveek.
For I've had enough of this foreign stuff; I'm as sick as a man can be
Of the speesh of hate, and, I'm telling you straight that this the land for me.

"If you want to brag, just take that flag an' boost of its field of blue.
An' praise the dead an' the blood they shed for the peace of the likes of you.
"I'll hear no more," and he waved once more his wrench in a forceful way,
"O' the winning breed o' some Russian breed. I stand for the U. S. A.
I'm done with your fads, and your wildeyed lads; don't flourish your rag o' red.
Where I can see, or at night there'll be tall candles around you bed.

"So tip your hat to a flag like that. Thank God for its stripes an' stars.
Thank God you're here where the roads are clear away from your kings and czars.
But first an' last I am standin' fast for all that's American.
So don't you speak of the Bolsheveki; it's sick of that stuff I am.
One God, one flag is the creed I brag. I'm boostin' for Uncle Sam."

JEWETT CITY

The new Ashland float was launched Thursday morning. It has been constructed by different members of the club under direction of Prentice Chase. It measures 16 by 36 feet, and is of scow construction. It has a 5 by 16 foot diving platform. There are two landings, the first one ten feet and the second fourteen feet above the water. A chute is to be added, but it was thought best to wait until after the Fourth to add it, so that the contestants in diving may have an opportunity to practice at once. Entries are coming in all the time for the water meet on the Fourth. The Mathieu twins, girls 11 years old from South Coventry, are sure to be here. They are in great demand, receiving this week an offer to go to Fort Wayne, Indiana. They are to go to Florida next winter.

Dr. Hugh Campbell will hold his monthly clinic this morning at 10.30 at the Red Cross room. The district nurse will give any information or call for anyone who wishes to attend.

Arthur M. Brown, F. S. Campbell, L. G. Buckingham, A. R. Young, J. H. Tracy, T. E. Lee and J. P. Gorman attended the Masonic Veterans' association in Willimantic on Thursday.

Austin Harris has returned from Backus hospital where he was operated upon for a throat trouble which has extended over several months and had become serious enough to incapacitate him for work or sports.

The Congregational church members hold an important meeting tonight to vote upon the names of a large class of new members, who are to be received into the church Sunday.

Without disturbing the porcelain or the packing, a recently patented spark plug can be thoroughly and readily cleaned. It is a modification of the separable type of spark plug, and is constructed so that part of the iron shell that screws into the cylinder can be unscrewed from the rest of the plug making it easy to clean both the electrodes and the porcelain insulation.

An improved movie screen is said practically to eliminate eyestrain and render the projected picture as clearly visible from a position at one side of the house as from a seat directly in front of the screen, says Popular Mechanics. It is made of a fabric to which is given a pure white surface embossed with a multitude of small squares, resembling the surface of a miniature waffle iron.

A three-point wave-changer switch with locking attachment is now available for radio generators. The switch arm is so arranged that when it is moved across the face of the appliance it may be locked in either of three spring contacts. Each of these contacts gives the necessary connection for a different length of radio wave. By this method of securely fastening the arm in position on the contacts there is no possibility of the arm jarring or vibrating out of place.

SHORT STORIES OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

Never Forgotten

By Hazel Courtney

"If the jewel is not found, that curse of theft will hang over the name of Arnold." The sweet-faced old grandmother bent low over her needle work, a pearly tear glistening in her mild blue eyes.

"Could they not even give him the benefit of the doubt?" asked the pretty granddaughter cuddling close to the old lady's knee.

"No, dear, they would not. The diamond pendant suddenly disappeared when Lady MacTeague was giving a grand reception. Your grandfather was the last one to dance with her. Everybody knew Robert was deeply in debt, he would gamble. When she discovered her loss the whole crowd of guests joined in the search. Every inch of the house and grounds were gone over. The party broke up in disorder. The pendant was worth thousands of pounds. The next day my husband was taken to jail. He was seen to have a large amount of money and paid his debts. The constables claimed they saw him talking with a Jew in the shadow of the old mill and were sure he had sold the diamonds to him. The pendant was not found, Robert refused to tell where he got the money, (even to me he refused) so they transported him to the colonies. I came with him. He was bound to a planter here for 30 years. He was a thief and I the wife of a thief. All my children were born while he was in bondage. He always denied to me that he took the pendant. He knew nothing about it at all. When I urged, pleaded and begged him to tell where he got the money to pay his gambling debts he would snap his mouth shut and walk away. Your father was our last baby. Robert was killed when his company under command of Mad Anthony Wayne stormed the British works. He was always bitter against the British rule and asked his bond master to let him fight with the Colonials. Your old granny will soon join him, Muriel, and all I can leave you is the name of Arnold with its tainted crest."

On a beautiful Spring day they laid Grandma Arnold beside her soldier husband in the little Virginia churchyard. A few, very few of the aristocratic neighbors came to the services. Blue blooded, thin lipped, high strung scions of Virginia's first families, while they all respected the dear old woman and many of the young men secretly admired the winsome Muriel, none could forget Robert Arnold was a bond slave, a thief and his stock must carry the curse. America was now a nation, the colonies had beaten the mother country in battle. Yet loftier than many a titled noble of Europe, the aristocracy of old Virginia was silk stockinged to the last degree.

A staunch clipper ship from New England laden with goods dropped anchor in the James river. Much of its cargo was a re-shipment from Boston of foreign goods. Blue-eyed, ruddy faced John Porter, first mate of the "Dauntless," he was of sturdy New England stock, a sailor man whose ancestors for generations battled the briny deep. On the streets of Jamestown he met Muriel Arnold. The soft brown eyes dropped modestly as his searching glance took in the petite figure and warm olive complexion. That night at the agent's house he was introduced to her. The next year she went to Boston as the wife of John Porter. In 1813 the sloop of war under command of Captain John Porter was the terror of the British and its commerce. When peace was once more at hand, Captain John Porter and his wife went to London as naval officer of the American embassy.

London was all a-flutter over the magnificent entertainments of Lady Constance MacTeague. The manor house had been re-opened for a season of lavish fetes. The Porters were introduced to the titled lady at a garden party and she immediately formed a strong attachment for the dark-eyed Virginia beauty.

The first thing Muriel saw when she entered the grim stone pile known as Caverly Hall, was the cold, austere face of lady Mary MacTeague hung over the big fireplace. In the shadowy firelight that evening Lady Constance told the story how Lady Mary had lost her valuable necklace which was never found and how a young man of the neighborhood had been sent to the Colonies as a branded thief. She did not see her new girl friend pale and tremble. Captain Porter knew nothing as Muriel did not tell him the family history.

The room given the Porters was on the second floor front. A gloomy shadowy room finished in walnut. Long windows to the floor. The bed a massive four-poster affair with heavy silken draperies. Captain Porter was asleep in ten seconds after he slid under the covers. Muriel could not sleep. The story of Lady Constance with the vivid recollection of what Grandma Arnold told her years before and now she was here in the same house where it all occurred. How she wished she could solve the mystery and clear the family name! Suddenly she started up in bed. The room was alight with a pale glow. The hall door opened silently and she saw a shadowy form float across the space to the bed. She wanted to scream and tried to catch hold of her sleeping husband, but her voice was dumb and her whole body paralyzed with fright. The figure was that of a young woman, her hair in a cloudy mass. The dark eyes burned like fiery coals in the shining face. Groping, gliding about the room it seemed to be searching for something. The long bony hands grasped the footboard of the bed. Terror-stricken Muriel tried to cry out, but it died a choking gasp in her throat. The cold sweat started from every pore of her body. With a twist the ghost turned off the carved ornament of the footboard post. A thin arm of light went down in the hollow post. Slowly it drew out and Muriel saw a string of glittering jewels suspended in the air radiating colored fire in the glow of the spirit body. The spectre fondled the string of jewels, then glided over to the dresser. Staring Muriel saw the shadowy hands press a finger in the carving and a little drawer spring out. A bundle of papers fluttered to the floor. The ghost picked them up and slid over to the bed, and laid them in the lap of the horrified woman. With a sob of terror Muriel fell back in the pillows. She had fainted. Her husband jumped out of bed quickly and lighted the candles. His foot kicked the cluster of diamonds on the floor. Recovering Muriel gasped out the details of the ghostly visitor and told him the family story. Dawn was lightening the east. By the big window they read the message.

"I have never forgotten, I can never forget," ran the fine writing. "I gave all to Robert Arnold, my love, my virtue, my heart. Extravagance was my curse. I must have money. I mortgaged my diamonds. The night of the dance Robert held me in his arms for the last time. We knew, he a commoner, could never have been the husband of a MacTeague. The Jews from London were here that demanding my diamonds because I could not pay the loans. To spite me Robert had married Olive Burns, the squire's daughter. I wanted him to stay single and be near me. He cursed me for my lack of love and asked me to fly with him that night. I refused. The serving maid said the Jews were at the scullery door demanding to see me. I slipped upstairs and hid the pendant in the bed post and then said I had been robbed. Just a moment in the mad scramble of the search Robert talked to me in the rose garden. He offered to stand for the theft to save me and I consented. The name of MacTeague must not be smirched. In my selfishness I hoped Olive would spare him as a convict and I would get him a pardon and keep him near me, but she went with him to the Colonies. I gave him my diamond ring. He procured a loan from the Jew to pay his debts with my ring as pawn. Now I am going to die. My baby cousin, I kill its little body in death and I am dying too, now, of a terrible disease, but I can never forget."

Lady Constance took the diamonds from Muriel. She published a long account in the London papers clearing the name of Arnold of theft. Papers in the Colonies reprinted the story. In the grave of Robert Arnold at Jamestown, Virginia, Muriel placed a metal urn with the diary of Lady Mary MacTeague enclosed.

Mother to the Rescue

By Claire Wesson

"I CAN'T stand it, I won't stand it, I just detest him when he acts like that!"

Three years of married life had not brought perfect bliss to Margaret Saunders, and at the breakfast table that morning the last straw had been added. With her head buried in her arms on the unclean table, Margaret was crying and talking to herself, after months of patient forbearance.

The front door opened quietly, and a gray haired woman, carrying a traveling-bag, entered the cottage.

She stopped a moment, evidently surprised and dismayed, but sure of her ground, walked up to the girl and put both arms around the stooped shoulders and pressed a kiss on the soft rumpled hair. With a startled cry of alarm Margaret jumped to her feet; then, with an exclamation of "Oh, mother!" she blushed in nervous embarrassment at having been caught.

It was not Margaret's mother who had appeared so suddenly, but Jack Saunders' mother, who had not only mothered her own son, but had tried to help Margaret over the time when she had been left an orphan next door to the Saunders' home.

Mrs. Saunders was too wise to ask the girl the cause for all this outburst, but with intuitive insight ignored the situation. "You see, my dear, I wanted to see you and Jack and just came on to spend a week while father was away on business. I hope it is all right."

Margaret, in her pleasure in seeing someone whom she really loved, forgot her own grievance and with true joy and cordiality made Jack's mother more than welcome.

Mrs. Saunders had soon changed from her street costume to a gingham dress and apron and was busily engaged in helping clear the house of the daily morning disorder. During this times he was relating all the news from her home town, much to the joy of disheartened Margaret. Then, adroitly, she came around to plans for lunch. She had brought with her several delicious dainties that only mothers know how to make, and the two women had a real spread. Margaret, although now composed, was too full of her weeks of irritation to completely cover her feeling, and with girlish excitement and enthusiasm finally exclaimed, "Oh dear, how good it does seem to eat something one didn't make and pay for, and have it just as mother makes it." That was all, but mother Saunders was too wise not to see through the whole trouble in a twinkling of an eye, and when she acted she acted quickly.

Before Margaret knew what was happening she was packing her suitcase, per the orders of mother Saunders, and was taking the train to spend a week with one of her girl friends who was to be married in a few days. Mrs. Saunders had quietly remarked when Margaret questioned the advisability of such a trip, that she guessed she could manage Jack as she had had several years of experience with that obstreperous youth. "Now my dear, don't you worry one minute. Just enjoy yourself and I'll take care of this end of the line."

When Jack arrived home that night he was surely delighted, but somewhat dismayed at such sudden unannounced arrangements. Dinner was ready, and mother and son sat down to a real feast. With perfectly prepared food, Jack felt that he had never enjoyed a meal so much in his life. "Of course, I miss Margaret, but it seems good to eat mother's food again," said Jack, as he pushed back from the table.

The next morning Mrs. Saunders cooked breakfast and Jack was again delighted, but if he could have seen the forecast of events he perhaps wouldn't have so easily fallen into his mother's trap. Jack's enthusiasm that night at dinner time wasn't quite as evident as the night before. Then for the remaining week he was treated first to a real treat and then to a miserable excuse for real food. His boyish loyalty to his mother compelled him to keep his peace, but more than once he was sorely tempted to remonstrate. Then gradually Margaret's wonderful ability at preparing certain delectable dishes was suggested to his mother with no attempt on her part to satisfy his wishes. Mrs. Saunders many times scolded herself for such behavior to a son, but each time she appeased her conscience with the remark. "He need it and I hope he always remembers it."

Toward the end of the week Margaret received a letter from her husband which made her somewhat puzzled. It read something like this, "My dear, I shall certainly be glad to have you home again. I am glad that you can have a good time and such a nice rest, but I do miss you so much. It is fine to have mother here, but somehow the things she cooks don't taste the way they used to. Mother made an apple pie yesterday, but I must confess it didn't taste like they used to when I was a kid, and it surely couldn't hold a candle to the kind you make. I never realized how good your things were until this week. I certainly won't ever say a word about anything you ever give me again, or refer to mother's wonderful cooking. I realize now that I've been doing this altogether too much of late, and I certainly see now that I was all wrong about it. Mother can cook well enough, but, oh, boy, me for the good things that only wife knows how to prepare.'"

This isn't all that Jack said in his letter, but Margaret didn't read any further at the moment. This was enough to give her complete insight into the dark plot which mother Saunders was putting into execution. She realized now, that she at least was blessed with a perfectly wonderful mother-in-law who had divined the source of her daughter's unhappiness and was cleverly smoothing out the wrinkles of her married life. Of course mother Saunders was a splendid cook, for she had learned many of her secrets and had adopted many of her recipes, and now mother was simply working this trick deliberately upon her unsuspecting son just to make him appreciate his wife. "What a wonderful mother she is!" Margaret exclaimed aloud as she resumed the reading of her letter.

The young wife's visit was finally at an end and she departed for home. She did not telephone the office as she usually did on her arrival in town, but went directly home.

Jack's mother was there to greet her with a merry twinkle in her eye. Margaret could hardly wait to get her coat and hat off to pull out that last letter from Jack.

"Mother," she exclaimed, "what have you been doing to Jack? You ought to read this letter he wrote me! He actually says that I can cook, and even better than—than—"

Mr. Cheetham Settled

By Monte Darrell

"I'M going to have white satin," said Arvilla.

"But it won't be of much service to you after the wedding," argued Eudora.

"I don't care," returned Arvilla, "I've always wanted white satin and I'm going to have it."

"Shall you have a veil?"

Arvilla considered. "I don't know. Perhaps not," regretfully, "seeing as I'm only going to have a small wedding. It's awfully good of you, Eudora, to let me be married here!"

Arvilla Cunningham had taught school ever since she was 16, and she was now perilously near 40. She was a colorless creature with drab hair and eyes, and when I say that she presented a straight-line mouth to the world, you know just what kind of a teacher she was.

No one knew by what wiles Arvilla had ensnared the affections of Cyrus Hathaway Cheetham. The courtship had been carried on by correspondence. It may be a sufficient explanation, however, to say that both Mr. Cheetham and Miss Cunningham were subscribers to a delightful little paper called "Wedding Bells." Mr. Cheetham had subscribed to it with a view to whiling away the tedium of long evenings on the farm, but Arvilla, toiling in the city schools, had meant business.

"Where did you meet him?" Eudora had inquired breathlessly, when Arvilla had confided to her the engagement.

"At Cousin Sarah's, when I was visiting her at Wellsport," Arvilla had truthfully replied. She didn't explain that the visit to Cousin Sarah's had been prearranged with Mr. Cheetham. Cousin Sarah had been an innocent accessory to the arrangement, as she supposed the two to be old friends.

Arvilla found that she had drawn more of a prize than she had anticipated, for Mr. Cheetham proved to be a fairly good-looking bachelor of ample means and no encumbrances. What Mr. Cheetham thought of Arvilla didn't appear, but the arrangements for the wedding went on.

Eudora thought Arvilla extravagant in her wedding outfit, for she was making big inroads into the little sum she had put by with much scrimping and saving, but Arvilla, assured of a comfortable future, was quite reckless in her expenditure. Her poor, starved soul had yearned for the finery she had never been able to buy.

She displayed her trousseau to every caller with pride. Even Mr. Sweetsir, Eudora's father, was dazzled by the elegance of Arvilla's wardrobe, and he was accustomed to trousseaux, too, for he had buried his third wife only the year before.

The wedding day dawned and the sun shone merrily, as is proper for the sun to do on such an important occasion. The bridegroom had arrived the night before, and registered at the hotel. He came over quite early in the morning to call on his fiances. Arvilla introduced him to Eudora blushingly. Her hair was done up in rubber cocoons preparatory for the evening. Mr. Cheetham stood first on one foot and then on the other, while Arvilla showed him the wedding presents. She followed him to the door, for he had refused Eudora's invitation to take dinner with them, and laid a possessive hand on his coat sleeve as they stood in the doorway.

"Mebbe I won't be over again until—until evenin'" he stammered. The ceremony was to be at 8 o'clock.

"That will be all right," returned Arvilla. "You can look about town a little. It will be your only opportunity, for we shall be leaving on the 9 o'clock express, you know." She gave him a coquettish glance.

Eudora and a young cousin of Arvilla's helped dress the bride. Arvilla was in a tremor of excitement. Her cheeks were prettily pink and the rubber cocoons had, somehow or other, produced a fascinating wave of her hair. The wedding dress was certainly becoming.

The clock struck 8 before Eudora had finished "hooking up" the bride. Arvilla was uneasy. "Hurry up, Eudora! I don't want to keep the company waiting."

"That clock is 15 minutes fast," lied Eudora. "I'll go down now and see if everything is ready. I'll holler right up when it's time for you to come down."

Eudora found the minister and his wife and the assembled guests waiting impatiently, but—there was no bridegroom.

"Where's Mr. Cheetham?" she asked wildly.

"He ain't come yet," exclaimed her husband.

"Rodney Fitz! Ain't come? Why, it is after 8 o'clock!"

"Arvilla'll have a fit!" his wife exclaimed. "Go telephone to the hotel and hurry him up."

"I had Rodney telephone to the hotel and the clerk said he left on the afternoon train. Oh, Arvilla!" Eudora sank into a chair helplessly.

Arvilla began to unfasten her dress.

"What are you going to do?" questioned Eudora.

"Take off this dress. There's no use keeping it on, is there?"

Eudora tried to comfort her friend, but Arvilla was like stone, and refused to talk.

The next day Arvilla received a letter from Mr. Cheetham. In it he bluntly stated that he did not want to get married. He had had his liberty too long, and when it came to the point he could not "face the music," as he expressed it. He was sorry to put her to so much trouble, and hoped that she would forgive and forget him.

"C. H. Cheetham to Arvilla Cunningham, Dr.

To one wedding outfit	$ 179.27
To loss of school position	650.00
To blighted affection	?
To injured pride	5,000.00
Total	$5,829.27

"Please settle at once and avoid legal proceedings."

Mr. Cheetham settled.

The floor was littered with books and Hardupp was bent over a big washtub containing a soggy mass of torn book leaves and water.

"Great Scott!" cried Waggs. "What ever are you doing, Hardupp?"

"Congratulations!"

"You soak paper in water," continued Hardupp, "then form it into hard balls the size of a hockey ball. Let them dry and they burn splendidly. Thing of it, old man, all my old returned manuscripts will be enough to keep my room heated through the whole Winter."

A Spirit Passed That Way

By Margaret Taylor

SHE lived with her husband and a grandchild, a weak-faced little boy who was 11 years old and looked but 7 or less. There were horses, a cow, a well-fed cat, 50 or more chickens and the flowers.

Her husband was not a kind man, though to tell the truth, his looks belied his natural bent, for his face was pleasant. If you visited his lonely home, perched up there on the hillside, absolutely embedded in a riot of flowers, you might imagine the man was just a trifle above the average, since his kindly manner pleased most persons, save the ones he lived with. The woman showed the ravages of years, its sadness, its hurts and keen disappointments. Whatever it was that blighted her life, like a stroke of lightning, she had never revived from it. It killed her daughter, that same cruel abuse, and left the orphan boy as a tragic reminder of abuse, neglect, sometimes cold, but not hunger, for the man loved to eat, and like the usual cormorant, supplied himself with plenty of food. At times she followed the plow. The boy worked in the fields and toiled when his tiny body was too tired to work. He slept with the cat.

If love had ever been her portion, it was not so when she began planting flowers. First a few morning-glories grew over an old rack that stood near a bench where she did enormous, dirty weekly washings. The vines well repaid her late in the summer with a shower of blue and pink bells, such tiny places where she sometimes imagined fairies lived when the dew fell and the tiny folk sought shelter.

Later she planted roses and from one person, then another, she got a cutting of some geranium, or lovely foliage plant. Had he realized that she was doing it because she loved the flowers, the chances are he might have done worse than he did, for one Winter night, he purposely let the fires go out, because she asked him not to move an immense blooming Christmas cactus at the window. It was magnificent with its full hundred double scarlet flowers, and to her was her Christmas gift. But the fires went down and he would not permit her to replenish them with coal.

Silently she moved among her dead children, the flowers of her little self-made world. When he went in the stable to milk, she threw herself down in an old arm chair and cried herself sick. Why was he so mean? What had she done to deserve this unkind treatment? The little boy, then a baby, cried, and she consoled him with the love language which only a tender mother can speak with kisses and caresses. Then the man came into the kitchen and she went about her daily toil, the worst preparation any woman ever made for Christmas.

Her flowers had been her pride. But Spring came and the flowers outside, the faithful perennials, were more gorgeous than ever, and because folks praised him for his beautiful surroundings, he finally let her keep her flowers; but once in a while, probably because a certain amount of devilishness had to express itself, he would cut off a favorite rose, or accidentally uproot some special flower. He cut her finest flowers and carried them to his friends, and many of her best ones he sold when people wanted flowers for Decoration Day, without giving her a cent of the money.

She grew much older and was so little, old and shriveled, like a piece of brown leather, and at times when she raised a fair blossom in her hand to drink in its heavenly beauty, the contrast was painful, for her tired hand was coarse and dark.

Year after year passed in the same desultory manner and one Winter he refused to get her medicine for a bad cold. She was so uncomplaining that he could not think she was seriously ill. But she was, and when help finally came, it was too late.

At the funeral, some person suggested putting some of the flowers in her hand. They gathered the choice ones, and when he saw them, he smiled, took them off and threw them into the roaring fire in the next room. As she had lived, so was she to be buried, empty-handed, without color in her life or present at her death.

The boy went with other relatives, but the man remained at the house. Then he realized his loss. Something new was born in his hard-shelled old heart. What had made his life was no longer there. His own prepared meals were tasteless. He felt the presence of something in the house that did not speak to him. He wanted it to make itself manifest, to again minister to his desires and his needs; but that something moved like a shadow wherever he went. He saw her going among the flowers, but not to tenderly lift them or put water in the crocks or boxes. One by one the flowers died, and in vain he spoke aloud and begged her not to kill the flowers. His loneliness kept him awake, and when awake and the windows rattled, he heard her at her work and went to see if she really were there. Then, with chattering teeth, he returned to his cold bed to lie awake and regret his past life. A board creaked and he knew she was sniping the life of another flower. He forgot that they needed water, so they got none. Little by little, they all died. Spring came, and here is the mystery: the perennials did not return. Some say it was because that was an unusually cold Winter, that they were frozen. But we know, we always knew it; that Kate came back to take them with her into the flowery kingdom where lonely women sometimes go.

Bobby wanted a donkey—and he had seen the donkey in a near-by field.

"What would happen if I stole that donkey?" he asked his father.

Bobby thought a while, and then said:

"You wouldn't forget to feed it while I was away, would you, father?"

TURN FOR BETTER IN MARKET.

New York, June 28.—The reactionary trend of stock prices, which has been in progress for five consecutive days, came to an abrupt halt late today, closing prices of active issues showing net gains of 1 to 3 points. The turn for the better did not come, however, until after speculators for the decline had gaged another attack on the list which sent 75 stocks to the new low prices of the year.

The stock shift in speculative sentiment was ascribed to conditions within the market itself rather than to any outside new developments. The rapidity of the advance in many stocks was generally regarded as indicative of an over-sold condition. While market observers still are divided as to whether the bull market which began in the summer of 1921 has ended, there seem to be a unanity of opinion that technical conditions today warranted a rally.

Short-covering operations unquestionably furnished the impetus for today's advance although commission houses reported increased buying by so-called "bargain hunters" who were attracted by the high yields offered by a number of the seasoned dividend payers whose quoted values have declined with the rest of the list.

The so-called pivotal stocks, namely United States Steel, Baldwin, Studebaker, Amerliman Can and American Smelting, all closed 1 to 2 points above yesterday's final quotations. Gains of 2 1-2 to 5 3-4 points were registered by American Locomotive, Bosh Magneto, Associated Dry Goods, Davison Chemical, Dupont, International Harvester, Virginia Carolina Chemical preferred and Remington Typewriter.

For the first time since the May earnings statements were published, the railroad shares made a favorable response to the unusually good income reports. The first 54 Class 1 roads to report show combined net income of $61,552,000 as against $58,136,000 in April and $42,123,000 in May, 1922. Atchison, New York Central, Northern Pacific, Chicago & Northwestern and several others showed net gains of a point or more. Baltimore & Ohio dropped 1 1-4 in reflection of speculative disappointment over the failure of the directors to resume dividends at yesterday's meeting.

Call money held at 4 per cent. throughout the day, the renewal rate being the highest this year. Firmness of call money is regarded as a temporary incident due to mid-year settlements. Bankers asked 5 1-4 per cent. for time money with 5 bid.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was the establishment of a new low record for the year by demand sterling at $4.59 1-8, off 1 1-2 cents. Other principal rates showed moderate recessions, French francs quoted around 6.12 cents and German marks at .0007.

BOND MARKET

New York, June 28. — Conflicting price movements occurred in today's trading in bonds when a part of the list turned upward after an early period of depression. Improved support given the stock market influenced aggressive buying of many bonds at the lower levels.

Active U. S. government bonds were reactionary most of the day and closed slightly lower than yesterday's final figures. Foreign government issues rallied throughout the list, Lyons 6s, and Marseilles 6s, each gaining two points.

Investment railroad bonds rallied from fractions to a point while others registered losses of from one point to more than three points. New Haven convertible 6s dropped 3 1-2 points, and New York, Westchester & Boston 4 1-2s were 3 1-4 lower. Third Avenue refunding 4s lost one point.

Virginia Carolina Chemical Company bonds rallied on an official statement denying rumors attacking the financial integrity of the corporation, the 7 1-2s, with warrants, gaining 4 1-2 points and the 7s, 5. Marland Oil 7 1-2s, with warrants, yielded 4 points and a dozen other domestic industrials yielded a point or more. Cerro De Pasco 8s advanced 2 points.

Total sales (par value)) were $13,707,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 28.—Wheat took a sudden upward swing in price today largely as a result of estimates that within the last two days 4,000,000 bushels of future deliveries had been bought for seaboard account. The market closed unsettled, 7-8 to 1 3-8 cents net higher, with September 102 7-8 t o103 and December 105 2-4 to 105 7-8. Corn finished 1-8 to 7-8 cent. off, oats unchanged to 3-8 cent up, and provisions at 2 to 7 cents decline.

Active buying on the part of commission houses together with scantiness of country offerings led to sharply higher prices for wheat as soon as the market opened. The ascent of values was still further stimulated by the fact that wheat quotations at Liverpool failed to reflect yesterday's decline here. However, new export business was slow to develop, and apparently foreigners were disinclined to follow any advance. On the other hand, evident reluctance of growers to sell at prices which would net less than $1 a bushel on the harvest field acted as a decided check on bearish sentiment.

Reactions from the day's top prices in the wheat market were of fair extent, and were ascribed more or less to profit taking by speculators who had been quick to participate in the early rush to the buying side. According to some authorities, this rush was in some degree due to revival of hopes for a settlement between France and Germany. Rallies today in the New York stock market were also talked of as having had considerable influence as a bullish factor in wheat.

Assertions that the stock of corn in Chicago would show an increase this week did a good deal to weaken the corn market, and so too, did favorable crop conditions. Wheat Wheat strength steadied oats.

NORWICH TOWN

The annual picnic of the Intermediate and Junior Christian Endeavorers of the First Congregational church, was held Tuesday afternoon from 3.30 to 7.30 o'clock, at the home of the leader. Miss Susan Hyde of Washington street. Out of door games were indulged in on the lawn, until the happy company of young folks were forced inside because of the severe thunder shower.

At six o'clock, the thirty children and friends, enjoyed a fine supper which comprised many kinds of sandwiches, olives, punch and a variety of decorated cakes and wafers. In the absence of the church pastor, a very interesting feature which preceded the supper, was the singing of the blessing used at picnics by missionary families in India, by Mrs. Harriet Hyde Zumbo and her daughters, Kathryn and Betty Zumbro, who this spring returned to the United States from India. Among the guests were Mrs. Lewis H. Hyde and children Lewis, and Miss Mary Hyde, of Winchester, Va., who are passing some time at the Hyde home on Washington street.

It is the Sunday evening preaching service, that is to be omitted at the First Methodist Episcopal church, during the remainder of the summer, because of the heat. The regular Sunday morning worship will continue as usual at this church.

Walter Durr of Town street, left Tuesday afternoon for the west, where he is to take up a position with the Sunley, Gay Electrical Co., of South Dakota. Already Mr. Durr has two brothers located there, who have been most successful in business, John Durr, former Norwich Town residents.

After residing on Town street for the past year, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Strong, are expecting to move on Friday, to their home lately purchased on Haywood street, Colchester.

During the severe storm of Tuesday afternoon, a large tree on the Earl Browning place on New London turnpike, was struck by a bolt of lightning and split from top to bottom.

BOLTON

Miss Ella Sumner has returned home from the Russell Sage school, Troy, N. Y., where she has completed a two years' course. On the way home Miss Sumner visited with friends in White Plains, N. Y., and Passaic, N. J.

Mrs. Jane E. Sumner has returned to her home in Bolton for the summer after spending the winter in Hartford with her daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. McGurk and three children of Hartford have come to their home at the Center for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Douglas Fryer sailed last Saturday from New York on the steamship Majestic for a summer's stay in England, France and other countries. On their return in the fall Mr. Fryer is to teach in the University of Utah in Salt Lake City. Mr. Fryer recently took a degree of doctor of psychology.

Battista Anaidi's barn was struck by lightning and burned Sunday afternoon. The place is known as Lent Brothers' peach orchard.

The storm was a regular tornado, blowing over corn cribs, uprooting trees and breaking great branches. Mrs. Madeline Silliano had seven apple and a peach tree blown over by the roots, taking a majority of the apple trees on her farm.

COURTNEY PITT ATTENDING LAKE GEORGE OUTING

Courtney Pitt son of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. R. Pitt of Broadway, has been attending this week the outing for agents of the Curtis Publishing company of Philadelphia. He is accompanied by his mother, who has written The Bulletin an interesting account of the outing held at Hulett's Landing, Lake George, N. Y.

Mrs. Pitt's letter is as follows:

Lake George,
June 24th.

On leaving Norwich for this most unique outing, it was suggested to me that the readers of the "Bulletin" might care for a pen picture of this, the latest enterprising experiment of the Curtis Publishing Co.

Throughout the length and breadth of the United States and in part of Canada, the Curtis Company to a great extent defines the mighty co-operative force of the boy. Upon this fact the administration is building many plans for the greater extension of the products of the company. It stimulates the energy and interest of its district agents who are boys usually from 13 to 18 years of age. Two juvenile conventions have been recently held. One of these calling together the agents from New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, was held in Philadelphia at the Bellevue-Stratford in April. The second of these gatherings is now in session at Hulett's Landing, Lake George. The territory here represented is all New England, New York and a number of agents from Philadelphia.

The company believes in "Casting Bread Upon the Waters," having faith that it will return to them even before "Many Days." To this end and also for the all-round good of the boys this entire body is gathered at this beautiful spot on Lake George, as the guests of the Curtis Publishing Company.

The Hulette house and its interests are given over completely to our comfort, business and entertainment. The guests number 150 district agents (the boys), 20 superintendents, sixty or more mothers and fathers who have come with their sons under sixteen years of age, and a staff of men who are "seeing this great undertaking through." The entire expense of the transportation of this company is paid from the company treasury. Each boy is told to make out his expense account, and that of the parent, if he is accompanied, and these accounts are paid without question, including even the taxi-service, pullman and the necessary "tipping."

Monday and Tuesday have been devoted to four sessions of two hours and one-half each, full to the limit of practical business-training and inspiring suggestion. I have been delighted as I have listened to the clear straightforward methods drilled into these open young minds. Such training will bear fruit long after Curtis days, indeed may shape many a career.

The later afternoons are devoted to recreation, swimming, ball, tennis and boating. Just now a wonderful baseball game is in progress between the lads of New York and New England. They tell me Courtney Hitz is cheering his lungs out and is even making some fine "runs."

Last evening a screen was set up on the lawn in front of the hotel. Seats were built of boards and we were shown a fine film, "The Last of the Mohicans." As the moon kindly hid her face during the performance, the setting was ideal. Preceding the film, Dr. Parker, state archaeologist, gave us something of the history of the Iroquois Indians, who once claimed this beautiful region as their "happy hunting grounds." A similar entertainment is planned for tonight.

Tomorrow morning we say farewell to the Hulettes! One of the goodly lake steamers is to take us on an historic trip up the lake. After which we shall return by rail to Albany, the point of distribution. Our journey hither was made via Worcester and Albany, with a stop-over in the latter city. Through the courtesy of the management Courtney and I hope to see the "Hudson by Daylight" on the return. All honor to the business corporation which thus generously wins the loyalty of its agents.

POSTMASTER'S HINT ON SUMMER VISITORS' MAIL

This is the season of the year which makes trouble for the post office because of the arrival of summer visitors, who have mail come addressed to them, especially on R. F. D. routes, without showing the name of the family whom they are visiting.

The Norwich postmaster requests that families expecting such visitors furnish the names of their expected guests to the post office and also notify their visitors to have their mail sent in care of the family name where they are staying. This will facilitate the delivery.

PREPARING FOR NORWICH SEASON IN PLAY GROUNDS FOR CHILDREN

Harold Anson Bruce, recently appointed superintendent of recreation in Norwich, arrived in this city on Thursday morning from Philadelphia and will immediately take up his duties under the supervision of the local recreation commission. The playgrounds work is planned to cover ten weeks of activity for the boys and girls and young people of the community.

The municipal playgrounds commission held a meeting Thursday night at which the appointment for playgrounds teachers were under consideration and announcement of the selections may be expected today, it is reported.

Lecture by Miss Sherburne.

The fourth session of the Recreation Institute was held at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday morning, the subject of the discussion being Leadership. During the demonstration period following the lecture, games and activities were presented that are suitable for children between the ages of ten and twelve. Friday's lecture will be the Practical Conduct of Recreation Centers and folk dances and games suitable for older girls will be given the class. Harold Anson Bruce, who is to be the Norwich playgrounds superintendent will cooperate with Miss Sherburne during the remainder of the Institute in the discussions and demonstrations.

Miss Sherburne began Thursday morning by saying that she thought it was most unfortunate that the words "supervised", "directed" and "organized" had been so over-used and misused in connection with playgrounds giving the unitnitiated idea that a play leader was a cross between a nurse maid and a policeman, i. e., some one placed on the ground to take care of the children, and to see that they did not get into trouble. The real function of the play leader, quite to the contrary, is to encourage initiative in children, to draw out and to develop qualities of leadership in them, and to help them to find means of self expression they would not find by themselves. Play leadership far from hampering spontaneous, unrestricted play gives greater opportunity for it.

Wherever there is a group at play, there is bound to be a leader of some sort. Happy indeed in the group of boys and girls in a neighborhood that carry on their good times under the more or less unconscious leadership of some wise, sympathetic mother or father. That is indeed the ideal play leadership. Unfortunately, however, we have to face and accept facts as they exist. Not many groups of children have that sort of leadership. Besides, few yards these days are large enough to take care of five to a dozen youngsters. Hence the youngsters seek their play away from home, and the activities of the group are more or less governed by one of its number, some boy or girl that has the faculty of getting the others to follow. If perchance this group leader, either from immature judgment or from low ideals and standards he or she has acquired through bad environment, suggests mischievous pranks, the gang can soon become a terror to the neighborhood, and incalculable and irradicable harm may be done to the individual child's character. Since because of traffic-covered streets, it is necessary to set aside safe places for the children to play, it is all the more necessary that this larger group that is brought together should have the help and guidance during the plastic play hours of an intelligent, sympathetic older person, who is not only companionable and enters into the play with them, but who is sufficiently trained to be able to help them find expression for their play impulses in the right way. The great irrefutable argument for leadership is the fact that children themselves prefer having a good play leader, as proved by their attendance at the playgrounds. Even on a well-equipped playground where there is no leader or a poor one, attendance the first few days may be prompted by curiosity, but it soon dwindles down to few if any children while the ground without apparatus, but good leadership is always crowded. The good leader is the soul, the vital spark, the motive power of the playground, the magnet that attracts children. And the second unanswerable argument in favor of leadership is the juvenile court record of city after city that shows a steady decrease, and sometimes an elimination, of cases of delinquency upon the introduction of well-trained leadership on the playgrounds."

In speaking of the type of person who was qualified for such work, Miss Sherburne laid great stress upon the value of technical professional training, saying that in this new profession every effort must be made to keep the standards high. But vital as she considered such preparation, even more essential was that indefinable something we call personality. The play leader, because she set a standard for the children, must have good breeding and an attractive appearance; she must be democratic, having a sincere respect for the children and their parents; she must be able to meet people easily and be a person people like to work with; above all she must possess to a marked degree the essential characteristic of leadership.

Equally necessary as technical training is a broad educational background, the ethical and cultural ideals she has gained through home background as well as through schools. The broader a person's education along the lines of the arts and sciences, all the more will she be able to bring to the children that which will help minds to unfold and develop and all the better play leader she will be.

CHAUTAUQUA WEEK OPENS WITH LARGE ATTENDANCE

Chautauqua week opened here Thursday with afternoon and evening programs in the tent that has been erected on the Academy campus, where an audience of 400 was on hand for the afternoon and double that number in the evening, although it was raining hard at that time.

Delay in erecting the tent made the opening a little late but by 3.45 in the afternoon the tent was ready and the program was formally opened with the introduction of Mrs. Mary S. Monroe, acting superintendent, by Tyler D. Guy, chairman of the publicity committee, who expressed the official welcome on behalf of the local president, William H. Collins, who was unable to be present.

Mrs. Monroe, who was pleasantly remembered from last year, when she was superintendent for the Norwich Chautauqua, was warmly greeted as she spoke of the good things that are promised on the program for this season. The entertainment of the afternoon was by the Apollo Concert company, five artists, who gave an excellent and varied program that brought in vocal, cornet and saxophone numbers.

The Junior Chautauqua, under Miss Louise Boehm, junior superintendent, was organized and will hold its sessions each morning at 9 o'clock.

Thursday evening the Apollo Concert company again rendered a program and Ralph Bingham, who is called America's foremost platform humorist, although he says there "ain't no such animal," had his audience convulsed with his versatile offerings in stories and music, besides giving a short but serious and impressive talk upon loyalty to American ideals. In his musical numbers, in which he uses a violin, he is assisted by his wife at the piano.

Announcements were made that the Friday program would include the Ernest Gamble Concert company for afternoon and evening, with Harry R. McKean for the afternoon lecturer, and Ada Ward, an English woman, for the evening lecture.

Mrs. Monroe, superintendent here last year, is now supervisor for the American and Canadian territory. The Norwich superintendent is to be Dr. J. E. Kammeyer, who is head of the department of economics and sociology at Kansas State Agricultural college. He had not arrived here Thursday night and it was announced that Miss Boehm would be acting superintendent until his arrival. Mrs. Monroe is to go on to some other Chautauqua point in her duties as supervisor.

UNITED CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH SCHOOL PICNIC

About 225 young people, ranging in age from one to 80 years, started from Franklin square at 8.45 Thursday morning for Ocean Beach for the annual picnic of the United Congregational church school. They occupied two open trolley cars and ten-thirty found the younger ones wading and swimming at Ocean Beach, with the older enjoying the shade of the pavilion.

The efficient refreshment committee immediately started the orangeade tubs to functioning and with only a short intermission at time of the games the demand was constant until departure for the cars was started at 4.15 in the afternoon. "Lunch at will" was the general order until the commissary department, furnished by the mothers, was depleted.

On the return journey "five o'clock tea" was served in the shape of a bag of peanuts to each person.

Pitching quoits occupied the spare moments and the regular games started at 2 p. m. under direction of the amusement committee.

First and second prize ribbons were given and were won by the following scholars:

50-yard dash—First, George Lambert. Boys 10 and under, second, Geo. Ranger. Over ten years, first, Sidney Watt; second, Francis Chapman. Girls 10 and under, first, Nancy Pitcher; second, Alice Blanchard. Girls over 10 years, first, Eleanor Sargent; second, Gladys Blanchard.

CRUSHED IN ELEVATOR AT WORK IN ICE HOUSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 28.—Frank Mansfield of Noank, about 30 years of age, employed as a laborer at the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad shops at Midway, was crushed in an elevator shaft at the ice house where he is employed, tonight. He was removed to the Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital where it is believed his injuries are not of a serious nature, but will be determined in a day or two.

Mansfield received his injuries while the elevator was transferring ice from the upper part of the building to the platform, being caught between the elevator and the side of the building. He was brought to New London and given an emergency treatment in the Union station and then removed to the hospital. His injuries are confined to the upper part of his body and abdomen.

HABEAS CORPUS CASE IS PARTIALLY HEARD

Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court here Thursday afternoon heard testimony in the habeas corpus suit of Jessie J. Lyons against her husband, Joseph Lyons, both of New London. She is seeking to secure control of her three children who are now with their father. The husband and wife are living apart.

Testimony was given by Mr. Lyons, Annie Hester, Andrew J. Collins, Mrs. Lyons and Elva C. Plympton.

Judge Hinman then made a suggestion to the lawyers and the case was continued to July 10 in New London. Attorney G. C. Morgan appeared for the petitioner and F. G. Cronin for the respondent.

Cream of Tartar From Wine Vats.

One by-product of wine manufacture is cream of tartar. In making wine a crystalline salt separates as the amount of alcohol increases during fermentation, which when deposited in the wine vats, is known as "argol," and when purified becomes the cream of tartar so largely used in baking powder. California is a large producer of this salt.

PRESIDENT HARDING SEES MERIT IN ORGANIZED LABOR

In Tenth Speech, Delivered in Helena, Mont., Declared the Administration is Not in Sympathy With Projects for "the Deflation of Labor and the Overthrow of Organized Labor"—Neither With the Capitalists Who Would Abolish "Collective Bargaining", Not With Labor Organizations Which, by Exorbitant Demands, Are Striving to Force Nationalization of Some of Our Most Important Industries and Services—Spoke of Changed Position of Women in the World.

Helena, Mont., June 29 (By the A. P.)—President Harding arrived in Helena late this afternoon for seven hours' stay and an address tonight on the subject of social justice, women and labor. When he leaves here late tonight he will lay aside speechmaking for two days and give himself up to enjoyment of the wonders of Yellowstone National Park.

Arriving at the station here, the chief executive and Mrs. Harding were taken for a drive about the city and to the United States Veterans' hospital where they shook hands and spoke kindly words to the soldier patients. A public reception followed at a hotel and after dinner the presidential party went to Shriners hall, where Mr. Harding delivered his address. Stops were made at three Montana towns en route here from Butte. At Basin the president shook hands with several hundred who gathered at the station and at Boulder and at Clancey he made brief addresses, speaking a few words of thanks for the greetings extended.

Lack of time and inability of his audience to hear him at the open air address at Butte earlier in the day caused the executive to shorten his remarks and it was regarded as likely by members of his party that he would take occasion at some future date while en route to the Pacific coast to discuss more fully the subject selected for his Butte address, National Business Conditions.

President Harding declared here tonight that those who imagined the administration would sympathize with projects for "the deflation of labor and the overthrow of labor organizations" have come "to realize their error."

"Nothing has been farther from the purpose of the present administration," he said in the tenth prepared address of his western trip, an address devoted to the discussion of labor, social justice and women in industry.

The president said what his administration had "earnestly sought" is to lessen the occasion for conflict between capital and labor and to bring to both a realization of the obligation they owe "to the great public interest."

Quite frankly the executive stated that he knew there were some elements which had hoped for "a great and decisive conflict" between organized employers and organized labor, and that these elements were not all on either side of the "imaginary dividing line" between capital and labor.

"On the capital side of the line," he said, "were those who hoped that the administration would lend itself to their program of breaking down organized labor and sending it back to the era of individual bargaining for the individual job. On the labor side of the line were those who hoped, by exorbitant demands and an attitude of uncompromising insistence, to force the nationalization of some of our most important industries and services. Between these two extreme groups we have tried to hold the scales even.

"How well have we succeeded? At least, we have saved the nation from the extremists of both sides. I believe our policy, and its results, have reflected the sound judgment of the overwhelming majority of the American people. I believe this people is firmly and finally committed to the ideal of preserving the fullest rights of private initiative and private enterprise, together with the right of organization on both sides of the line between capital and labor, and always consistent with the right of the public to be served efficiently and at a reasonable cost.

"We have come thus far, and thus fortunately, through the most difficult period of reconstruction that we have ever known. We have been sheltered against the world storm of tendency to social revolution. The best test of policy is by results. By that test, we ask no more than a fair and reasoned verdict on our program. We ask that its results be compared with the showing, in these after-war years, than can be presented by any other country on the face of the earth.

"For our vindication, we point to a great nation, its credit preserved, its industries crowded to the point of capacity production, its people employed, its wage scales high beyond all comparison with any other in the world, its banking system standing as the final bulwark of sound money and the gold standard, and its average level of comfort and prosperity unexampled among the races of men.

"If I could make the fortunate picture stand out by offering contrast, I would speak of Russia and the colossal failure of its mad experiment. The dismantled working forces of America, where there are such, and the parlor theorists who have yet to create a single thing useful to aspiring human kind, will find there less of freedom, much less of reward, and little of hope is much proclaimed emancipation.

"Apart from the tragedy of it all, I am glad Russia is making the experiment. If 20 centuries of the Christian era and its great story of human progress, and the countless centuries before the light of Christianity flamed have been lived and recorded upon mistaken theories of a righteous social order, then everything is wrong, Christianity a failure, and all of civilization a failure. I think Russia is going to rivet anew our belief in established social order. Meanwhile we know ours is the best the world has revealed, and I preach the gospel of holding fast to that which has proven good, ever trying in good conscience to make it better, and consider and treat as an enemy every man who chooses our land as a haven in which to assail the very institutions which shelter him."

A large part of Mr. Harding's address was devoted to a discussion of the change in the relation of woman to the social and political organization. The president said he was one of those "old-fashioned" people who would be glad if the way could be found to maintain the traditional relations of father, mother, children and home, but that very plainly these relations are in process of a "great modification."

"The most we can do, to the utmost possible extent," he said, "is to readapt our conditions of industry and of living so as to enable the mothers to make the utmost of their lessened opportunity for shaping the lives and minds of their children. We must hope, and we must make it possible, that mothers will not assume, when their babes of yesterday become the schoolboys and schoolgirls of today, that the responsibility of the mother is ended, and that the teacher, the school authorities, the college, the state, will henceforth assume it. The mothers must be placed in such position that despite their obligations outside the home they shall not have to surrender their domestic responsibility. Rather, means must be found to enable them, through the varied instrumentalities which society affords, to equip themselves for the better discharge of their responsibility toward the children of the land.

"The mother who tirelessly seeks rightly to train her own children, to instill into them that indefinable essence which we know as good breeding, will be performing this service not alone for her own children, but in only less measure for the children who come from homes less blessed with the finer things of life. Herein is the supreme advantage of the public school system. I have never been able to find much satisfaction in the good fortune of families who, when they are able to do it, prefer to take their children out of the public schools and give them the doubtful advantage of more exclusive educational methods. I think we should cling to the democracy of the public schools.

"In the home must still be performed the duty of instilling into the child those fundamental concepts of religion and of faith which are essential in rightly shaping the character of citizens, and therefore of the nation. Mankind never has stood more in need than it does now of the consolations and reassurances which derive from a firm religious faith. We are living in a time of many uncertainties, of weakened faith in the efficiency of institutions, of industrial systems, of economic hypotheses, of dictum and dogma in whatever sphere. Yet we all know that there are certain fundamental truths of life and duty and destiny which will stand eternal, through the evolution and the revolution of systems and societies founded by mankind. There must be no mistake whereby we shall confuse the things which are of eternity with those of time."

CONGRESS MUST DEAL WITH SHIPS LIUQOR QUESTION

Washington, June 29.—Blocked by objections from abroad in its effort to negotiate a prohibition treaty with the maritime powers, the administration is preparing to leave in the hands of congress any further move to relieve the foreign shipping lines of their embarrassments under the American dry laws.

Whether administration officials even will go to the length of advising revision of the law is uncertain in view of all the circumstances which now surround and beclud the prohibition issue. A government spokesman did make it entirely clear today, however, that if the treaty proposal goes by the board, the foreign ship interests must rest their final hope of relief on the doubtful prospect of action by a majority of congress.

In the meantime, it was added, there remains nothing for the executive branch of the government to do but to enforce, with whatever means it find at its disposal, the provisions of the statute as they now exist, as they have been interpreted by the Supreme Court, and as they have been translated into administrative regulations by the treasury department.

EVOLUTION COMPATIBLE WITH CHRISTIAN BELIEF

Philadelphia, June 29.—The Right Rev. Charles H. Woodcock, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church of Kentcky today told prospective clergymen of the church "it is perfectly compatible to believe in evolution and God at the same time."

"Evolution is man's way of explaining God's method of working in nature," said Bishop Woodcock. "Don't be afraid of this discussion of evolution which is so prevalent at the present time. Evolution is a work of hypothesis. If it is true nothing can dethrone it."

Demands to be Made by Anthracite Miners

Scranton, Pa., June 29.—The anthracite mine workers' convention today unanimously adopted a set of demands, to be presented to the coal operators in the coming negotiations for a new wage contract. They follow generally those adopted at the convention in Shamokin, Pa., in January, 1922, and for which the miners fought for five and a half months, the men finally returning to work without an increase in wages, but maintaining the scale under which they had quit. The present agreement, which was entered into last September, expires Aug. 31, and it was announced the new demands will be presented to the operators as soon after the Fourth of July as possible.

The morning session was marked by a disturbance due to the presence in the balcony of the hall of Joseph Manley, son-in-law of William Z. Foster, and identified with the Trades Union Educational league, and J. P. McCarthy, representing the Labor Defense council, who were bitterly denounced as enemies of the United Mine Workrs and other trades unions, and ordred to "remove their carcasses from the hall." McCarthy was accompanied by his wife.

Amid wild jeers and hoots the three safely left the place, while a number of delegates held back angry men in the rear of the hall. A half block from the hall Manley and McCarthy were attacked by a number of men and in the melee McCarthy was badly beaten up. Mrs. McCarthy was not assailed, although for a time she pitched in and helped defend her husband. The three left the city, presumably for Wilkesbarre.

The men were accused of being back of a plot of the communist party in the United States to set up a dual organization in the coal fields of the country for the purpose of wrecking the Mine Workers' union and eventually other trade union organizations.

The principal demands call for an increase of 20 per cent. in the contract wage; two dollars a day increase for men paid by the day; a two-year contract with full recognition of the union; uniformity and equalization of all day rates; the eight-hour day for all men employed in and about the mines; that where coal is paid for by the car the system be changed and it be paid for by weight. There were a number of other demands of a technical nature.

A feature of the discussion on the floor was the harmony that appeared to exist between the followers of Rinaldo Cappellini, recently elected president of District No. 1, and other officers of the union.

CHARGES MADE AGAINST COAL MINE OPERATORS

Knoxville, Tenn., June 29.—Charges of "grievous wrongs," "blacklisting" and "evication of employees," "oppression" and other alleged wrongs are made against coal mine operators of Kentucky and Tennessee in a brief that has been prepared and submitted to the interstate commerce commission at Washington by William Turnblazer, presidents of District No. 19, United Mine Workers of America, with headquarters here.

BUSINESS OF THE NATIONAL DISABLED VETERANS' LEAGUE

Boston, June 29.—After a turbulent session in which several delegates left the hall, the National Disabled Veterans' League in convention here re-elected John T. Nolan of Washington, D. C., commander. Resolutions were adopted, one favoring delay in granting a soldier bonus until disabled veterans have been cared for and another condemning masked recruiting. The meting followd a stormy morning session which was terminated by a call for the police and the shutting off of the lights in the Arlington theatre.

Order was restored in the afternoon meeting after Senior Vice Commander Thon as V. Fields, state commander, of New Jersey, Second National Vice-President James Hussey, of New York, and George T. Davis, of Indianapolis, Ind., with a small group of delegates had left the hall. Fields had been accused by Commander Nolan of accepting a gratuity for adjusting the claim of Eugene Kelly, a disabled veteran of Jersey City, and had been suspended by the executive board, Commander Nolan asserted.

The convention adopted a resolution attacking the grant of a bonus to able bodied former service men until disabled veterans have been properly cared for. Following speeches by Delegate Reed and Delegate Large assailing the Ku Klux Klan, the convention adopted a resolution condemning any secret organization which from behind masks seeks to oppress or intimidate citizens, soldiers or members of the organization."

Commander Nolan also launched an attack at the disabled American Veterans. He quoted statements made by Judge Robert S. Marks, a past commander, at that association's convention this week in Minneapolis to support his charge, that the organization was fostered by employes of the veterans' bureau.

WARD ABANDONS FIGHT TO PROTECT CABLEGRAMS

White Plains, N. Y., June 29.—Walter S. Ward, confessed slayer of Clarence E. Peters of Haverhill, Mass., ex-sailor, was reported today to have abandoned his fight to prevent the reading of cablegrams that passed between his father, George S. Ward, president of the Ward Baking Company, and his brother, Ralph, by the extraordinary grand jury investigating the killing shortly before the contested messages were taken into the grand jury room. The messages related to the alleged blackmail plot with Ward said caused him to shoot Peters in self defense.

The documents, which were reported to have been read by the grand jury were brought before the investigating body by W. H. Pangburn, counsel for the Western Union, and W. C. Fitts, counsel for the Commercial Cable company.

Ward's efforts ended, it was said, after Supreme Court Justice Wagner handed down a decision today directing that the companies produce their copies of the messages in the grand jury room. Justice Wagner did not rule on the question of whether the documents might be submitted to the grand jury. He indicated that this question might properly come before him subsequent to submitted the messages to the jury room.

Woonsocket Hard Hit By Telephone Strike

All But Four of the Forty Girl Operators Went Out Yesterday — Service Still Tied Up in Providence.

Boston, June 29.—A walkout of nearly all the day operators in the Woonsocket, R. I., exchange of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company was the principal development in the telephone strike situation in New England today. Twenty of the forty girls on this shift went out at 3 o'clock this afternoon and within an hour all but four of the others had joined them.

Reports that the disturbance in front of the telephone company's office in this city last night were due to the presence of negress strike-breakers were proven untrue upon investigation.

Service in Providence was still tied up, although the company claimed a slight improvement there. In Worcester, Springfield, Salem, Pawtucket, R. I., and a few other cities service was still considerably impaired. No marked effect on telephone conditions was noticeable in Boston, although there was some delay in calls in a few of the exchanges.

The federal department of labor took a hand in the strike today. Miss Anna Weinstock and John P. Colpoys, federal conciliators, conferred for an hour with Miss Julia S. O'Connor, president of the operators' department, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who is leading the strike for a seven-hour day and wage advances. Company officials said tonight that they had not yet conferred with the arbitrators.

The girls who had been held in $100 bonds each, furnished by Miss O'Connor, pleaded not guilty in the municipal court today to charges of disturbing the peace and obstructing a public highway in connection with a demonstration in front of the telephone company's offices on Milk street late yesterday. They were released on their personal recognizance pending a hearing next Tuesday. Another young girl arrested yesterday was turned over to the juvenile court.

RADIO SERVICE DURING THE TELEPHONE STRIKE

Hartford, June 29.—Radio stations operated by amateurs may be used to supplant toll line service in cities affected by the telephone strike, it became known today when F. H. Schnell, traffic manager of the American Radio Relay league, advised L. Vermilya of New Bedford, division manager of the A. R. R. L. to extend the co-operation of New England amateurs. The league is a non-commercial organization and private messages may be sent to any destination without cost.

IMMIGRANTS ARE DASHING FOR AMERICAN TERRITORY

New York, June 29.—With 20 steamships bearing approximately 18,000 passengers, mostly immigrants, due to arrive Sunday and Monday, immigration authorities today completed final plans to receive the horde of prospective citizens when the final dash for American territory will be made at midnight Saturday when the new alien quota becomes effective.

Carrying 730 immigrants, the Danish steamer Polonia was the first of the fleet to arrive but anchored in Gravesend Bay, outside of territorial waters, preparatory to steaming in as soon after midnight Saturday as possible. Others were expected to join her during the night and jockey for position to be the first ship to land its human cargo. Ellis Island does not receive immigrants on Sunday, and unless special plans are made the travelers will remain on their ships until Monday.

Sixteen of the steamers, carrying 13,627 passengers will reach quarantine Sunday, but authorities were unable to estimate how many of these are immigrants. Italian steamers lead the list with approximately 3,000 passengers, while those from Scandinavian ports are carrying more than 2,600. Four steamers will arrive Monday with 4040 passengers.

Morse Trial Witness Warned By Justice

Daniel O'Hare, Auditor, Was Admonished Not "to be So Prompt in Answering Questions".

Washington, June 29.—From another government witness defense counsel obtained today the statement that he had seen no evidence of any conspiracy on the part of the Morses to defraud the government in connection with wartime ship contracts in which Charles W. Morse, his three sons and four others are on trial. Attorneys for the government objected to the testimony and Justice Stafford ordered its stricken from the record, at the same time admonishing the witness not to be so prompt in answering questions of such a character.

The witness was Daniel O'Hare, who was resident auditor for the emergency fleet corporation at the Morses' Alexandria, Virginia shipyard from March, 1919 to October, 1919. He was called by the government to show first that he had occasion to reject 19 vouchers presented for payment by the shipyard officials and second that the Virginia company paid over certain sums of money to Philip Reinhardt, the fleet corporation auditor at Alexandria, before O'Hare arrived.

O'Hare said he had rejected probably 25 vouchers out of a total of 2,000 presented while he was at the plant. The total of all the vouchers approved was around $2,000,000 and the total of those rejected was approximately $15,000, he said, excluding two vouchers for salaries of $1,666 each of Harry F. Morse and Erwin A. Morse and $16,000 for Colin H. Livingston, president of the company. He explained on cross-examination that the vouchers for officials' salaries were presented at his request so there could be a ruling by his superiors as to whether such payments were authorized.

The witness said that when he went to Alexandria there was an accumulation of between 1,000 and 1,500 vouchers awaiting approval and that a "financial crisis" was impending as a result of the delay in payments by the government.

The prosecution got into evidence a payment of $244.09 to Reinhardt for traveling expenses on a trip to Canada in July, 1918. It sought also to connect other payments totalling $189 with Reinhardt but without success. D. A. Burke, general accountant of the fleet corporation, testified that there had been erasures of the letters "P. R." written into the cash book in connection with these items. He was unable to say whether these letters denoted "pay roll."

C. W. Smith of Baltimore, who was a government inspector at the Alexandria yard, testified that he was given the use of a shipyard truck to move his family from Baltimore to Alexandria; was given three tons of coal without charge and that he paid no rent for the shipyard house in which he lived during the first five months, but at the end of that period did pay it all in a lump sum.

Government counsel tried to bring out that Smith made payment after he learned there was an investgation of Reinhardt, but the question was excluded by the court because proof was lacking that such an investigation was in progress.

POINCARE CHEERED IN THE FRENCH SENATE

Paris, June 29.—(By the A. P.)—Enthusiasm such as is seldom witnessed in the senate was aroused by Premier Poincare today when at the end of a stirring speech asking the upper house to vote the credits necessary for the Ruhr occupation, he informed the "temperal and spiritual powers" that, although France had been loathe to have recourse to force, "now that measures of coercion have been instituted they will be continued until Germany surrenders."

The members of the august assembly arose, cheered loud and long, and then voted for credits for 307,000,000 francs, without a single dissenting voice.

With much emotion, the premier referred to Germany's financial situation as becoming more grave daily.

"The reich," he said, "is turning in a most frightful, vicious circle, without making any attempt to emerge. She is banking upon a miracle to save her from actual ruin, but miracles are rare. Not a single day passes but German industrials are attempting to fleet our own business men or politicians. I am invariably informed of these moves; we shall fall into no more traps.

"At times Germany is hoping for allied intervention. When she counts on France's discouragement and lassitude she is making a grave mistake. We have announced our essential demands; we will not modify them in the slightest."

THE UNADVERTISED PRODUCT

Have you ever stopped to think about the unadvertised product and what it thinks of itself? It says:

"I am the ruler of retail reverses.

"I am the Lord High Potentate of Failure.

"I am the reason for that downward slant on the profit curve.

"I am the cause of all the silent sickness that stills the cash register bell.

"I am the origin of dissatisfied customers and loss of trade.

"I am the leaven of uncertainty in the midst of certain profits.

"I am the element of chance that turns a winning business into a losing gamble.

"I am the key to the problem why more than 15,000 retailers fail each year.

"I am the why and the wherefore, the direct and proximate cause, the germ and the genesis of unsuccessful merchandising.

"I am the unadvertised product."

NO PRESENT INDICATION OF BREAK IN PROSPERITY

Optimistic Statement by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston —Improvement in Retail Trade Shows a Restoration of Confidence in the Future—Cotton Textile Trade Was Noticeably Curtailed in June—Freight Car Loadings for the Entire Country Are in Larger Proportion Than Ever Before at This Time of the Year.

Boston, June 29.—The present business problem seems to be one of restoring confidence in the future, says the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, issued tonight. The review says that the employment situation in New England is satisfactory, retail trade has improved and the tendency has grown stronger to cut production to a point where it is only sufficient to meet actual orders.

"Less talk about resistance to high prices and the poor volume of incoming business is heard now in New England than was common a month or two ago," the review says. "A somewhat more confident view is being taken. Both the volume of production and the movement of goods in the markets continue to be large and even the volume of unfilled orders on the books of many manufacturers is considerable.

"Freight car loadings for the entire country are in larger volume than ever before at this time of the year, and what is equally important, although not so generally appreciated, is that the number of tons of goods carried per loaded car is also exceptionally large. This is a symptom of greater efficiency on the parts of both shippers and the railways.

"The extent of unemployment in New England is not significant at the present moment. The employment offices report that there are fewer vacancies to be filled and yet at the same time there are fewer applicants for work.

A rather poor volume of retail trade during April and early May, which was undoubtedly due in part to adverse weather conditions, helped to generate some of the pessimistic sentiment then prevalent. There has recently been an improvement in retail trade and according to latest reports the volume of sales is comparatively satisfactory, even allowing for the fact that some of the volume has been forced by means of attractive prices. . . .

"The statement is generally made that the total volume of manufactured stocks of all kinds is not large, but such a statement is usually heard during a period of great activity and can neither be proved nor disproved by statistics at the time. It seems certain, however, that stocks of raw material are nowhere nearly as large now as they were at the peak in 1919. Yet production is as large as at that time or even higher.

"The present problem before business man is quite different than it was in the last boom, for in addition to having large stocks, shipments were delayed during the winter of 1919-20 through storms and strikes and came on the market in a flood in the spring at a time when credit was hard to get and money rates very high. These adverse factors are absent now and the present problem seems to be one of restoring confidence in the future rather than of consuming excessive stocks of merchandise and easing strained credit conditions.

The review notes that curtailment in New England manufacturing became more noticeable in June, especially in the cotton textile industry. Unfilled orders in the boot and shoe industry in this section at the beginning of June were almost the equivalent of two months' output. A slight decline in new building contracts appeared in June.

Plants manufacturing builders' hardware are running at near capacity with a shortage of skilled workers. In the metal trades operations have been curtailed slightly but more than 90 per cent of the foundries and manufacturing plants are still on a capacity basis.

MAX SPIEGEL CREDITORS ARE UNABLE TO AGREE

New York, June 29.—Creditors of Max Spiegel, bankrupt theatre owner and promoter, now in a sanatorium at Stamford, Conn., were unable to agree today on a proposal to sell his assets and liquidate the estate on a percentage basis. The plan was submitted at a hearing before Referee Harold P. Colin. Another meeting will be held July 24.

Spiegel failed for more than $1,000,000, with only trivial assets. Theatre properties in New York and Buffalo were involved.

Leo Oppenheimer, attorney for the trustee, told the gathering he doubted Spiegel was insane but nothing could be done since the probate court at Stamford had adjudged him so. He asserted more than half of the creditors had lent money on spurious voting certificates in the Mitchell H. Mark Realty corporation. He proposed that the assets, both real and spurious, be sold to Mrs. Mitchell H. Mark, Spiegel's mother-in-law, for $328,000 which she had offered.

It was almost impossible to settle the estate on any other basis, he said. Spiegel, he declared, had forged voting certificates, checks had been misused and other irregularities complicated the situation.

It was indicated that the estate would be settled on a basis of 10 cents on the dollar for unsecured creditors and 15 cents for creditors secured either by good or spurious collateral.

Several attorneys for creditors indicated they would not accept the proposed settlement. They said they preferred to forego payment and hold out for punishment of Spiegel, if that should be possible in the future.

BOY STABBED DURING QUARREL IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, June 29.—Samuel Jones, 15, of this city, was taken to the New Haven hospital today suffering from a stab wound over the heart said to have occurred after a quarrel with another boy. He was bleeding profusely and was in such a weakened state that there was no pulse discernible at the wrist. His blood pressure showed that he was sinking fast and it was decided that an operation was his only chance for life. The operating physicians opened the peritoneal cavity and the heart was carefully examined for a possible puncture. The blood clots were then removed, great quantities of blood having accumulated. The cavity was then washed out with a saline solution and then sutured.

The operation took an hour and at its conclusion the surgeons were rewarded by a rise in blood pressure and generally improved condition. The surgeons stated that the operation gave him an even chance for life.

AMERICAN RELIEF WORKERS LEAVING RUSSIA

Moscow, June 29 (By the A. P.).—American "evacuatics" of Russia began today with the departure of the first large group of American relief administration workers for America. Eleven of them, one with a Russian bride, left this afternoon on a special car which will travel by way of Warsaw. Five others left by way of Riga.

There were scenes similar to those witnessed at the American evacuation of the Rhineland. Scores of Russian girls and other acquaintances of the Americans gathered to say farewell.

Minneapolis, June 29.—James A. McFarland of Dalton, Ga., was elected national commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War at the closing session of the annual convention here today. William J. O'Connor of San Francisco was elected senior vice president.

"If we're going to get any place in our efforts to prod the veterans' bureau to do justice to the disabled men, all of whom are dependent for relief on the bureau, we've got to raise hell with it before the senate committee," declared R. C. Michels of Ohio, chairman of the national legislative committee.

GAVE AWAY LAST DOLLAR; THEN JUMPED OVERBOARD

New York, June 29.—Having only a dollar left to his name, an unidentified man aboard the steamship Northland, en route from Boston to New York, gave that away today and then buried himself into Long Island sound. Although the ship turned about and circled the spot where he was last seen, the body was not recovered.

He made his parting gift to a group of Sisters of Charity with the words: "Here's my bottom dollar. I won't need it tomorrow." He walked away, leaving the group wondering. A few moments later the cry, "Man overboard" was raised.

Three sacramental raids were staged in this city and Mansfield, Thursday afternoon by federal, state and local police officers. Federal Officers Stanton L. Briggs and William Congdon and local police officers, Acting Chief MacArthur and Frank McLean, made one of their periodical calls at the home of Sarah Kaplan in Mansfield just over the city line. A quick search disclosed a barrel filled with twenty gallons of a mixture of hard cider and moonshine. One of the officers walked into the bath room and inspected a new bathtub in which various articles of clothes had been thrown in to allow them to soak. The officer gave the liquid a stir and was very much surprised when he received a strong aroma. It was decided that the conglomeration was some sort of moonshine in the course of fermentation. Mrs. Kaplan was very much put out by the visitation of the officers and severely reprimanded them for calling at her home.

According to police records, Mrs. Kaplan has fallen often into the hands of the law and has answered to charges in the federal court about five times and in the town of Mansfield no less than three times within the past three years.

The homes of a father and son, Solomon Chuss and Jake Chuss, respectively, were raided and kegs of wine and jugs of alcohol were found in both places. Solomon Chuss resides at 559 Ash street, in the town of Mansfield and Jake Chuss, his son, lives at 461 Ash street, in the town of Windham.

A visitation was made by the officers to the tailor shop conducted by Samuel Goldstein in the Girard block on Jackson street, but they failed to discover any incriminating evidence. The two members of the Chuss family and Mrs. Kaplan will appear before United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson at Norwich within a few days to answer to charges of violation of the liquor law.

Friday afternoon Federal Prohibition Officers William Congdon and Stanton L. Briggs, assisted by the state police, made a tour of Rockville and notified L. Gordon to appear in court after a jug of alcohol and a can of whiskey had been found in a grocery store conducted by him at 90 Brooklyn street, of that place. The federal men also found whiskey glasses and other equipment utilized in the selling of liquor.

Mrs. Mary (Gildersleeve) Martin, the widow of the late Eli Martin, who was a native of Mansfield, died Thursday in New York city. The deceased had been a visitor in this city on many occasions and was quite well known. She is survived by two sons, Wilbur G. and Raymond B. Martin of New York city. The remains are to be taken to this city for burial.

Thursday afternoon, Miss Catherine Johnston, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnston of 97 Bridge street, was married at a quiet wedding to S. Clifton Adams, by Rev. Harry E. McCready. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's mother. The couple were attended by Horace Ford of New Haven, a cousin of the groom, and Mrs. Robert J. Johnston of Bryn Mawr, Pa., sister-in-law of the bride. The bride was attired in a beautiful white flat crepe gown with a white veil and she carried white roses. The matron of honor wore a black lace gown and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses.

A reception was held at the bride's home and was attended by relatives and friends from New Haven and this city. The bridal couple left by automobile on an extensive automobile trip, after which they will reside with the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams received a large number of handsome and useful gifts.

Main street presented an excited scene about 4:40 o'clock Friday afternoon when a runaway horse came pounding up the pavement, dragging after it, a light buggy which had sustained three broken wheels and a smashed top. The animal was the property of W. Schirmer of Hop River and after becoming frightened for some unknown reason, it followed a regular line of march, starting up Center street to Valley, down Valley to Temple street, down Temple to Union, up Union and onto Main street. The beast was brought to a stop opposite Railroad street by a man who gave his name as Miles. Acting Chief MacArthur investigated the matter. The horse was uninjured.

Two umbrella peddlers were taken into custody by Acting Chief MacArthur Friday afternoon, while they were plying their trade in one of the residential sections of this city. It was found that the itinerate salesmen did not have the necessary license and they were taken to the police station where they gladly paid the $3 for a license.

There will be big doings at Recreation Park this (Saturday) afternoon when the American Thread Athletic association will stage its second matinee horse racing event of the season. Arrangements have been made to accommodate about six hundred fans. A number of new horses have been entered into the different classes and it is expected that some of them will add much zest to the excitement of the day. The feature horses in the Class A event will probably be Patsy Chatam, owned by Napoleon Fontaine, and Harry I, owned by "Lou" Ives of this city. The last horse has been in training at Charter Oak Park, Hartford. Patsy Chatam is the horse which copped second money last Decoration day when "Charlie" Charron did such creditable work in driving against Sure Aim and Movie W. Cameron, the well known Norwich horse, will also "run for his oats" in the class A event. There are eight starters in the Class B and Class C comprises nine starters. One hundred bushels of oats will be awarded in each event. The racers will be sent on their way by Walter R. King and it is planned to start at 1:30 o'clock. The bleachers have all been erected and programs will be distributed.

Omer Blain, of 392 Valley street is recovering at his home from a partial dislocation of the fourth vertebrae sustained recently when he dove into about three feet of water at "Sandy Bottom" on the Willimantic river. Blain was enjoying the water in company with a relative and was diving in for the third time when his head struck a rock on the river bottom and rendered him partly unconscious. He was revived but he complained of severe pains in his head. It was first thought that he had sustained a broken neck. The young man's head and neck are now set in a plaster cast and will remain so until the dislocation is healed, but he is able to move slowly about the house.

The Salvation Army hall on the third floor of the Turner block on Main street is to be closed and the equipment placed in storage until such time as the new citadel is completed. Up to that time, meetings and Sunday school sessions will be held in the open air.

A well-known physician who has made an extensive study of the subject of blood pressure emphatically states that it is not a disease. He says, "It is a symptom and a most significant and important one at that." Its presence is and should be a constant warning to the medical man to search for the real cause. High Blood Pressure always means Danger. It is an early warning of worse to come if the signals are not heeded.

If you suffer from headaches, have attacks of dizziness, vertigo, shortness of breath on exertion, sleep poorly, wake up frequently and get up always tired; if you are low-spirited, prone to worry, have occasional attacks of neuralgia, neuritis or muscular pains, if your heart palpitates, you may be suffering from high blood pressure. And the presence of high blood pressure means you are absorbing poisons from wastes that lie too long in the body tissues.

This same physician has discovered a way to treat high blood pressure that has been universally successful in thousands of clinical cases. He has discovered a formula that stimulates the bile which is nature's great antiseptic and regulator. With the bile in a normal healthy condition, the body throws off the poisons quickly and good health is the natural result.

Now that thousands of tests have proved the efficacy of this treatment, it has been put up in convenient tablet form and is dispensed by druggists under the name Bi-a-lis.

It is absolutely harmless, easy to take and is wonderfully quick in its results. The American distributors have authorized local druggists to dispense Bi-a-lis with an absolute guarantee to return the full purchase price if you do not get wonderful relief from the use of the very first bottle. Tapping Dairyland to Supply Your Table/

In the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts, on the splendid dairy farms of the Green Mountain State of Vermont and in the famous Adirondack region of northern New York more than 10,000 fine dairy cows are quietly grazing today.

Within a few hours the entire product of these 10,000 cows will grace the tables of southern New England in form of Tait Bros ice cream or creamery products. A marvelous romance of modern business, transportation and refrigeration lies back of a single brick of ice cream.

The why and how of the transformation is as interesting as it is important—to you who eat the finished product.

The quality of Tait Bros products begins with the cow. Only the finest dairy regions can produce herds testing high enough to meet the standard of "A Tait Bros Product." These rich pasture lands, swept with pure breezes you may know as a vacationist, supply the ideal environment of purity and richness of milk.

Tait Bros Receiving Stations and Creameries are located at strategic points. The products of each dairy is daily sampled and tested as received at the model Tait Bros creameries. Modern refrigerator cars carry their daily burden of pure fresh milk and rich cream buried in ice. The start of "A Tait Bros Product" is as right as the finished product is perfect.

Thus, annually, more than 32,000,000 quarts of milk and cream are handled by Tait Bros. Every quart is tested and passed by competent chemists and bacteriological experts, and automatic recording thermometers remove every possibility of error. Whatever Tait Bros product you eat, it is safe—and

WESTERLY

The docket read by Clerk M. Walter Flynn in the regular session Friday morning of the Third District court was as follows:

New writs: Westerly Furniture Co. vs. Frank Chimento, mense process.

Boston Guild of Wood Carvers vs. William S. Martin, alias Gallagher. Answered and continued two weeks.

Clarence E. Roche vs. Jennie Ostmans, a writ of trespass and ejectment. If not answered marked defaulted.

R. J. O'Leary co. vs. P. H. Opto Co. In this case Pettine and Turano appeared as counsel for the plaintiff originally and upon the elevation of Michael J. Turano to the beach, the new counsel, Dunn, succeeded the present judge. This case will probably be tried next Friday.

Call of the civil docket was completed with Everett L. Clark vs. George W. Hoxie in which damages were asked for $500 as the result of an automobile collision on Feb. 10th on the Potter Hill road at the curve in the highway this side of the Fred Crandall place. The first witness called was Frank Crandal who testified that although he had not seen the automobile from his 5 1-2 years experience in dealing with automobiles and from the description of damages given him $500 seemed a reasonable amount. B. Franklin Peckham testified that he was at the scene of the collision and that the road was covered with snow and slippery. Witness said that he saw Dr. Thomas E. Robinson near the scene and helped move the car. Mr. Wright of Potter Hill was present on Saturday, the day of the accident, remaining two hours. George F. Wilcox, 3 Washington street, Pawcatuck, testified that he left the store in Ashaway with his mother and that when the curve near the Crandall place was reached he saw the Clark machine approaching around the curve on the left of the road and in front of him. In the collision which followed the front mud guard and rear end of his automobile was smashed. At this point the case was suspended and a complaint of Thomas E. Brown, chief of police entered.

William A. Carron, aged 19 years and Robert Carron, 18, were arraigned on a writ by Thomas E. Brown, charging that they stole bicycles to the value of $50. Pleas of guilty were entered by the youths. Town solicitor stated that as far as could be learned, from Salem, Mass., police authorities that they had no regular occupation in that city. The father of the boys was dead and the mother living and in the family were three or four younger brothers and one sister. The bicycles had been taken from in front of Fisher's store with the idea of selling them and this was done in New London where the boys were arrested. The boys first said the money was to be used to go to California with and later the story changed to one that the money was to be sent to their mother. As far as could be learned the boys came to Westerly by automobile truck and had not communicated with their mother. They had no police record. Judge Turano questioned the boys and later said that the people of Westerly did not like to have people come from out of the state and take things off the streets and as a warning to future evil doers he would sentence them to 60 days in each case to be imprisoned in Providence county jail.

At the conclusion of the automobile case, Clark vs. Wilcox judgment was given the plaintiff for $80.51.

Thursday morning at 8 a. m. Officer Charles Connors of Pawcatuck took into custody Rudolph Rosky of Danbury, who was found minus hat and coat at the top of the flight of steps under the West Broad street railroad bridge where he stated "he was waiting for the station to open so that he could get a train to Danbury." The state institution at Brewster's Neck was communicated with and the description of the "early commutter" tallied with that of an escaped inmate, who had formerly been on the police force in Bridgeport, going to Danbury from which place he was committed. An officer from the state hospital later called and returned with the patient.

Returning from Honolulu, H. I., the family of Truman H. Newberry, Grease Point Farms, Mich., is expected at their Watch Hill cottage, "Red Top" for the summer.

At the Westerly town clerk's office which remains open evenings until 9 o'clock both Friday and Saturday nights, for the accommodation of registry of voters, less than half as many voters had registered as at the corresponding time a year ago.

Mrs. Walter H. Allen, Girard avenue, Hartford, arrived at the Watch Hill cottage, "The Breakers" off the East beach, on Friday, to pass the summer season.

Aubrey L. Maddock, formerly of Westerly but now of Hartford, will have charge of the Connecticut disabled veterans' camp at Niantic this summer. The camp last year under Mr. Maddock's supervision was most successful and this year it is expected that even better results will be obtained.

Westerly relatives and friends of Mary Elizabeth Whaley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl C. Whaley, formerly of Westerly, were interested in the announcement of her marriage to Carl Jay Lewis, son of Mrs. Mara P. Lewis of Hope Valley. The wedding took place at the Baptist parsonage, Wakefield, R. I., on Tuesday evening, Rev. W. A. Talty officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis will make their home on Pond street, Wakefield.

The foundation work on the new residence for Frank Sharman at 46 Elm street, between the William Clark property and the residence of Mrs. Anna Pendleton, has so far advanced that carpenters are now engaged in the woodwork construction.

A new gasoline and oil supply building is being erected on Railroad avenue, south of the Westerly Motors salesrooms in the Casarino building, for Armando Rupel.

Harry Gill, a former resident of Westerly, has been the guest of friends here the past week.

R. C. Webster of Hartford was a business caller in Westerly and vicinity on Friday.

Great Falls, Mont., June 29.—(By The A. P.)—The Jack Dempsey-Tom Gibbons heavyweight championship fight, twice threatened with collapse within the last two weeks because of financial jerkis, has cleared the last hurdle, and will be decided in Shelby July 4, as scheduled. The final $100,000 of Dempsey's guarantee was raised tonight from twenty influential business men of the state, who pledged $5,000 each.

George H. Stanton, president of the Stanton Trust & Savings bank, who personally, advanced $50,000 to make Dempsey's second installment of $100,000 ten days ago, made the positive announcement that the final installment had been raised and that it would be available in cash by tomorrow night. Mr. Stanton said that the money, however, would not be turned over to Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, until Monday when the payment falls due.

The raising of the $100,000 is one of the most remarkable financing achievements in the history of glove fighting. After all plans had failed, Mr. Stanton decided to appeal to twenty men throughout the state, most of them life long friends, to save what he termed the honor of Montana, meaning the heavyweight championship battle at Shelby.

Going into a conference with R. E. Ayers, a former circuit judge of Livingston, and Major J. E. Lane in a hotel room, Stanton and his associates began sending out telegrams and in five hours had received the pledges assuring the $100,000. The conferences were begun this morning when it became evident that immediate action was necessary to dispel the doubt that had surrounded the fight since the condition of the finances was disclosed Wednesday through the resignation of Dan Tracy as business manager.

"The twenty men subscribing to the $100,000 fund will receive their money from the first cash received from seat sales and will take over a one-third interest in the moving picture rights which was secured by Joy J. Molumby, the original promoter and Mayor Johnson of Shelby, treasurer of the fight. The reason why we decided not to give the $100,000 to Kearns in advance was because some of the men who contributed are disposed to follow the lead taken by the champion's manager and adhere rigidly to the conditions of the contract.

"It is our opinion, judging from Kearns' attitude, that Kearns is not overly anxious to have Dempsey fight Gibbons and would get out of the fight if he could." Dempsey is under contract to fight Gibbons July 4 and we are going to see that he does just that."

JOHNSTON BEATS RICHARDS ON WIMBLEDON COURTS

Wimbledon, June 29—(By the A. P.)—"Little Bill" Johnson of California and Young Vincent Richards of Yonkers today demonstrated before King George and Queen Mary and 20,000 other spectators that tennis, created in England as a pastime, has been developed into a fine art in the United States.

In their match this afternoon to decide which of them should survive the fifth round of the world's tennis championship tournament, these two masters of the racquet from overseas chased one another with such speed and skill: stroked with such marvelous power; fought so hard and doggedly for precious points, that all the native critics came away saying that never in the recent years had such perfect tennis been played upon a court in the British Isles.

Johnston, the older, wiser and livelier of the two, triumphed in straight sets—6-1, 6-3, 7-5—but in each he had to use his arm, his head and his feet to the best of his ability.

Altogether in the 31 games the struggle lasted, Johnston scoring 108 points and Richards 93.

ATHLETICS LOSE THRILLING BATTLE TO YANKEES

New York, June 29—The New York Americans made it two straight from Philadelphia, winning a hard hitting, closely contested game by a score of 10 to 9. Home runs by Witt, Bush and Dugan were responsible for five of the locals runs. After Philadelphia tied the score in the first half of the ninth with three runs, the Yanks won the second half when pinch hitter Johnson singled with the bases full. Walberg injured his pitching hand stopping a hot drive by Scott. Bush was spiked in the right knee by Galloway, while covering the plate. The score:

FINALS IN COLLEGE TENNIS TO BE PLAYED TODAY

Philadelphia, June 29.—James Davies and Philip Neer, of Leland Stanford university defending doubles champions, were eliminated in the semi-final round of the national intercollegiate championship at the Merion Cricket club today and tomorrow new champions will be crowned in both singles and doubles.

Lewis N. White and Louis Thalheimer, of Texas, who won in the morning round had defeated Gerald Emerson and Frank T. Anderson of Columbia, came back in the afternoon and won from the Pacific Coast team in straight sets. The scores of the morning match gave the Texans an 8-6, 10-8, victory, while they defeated the Californians 8-6, 6-3.

In the other semi-final of the doubles Lucien Williams and Arnold Jones, of Yale, won from Philip Bettens and Wallace Bates, University of California, in a three set match. The scores were 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Tomorrow afternoon Carl Fischer, of Philadelphia College of Osteopathy will meet Gerald Emerson, California in the finals for the singles championship, while the doubles, between the Texas and Yale men is scheduled, to follow shortly after the singles match is decided.

The match between the Yale and the California players was the most interesting engagement of the doubles. Bates and Bettens, who eliminated the last Oxford players on Thursday, used an entirely different style of tennis from that of Williams and Jones and it was a brilliant battle.

GREB AND WILSON TO FIGHT AT POLO GROUNDS

New York, June 29.—(By The A. P.)—Tom O'Rourke, matchmaker of the Polo Grounds A. C., announced today that he had signed Harry Greb, of Pittsburgh, and Johnny Wilson, of Boston, world's middleweight champion, for a 15-round decision title match at the Polo Grounds on the night of August 31. Greb he said, deposited a forfeit of $10,000 as a guarantee to make 160 pounds, the middleweight limit.

O'Rourke did not divulge the terms of the contract but it was understood that the champion was guaranteed 37 1-2 and the challenger 12 1-2 per cent. of the receipts.

Greb has been angling for a title match with Wilson for some time. It was because of failure to accept the Pittsburgher's challenge last year that the champion was suspended and deprived of title recognition by the New York State Athletic commission. Last May, however, he was restored to good standing.

Wilson, except for a few minor contests, has been idle most of the past year. His last important ring engagement in defense of his title was in September, 1921, in a 12-round no-decision bout in Jersey City with Bryan Downey.

COUILLARD PLAYING GOOD BALL WITH FREDERICKS

Art Couillard who played first base for the Riverview club last season and part of this season is now playing a good game with the Fredericks team of the Blue Ridge League. Couillard has been shifted from the initial sack to left field and besides playing a good game in the field is hitting like a fiend. In the last two games he has pounded out seven hits out of nine times at bat and his batting average for the season is well over the .300 mark.

Jack Sank another Riverview player, is also with the Fredericks team and is the leading home run hitter, and is hitting for .385. Sank, it is understood is soon to be sold to the Toronto club.

QUINEBAUG PLAYS AT BALTIC ON SUNDAY

The Quinebaug team will be the attraction at Sayles Field, Baltic, on Sunday. Quinebaug has a strong team with LaForest and Deforest as the battery. For Baltic Papineau will pitch, with Raymond, a new recruit, on the receiving end. Raymond takes Pete Godaire's place as the latter split a finger in the recent game. Manager Collins says that he thinks Manager Troland is full of hot air and that when the Norwich team gets through with his club Taftville will have to get a new club and manager. Collins is willing to play Taftville at any time.

CUMMINGS AND KNEPPER TO MEET IN FINALS

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., June 29.—Dexter Cummings of Yale, medalist in the opening round, and R. H. Knepper of Princeton won their way into the finals of the intercollegiate golf tournament at Siwanoy today. They will meet in the championship round tomorrow.

Cummings, whose playing has been a feature of the tourney, eliminated J. W. Crookston of Penn State, 7 and 6, in their 18 hole semi-final match. At the same time, Knepper defeated J. C. Ward of Williams up, in a hard fought match that was not decided until the final hole.

O'Dowd Accepts Miller's Challenge.

Willie O'Dowd, pride of Central Village, writes that he will accept Kid Miller's challenge for the next bout at Danielson if it can be arranged with the promoters. O'Dowd guarantees to knock Miller out in this fight and would have done so last time if he had been in condition.

WALSH WINS TITLE IN NATIONAL LINKS TOURNEY FROM J. S. WHITHAM

Washington, June 29—Richard Walsh of New York won the national public links golf championship here today by defeating J. Stewart Whitham, also of New York, six up and five to play in the 36 hole final round of the tournament.

Completely outplaying his opponent all the way from tee to green in the final round over the east Potomac Park course here, Walsh, who was runner up last year at Toledo, had the match well in hand from the first hole.

At no time did Whitham look like a winner although he made a determined bid for the championship on the first nine holes of the afternoon round, which he started five down. During his short rally, after he had become six down at the twenty second hole, Whitham won two holes in a row and turned only four down.

Walsh closed the door to Whitham with two birdies in a row at the tenth and eleventh, the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth of the match, winning both holes and becoming six up again with seven to play. The twelfth, the thirtieth hole of the match, was halved in par four and the match came to an end on the 125-yard thirteenth, when Walsh laid his hitch shot three feet from the pin. Whitham's pitch was only five feet away but he missed the putt and conceded Walsh two putts and the match.

Walsh's victory was the direct result of excellent work around the putting greens and ability to keep his ball straight down the course. Whitham, longer off the tee than Walsh, found the rough with frequency and failed to show near the accuracy that was Walsh's around the greens. The winner's chip shots and approach putts were almost always dead to the hole and were in direct contrast to those of Whitham, who frequently was short of the cup.

Each player holed a chip shot during the final match, Walsh's coming on the thirteenth hole this morning while Whitham holed one from off the green two holes later. Only one putt of any length was holed during the final, Walsh sinking a 20-foot one this afternoon or a birdie four on the 532-yard eleventh hole to win the hole.

Prizes were presented to the winner, runner-up, medalist and to the members of the Chicago team, which won the Harding cup Monday, by Secretary Hughes of the state department. The flag emblematic of the public links championship was presented to Dr. T. C. McCoy, president of the New York Municipal Golf association.

Walsh's victory was the result of greater steadiness and more consistent all-round play. He was fiveup after the first round of 18 holes, and, although Whitham rallied for a time in the afternoon play, Walsh never was in danger of losing his long lead.

Walsh out—4 2 4 4 5 4 4 5 5—41.
Whitham out—4 3 5 4 4 4 5 5 5—39
Walsh in—4 4 4—3.
Whitham in—5 5 4—3.

CORNETS TRIM HARDIGS IN FAST CONTEST

The Cornets took undisputed possession of second place in the Twilight league Friday evening when they trimmed the Hardigs 6 to 3 in a good fast game. The game was the only full nine-inning game yet played in the league and proved interesting all the way. Keenan pitched for the Cornets and at no time was in danger although he was hit hard at times. THE GOVERNORS' CONFERENCE

From time to time the governors of New England states have gotten together for the purpose of discussing common problems, and carrying in mind the benefits that are obtainable through united action.

Today they will gather in Maine at the invitation of Governor Baxter for the purpose of talking over motor vehicle laws and the difficulties of enforcing the prohibition law with a view to getting in touch with the manner in which the several states are handling problems as they arise, and with the idea of bringing about better cooperation.

There is always much to be learned through the study of the practice of others. It doesn't appear that there has been any great amount of uniformity in legislative action brought about through such conferences as have been held in the past, but the fact that they are being continued makes it evident that they are held to be worthwhile.

It is through such gatherings that salutary results are obtained. The governors may not be in a position to put into operation many of the things which they favor. They are of course restricted by the limitations of their office but in the exchange of ideas there is unquestionably the means of bringing the states into a better relationship and of setting forth ideas that may ultimately be put into operation.

The idea of uniformity of action in such a group of states is commendable. If there could be a closer cooperation among the states along many lines there would be much greater satisfaction obtained in the enforcement of regulations and in overcoming one set of rules in this state, another in Rhode Island and still others in each of the other states.

This is especially true in regard to motor vehicle laws. Uniformity would be a relief and would produce better results, without interfering with the necessary local traffic regulations which must necessarily depend upon conditions in the respective communities.

THE COAL SITUATION

Because it is vitally concerned the public is much interested in the deliberations and outcome of the miners convention now in session at Scranton. Here it is being determined what policy will be pursued relative to demands for a new agreement.

Until August 31 there remains in effect the agreement that was adopted following the strike of last year. There are those who are willing that there should be a continuance of the terms of that agreement because they are getting advantages which were never obtained before and which exceede the terms during the period of the war. There are others, however, who take the view that inasmuch as they have got an advantage they might as well get as much as they are willing to ask for. Then the miners themselves are in two camps. Both are out for the 20 per cent. increase in wages, but for different reasons. The conservative group are asking that in order to be able to compromise on the present agreement. The radicals want it and are trying to get the convention to agree to fight for it. They are out for it even though it involves a strike, curtailment of production and shortage of supply. They are willing to exposure the public, the ones who pay, in order to get it.

While this convention is in session the federal coal commission makes the most of the opportunity to say that public sentiment "will tolerate no suspension of the anthracite coal supply this year."

It is but a few days now before the commission should be ready with its report, a report that should have important bearing upon the coal situation and the convention. That should reveal what the investigations have disclosed, point out what the trouble is and what remedies should be applied. It will no doubt call for legislative action but the fact that the next session of congress is several months off is no reason why those concerned should not give immediate heed.

There is no dodging the fact that the commission is absolutely right concerning the sentiment of the coal burning public.

GOLD IN LABRADOR

Somehow interest in a new gold mine is much like that in a gold brick. There is much difficulty experienced by some in keeping it. They know how some have gotten great wealth along with the hardships, and they know how others have sunk their last cent digging for gold that was never found. Still there is a lure about the tales of new gold fields. It may mean the pouring forth of dollars to boom someone's offices in that direction. It is of course a gamble, but how many people like to gamble!

Stories are being told of the finding of gold bearing rock in Labrador that will produce $7.50 a cubic yard. As the discoverer has not disclosed the location it will be a matter of many a prospector, each a claim will often accomplish much more than the setting forth of bona fide facts relative to propositions of another kind. Some will sit back and wait for a more definite test and a proved statement. Others are imbued with the idea of getting onto and into the ground at the quickest possible moment, and because someone has claimed the discovery of gold they give no thought to the impudence on the part of everyone that there is no gold there.

Labrador can stand the development that would be attached to the discovery of a prolific gold field. Hopes for the substantiation of enticing claims are not going to bring it about. It can be certain however, that if the reported find of gold is correct and there is much to be had Labrador will not lack for long for a sufficient force of gold diggers. It may get more than it can accommodate before the proof is established.

THE DUTY OF THE COURTS

Apparently some judges have gone the limit of their patience in dealing with those violators of the law who make it a point to plead for leniency and then, after getting it, proceed to show continued contempt for law. And there are others who have come to the conclusion that the proper respect for law is to be obtained only through sending home the fact that penalties mean something.

Much responsibility rests with the court in giving the protection to the public that is sought by the laws. Recklessness cannot be overlooked without creating the impression that there is no desire to prevent it. This is recognized by New York magistrates when they sent auto drivers to jail for five to thirty days for speeding, for driving without a license and for recklessly handling their machines. It seems a bit surprising that one offender should have been brought in for the tenth time for the same offense, and yet it was probably because of the fact that prosecution in the past had amounted to no more than paying a license fee that he continued it. Some days in jail and the loss of his license may create a different opinion.

A judge in Springfield is equally confirmed in the necessity of checking dangerous drivers, as is shown by the sentence of a year in jail imposed upon a driver, whose conduct was such while under the influence of liquor that it was impossible for the court to ignore it or feel justified in imposing a milder sentence. The judges in these courts have come to recognize the fact that they must do their part in giving the public the protection to which it is entitled.

REFUELING IN THE AIR

From time to time demonstrations have been given to the effect that airplanes could remain in the air for long periods and but for the fact that they were obliged to descend to get more gasoline flights could be continued for much greater distances and other much longer time.

The situation was much the same as that which confronted the railroad trains. The expresses were able to eliminate much time occasioned by stops if they could take on water without stopping. This was accomplished by building a shallow trough alongside the track and dropping a pipe into it to scoop up the water as the train whizzed along. It saved stopping and cut the traveling time. It was a marked improvement in those days.

Difficulties of refueling the naval vessels at sea were also overcome and added to the efficiency of the warships. They were not obliged to leave their post and go to a coaling station.

What has been done in other lines is now being applied to the airplane. Navigation of the air has gone ahead with great strides. On the recent flight across the country reference was made to the amount of fuel that remained after reaching the landing point. Provision had to be made for carrying the entire gasoline supply for the trip, but before that epoch making flight is forgotten tests have been made which successfully demonstrate that the airplane can be refueled in midair and going at fast speed.

It is another step forward in air navigation the limits of which are as yet discernible.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Perhaps you have received advance warning that the Fourth of July is not far away.

The summer "don't" list appears handsome, but it is a good thing to give a little thought to.

There is nothing that makes the shore resort managers smile like the hot waves and sea serpents.

The man on the corner says: If everyone could solve all the problems there wouldn't be any puzzles.

The talk about the seizure of liquor bearing foreign vessels may prove sufficient to check the violations.

Now is the time for the home gardeners to brag about the progress the weeds are making against their efforts.

Many would be ready to put to sea in they knew where the liquor were planning to throw overboard the lahooed liquor.

These are the days when some people express their only envy that those who have started for the polar regions with MacMillan.

The interstate commerce commission says here are coal miles enough. It isn't the mines that the country has lacked but their product.

Whether there is a seizure or foreign ships may depend entirely on the steamship companies. There is nothing to prevent them from heeding the warning.

When the president of the stock exchange says that only about four million dollars were lost by the recent failures, he doesn't class the losers to any great extent.

Eré Long ag MacMillan gets into the region of icebergs all that will be needed will be to run on the rocks, get his thermometer reading and imagination will counteract any hot spell.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Hon. James J. Davis secretary of labor in President Harding's cabinet, has a most timely and illuminating article in the June number of The Heroes of Hardware on Speaking Instruments. It is surprising to those outside of official circles to be informed to what extent the illicit business is carried on. Of all the aliens, the Chinese are most eager to enter this country. "They are willing to pay from $1e to $2500 a head to any one one who will accommodate them," Cuba because of its nearness to American territory is a favorable geographical base for carrying on this kind of bootlegging. And Florida, with its extensive coast and numerous islands on the gulf side makes detection very difficult. One wonders if men so wild to enter this country will not make good citizens. Usually we prize the highest the things we have to work the hardest to get. Still it is a very hard problem to meet.

At this season of the year many of us fully understand just what it means to earn "one's bread by the sweat of his brow." That is, those of us who are cultivating what is called a vegetable garden. We do this—most of us do—for a combination of reasons; for exercise, for pleasure of getting things fresh, and in order to help a slender purse, although the latter is quite an economic problem. But the toughest question about a garden is, why does a man have to fight for everything he gets? One can hardly raise a radish without sitting down beside it waving a palm leaf fan to keep away the little pests that are flying about after free lunches. But we need other fans to keep the striped bugs away from the squash vines, and our old friend the Colorado beetle from the potato vines. But are we get fired waving three fans at once. Then we take to the bottle and bless the man who first discovered arsenate of lead.

Now if it is a fact—and the sociologist proves it from statistics—that about 10,000,000 babies which ought to have been born in the last 25 years from our most successful families have not been born, and probably twice as many from our unsuccessful stocks that ought not to have been born have been, what effect is it going to have on the quality of the coming generation? Science is asking that very important question. These figures show clearly that those parents who are not fitted in any way to give their children the best are those who are having the largest families. There is but one interpretation to be given to this tendency and that is the "survival of the un-fittest." It is not fair to the innocent little child to bring him into the world under handicapped conditions. Neither is it giving a just deal to civilization at large. Those best fitted should have more children.

Is there not a moral value in a contest that exhibits manly strength? What lies back of the college regatta? During the Yale-Harvard boat race, the most conspicuous bit of territory east of the Mississippi river, for the time being was that little strip of water between Red Top and the railroad bridge at New London. Our Thames was on the map for one brief day. The reason is clear; we like contests, we like to see those in which we are interested stand in the limelight. Very likely we have someone in either are interested stand in the limelight. Yale or Harvard who is near or dear to us; possibly we ourselves are among the graduates, and we love to have our alma mater honored. In case we have a son or near relative who is a member of one of the crews our interest merges into keen enthusiasm. But if a son of ours is among the winners it will take iron hoops to keep us in shape.

Is it quite fair on the part of the British government to be so lukewarm towards the rum running business that is so annoying to a friendly power? The government, of course, is perfectly well aware the this business seeks protection under the English flag. No one, for a moment, believes that the government is in collusion with bootleggers, nor in any way shares the enormous profits that are made. It is likewise true that these runners are quite within the legal boundaries fixed by international law, that is outside the three mile limit. And yet is it treating America in a friendly way not to exercise its moral power against a traffic which American law has made illicit? We have troubles enough on hand without having foreign powers aggravate the problem. I wonder if England has forgotten the time when she seized an American filibustering ship when laden with arms for the Fenians when they were in insurrection in Ireland, while the ship was beyond the twelve mile limit. It makes some difference whose cow it is that somebody's bull gores.

This fact is suggestive of a very able article recently issued in regard to a growing prohibition sentiment in Europe. It is nowhere very actively present on the surface, but is so strongly an under current in several countries, as to make brewers and distillers "sit up and take notice." The trend of this sentiment is not so much along moral lines as it is with us, but it is more of an economic question. The sands of commissions appointed for that purpose have shown that people who drink even light wines and beer are much poorer than those who do not. In Italy the trend is more along physiological lines, it having been discovered that lavish consumption of wines is responsible for so much tuberculosis. So alarming has this become that a crusade is threatened against this beverage. The outlook along this line is hopeful.

The word "refreshment" is full of meaning whether it is January or June. As the word refers to the food we partake one season has no more significance than another. At all times it is a "refreshment" on which our lives absolutely depend. But as these hot days come on the word has an added meaning, and that is the need of giving new vigor to burnt lawns and drooping vegetation, about the same as food braces up the debilitated body. After one of these delicious downpours, which is about the only excuse a thunder shower has for existing, this discouraged world of matter begins to look just as the human body feels when it is outside of a juicy plank steak. Some claim that vegetation is susceptible to pain and pleasure, if so it must be pleasure to have rain at this time.

There is no special religion in discomfort, any more than there is any particular holiness in pain. Discomfort and pain are not ends in themselves and do not come under moral law. They are the results of causes that cannot always be clearly defined. The value of pain or blessing, pain or pleasure is to be estimated by the attitude of mind we have towards them, and by what they do for us. Considered in themselves alone they are neutral. Simply because a man seeks discomfort as a punishment is no sign that he is a good man, it may only show that he is a fanatic. On the other hand because one seeks comfort is no evidence that he is bad, but is following an urge of his nature. As the annual vacation approaches it is natural to look forward to a little let-up from the usual activities. It is a duty one owes to himself to have a season of rest and change. He owes it to himself and others. Nobody has any use for a broken down man or woman, therefore, get the vacation.

Why is the age who knows when to turn the other cheek and when to smack his opponent down.

CONNECTICUT AS A FOREST STATE.

Among the most treasured and necessary endowments of our state is its land. It is Connecticut. The condition of any considerable part of the area of a country is sure to be reflected in no small degree in its economic and social life, and vitally affect its citizens. What are the conditions in Connecticut? writes Henry L. Baldwin, secretary of the Connecticut Forestry Association. Census figures show that 761,034 acres are improved farm lands, 641,166 acres less than in 1850.

Thousands of farms have been abandoned in these 40 years. Of the remainder, 300,000 acres may be allowed for cities and highways leaving 2,052,714 acres of our state unaccounted for. The greatest part of this area is in forest. Some is occupied by abandoned pastures, some by young second growth. The vast majority of these lands are not producing anything like their capacity for growth. Our forest problem, which is a land problem as well, concerns the constructive use of nearly two thirds of the state.

But Connecticut is a manufacturing state you say. True. But this very industrial development requires a very large amount of lumber and wood products of all sorts. Brick yards and brass mills use enormous quantities of cord wood; cheap construction lumber is needed for building homes for employees, most necessary to improve the housing conditions; the New Haven Railroad now purchases 62 per cent. of the crossties used each year in Connecticut and contemplates securing all its future requirements from local supplies. The permanence of the production of this timber is another matter which demands immediate action if these markets are to be supplied. Other markets exist. Local growing of timber means a great saving in the transportation costs of lumber. Over 85 per cent of our lumber is now brought in from other states. To put it another way of the 185 board feet of lumber consumed per capita, but 31 board feet are grown in Connecticut. Local production means returns to the farmers and other woodland owners; it means many local wood-manufacturing industries which are of great importance in the life of rural communities.

But could we not continue to import our lumber? Is not our land more valuable for other purposes. The best answer to this is that these lands are now idle, and that the area of waste land has been increasing rather than diminishing. 1,463,800 acres have been classed as permanently unsuited to agriculture, chiefly valuable for forest growth, on account of their infertile or steep and rocky character. Furthermore, it is becoming more and more difficult to secure certain kinds of lumber which could easily be grown in Connecticut. The douglas fir brought from the Pacific coast at a cost for freight greater often than the value of the lumber at the mill. With ample land available for the growing of much of our timber requirements such a condition is hardly reasonable.

The question of the rational use of all our land encounters the fact that many places are of most value to the public as parks. Areas for recreation are urgently needed near large centres of population. Opportunities for camping, hunting and fishing are all too few in Connecticut. With our large forest area such facilities should be available to every person, and not alone to those who can afford to travel long distances.

It is now believed that man has existed on earth in the neighborhood of 200,000 years and but a few centuries in all that time has he lived in houses. Early people were quick to observe the benefits to be derived from the shelter of woodlands; they learned that the plains were no place in time of storm, the forest furnished food, clothing, fuel and implements of all kinds. Game was abundant there. Today man is as dependent on the forest as ever. No degree of civilization has been attained without wood, and at no time has so much been consumed. The new uses constantly being found for wood indicate a still greater demand for it in the future. But the modern man has within him the instinctive love of the open, his natural habitat. When wearied by an overdose of city life he confines environment it is natural that the descendant of the early forest men turn to the woods for recreation and refreshment.

Connecticut lacks some of the scenic grandeur which yearly attracts hundreds of thousands of tourists to the national parks and forests in the West. There are not all the attractions for the vacationist which are found in the myriad lakes and spruce-clad mountains of the Adirondacks, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine. But our state is not without appeal to the lover of wholesome out of door recreation. The chief beauty of the vacation grounds of northern New England is in the forest. Forests Connecticut can have. The possibilities for the development of attractive resorts for visitors in the forested sections of Connecticut have so far scarcely been touched. In Maine it is estimated that over $16,000,000 is spent annually by tourists. In New Hampshire similar large sums are brought into the state as a result of the summer hotel business.

Any program for making Connecticut more attractive to the visitor should take into consideration the improvement of our forests and forest land. Brush land and burned, rocky hillsides do not attract the vacationist nor tempt a passing motorist to stop. The importance of the summer resident in the thinly settled portions of the state is very great. If he is to be encouraged to build a home and possibly eventually become a permanent resident aiding in bringing trade and prosperity to the community, thought must be given to conserving and enhancing the beauty of the landscape for it is attractive scenery, often forests and individual trees, which impress most strongly the builder of a summer home.

The wide use of the automobile brings each year numerous motor campers to the state; in New York, Pennsylvania and in many of the western forested regions public camp sites provide accommodation for transients. Stone fire-places discourage indiscriminate building of campfires and suitable leanto shelters are often erected. Preparation is made for the tourist; he is made to feel welcome. Should not Connecticut offer hospitality to visitors from other states which her citizens enjoy abroad? Here again, Connecticut has great undeveloped possibilities. A community will be known outside its own limits by the impression left on the visitor. Deeds speak louder than billboard advertising.

"Roost Connecticut" is the present cry. Plans are suggested for improving the conditions of country life. Is any such movement the question of the use of our forest land and the value of individual trees should find a prominent place. We should recognize that ours is a forest state and proceed accordingly.

So far I have spoken of conditions only and have suggested no solutions or remedies. The greatest obstacle to a reasonable use of our forest land is now the forest fire. The appalling damage of last year is so well known that I shall not repeat the figures. Such a situation cannot fail to discourage the land owner. While country property is insecure little will be spent on improvements. Reforestation is obstructed; values of woodland and other property are depressed. The first essential is a strengthening of the state forest fire protective organization. The second is the formation of an intelligent public opinion against forest fires.

A close second to fire protection in importance is the need of a larger system of state forests. Well located small public forests would be of great service in the upbuilding of the less prosperous portions of Connecticut, not only in the timber produced, but as demonstrations of forestry to neighboring woodlot owners, as centers for cooperative marketing of products, recreation areas and as sanctuaries for wild life. Every city and town should have a community forest with facilities for tourists. Such woodlands are of immense value for parks and water supply protection.

One half Connecticut cannot long fail to be affected by the condition of the other half. Idle acres make idle men. The economic and social aspects cannot be divorced. Connecticut is a forest state. In striving for material prosperity and in our desire to make surroundings more attractive a constructive policy should be adopted with regard to our forest resources.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

THE OLD GOSPEL.

And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them the next Sabbath. Acts 13: 42.

It is pleasant to find the people of Antioch in Pisidia after they had listened to St. Paul as he taught them of Christ and His resurrection asking that the same things might be told them on the next Sabbath. The truths were novel, and the preacher could present them with rare power. But there was more than this, in that the truths themselves were interesting. Yet we are almost amused at the request which was confirmed on the next Sabbath, when almost the whole city came to hear the preachers again. Yet it is in our nature to like the old, old friends, old books, old truths, and forms of truths. We like to sing the old hymns. If these truths have a special association with some experience in our life they are doubly precious. When Cromwell was on his dying bed he asked to have read to him the words of this same apostle—I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me. He said: "These words saved my life nineteen years ago."

We like old things in nature, and the old principles in which they consist. Much of our research is for the discovery of antiquity. Those who come steadily to church desire to hear the words, that is the truths, which they have heard before, and they expect this. It might be thought that it would be wearisome to hear the same things over and over. This is possible, but it would result from the smallness of the mind, the lack of depth and imagination. For we are far from exhausting the most familiar truths. It is improbable that the truth which we hear or read should be the same at different times. For we change. We are older than we were and wiser. We bring new light to the words and read them in the light which other readers throw upon them. The condition is different and the temper of the mind. Very much depends on the personal relation in which we stand. Change of position changes that which we look upon. Professor Thayer said that "words are converted as well as men." It is very true, and the conversion of the man is the conversion of the words.

In the teaching of Christ Himself there was little which was entirely new. To help us to understand His wonderful words of life, He used simple words and illustrations, that we might comprehend His message. He spoke as never man had spoken. It was new to those who listened, "Come unto Me and I will give you rest," was never be an old promise. To be weary is always a new experience, and rest is as new as if it had never visited us. His definitions are always new, because we have not learned them, and the life which is framed upon them is new. Eternal life, worship, duty, heaven, all as they are, are new as He describes them, and we commit His words to our life. With all our fondness for variety our chief dependence is in the old. We turn where we have been before, knowing what is there.

If this world is ever saved from its sin it must be through the old Gospel that was preached by the Christ of Galilee. It must be the Gospel in John 3:16; John 10:1. Also bear in mind Rev. 22:18 and 19. We must affirm or reaffirm the changeless facts; search them more thoroughly, obey them more diligently and truth will be new and full of life and we shall grow in our knowledge of the centrality—personal loyalty to a personal Master, the crucified, risen, reigning Christ.

"How did it happen this time?" was the next question.

RECREATION INSTITUTE TO HOLD CLOSING SESSION

The recreation institute at the Y. M. C. A. closes this (Saturday) morning with a lecture by Miss Ruth Shermame on Special Activities for the Playground and a demonstration of games and athletics for older boys by Harold Anson Bruce, the new superintendent of recreation. It is expected to get the Norwich playground work started by the middle of next week.

Friday's lecture was on the Practical Conduct of Recreation Centers, followed by a demonstration of Swedish, Danish and Norwegian folk dances and a group of old English country dances.

In introducing the subject, Miss Sherburne called attention to the fact that she had not used the word "playground" in the title of her talk for the day, for the reason that "playground was a technical term applied to a particular type of recreation center, whereas she hoped to discuss the conduct of facilities both indoor and outdoor, suitable for leisure time activities of adults as well as children, throughout the entire year.

She spoke of the types of administration of recreation systems that are permissible under the Connecticut law, remarking that experience has shown that administration under a special recreation commission offers the best opportunities for development of the work. More and more cities each year are operating a year round program with a superintendent of recreation in charge of the work who is in all respects to this department what the superintendent of schools is to the school system. Many communities find it advantageous to conduct a privately supported community organization that works along with the municipal body, aiding and supplementing and reinforcing the municipal work.

"City planning experts," said Miss Sherburne, "are laying great stress upon setting aside open spaces for various types of recreation centers. There is, first, the large park, of which Mohegan park is a wonderfully beautiful example. Norwich is well provided with this sort of recreation ground as it far exceeds the standard of 10 to 20 acres for every 10,000 population that has been set as the minimum. The little city square or beauty spot is another essential type. Then there is the athletic field or play field, an area of several acres, suitable for major sports and the activities of older boys and men. Where it is possible, cities in acquiring new school sites, are now purchasing enough land so that there may be extensive athletic fields in connection with both grade schools and high schools. "Playground" is a technical term applied to specific areas set aside for the use of the younger children. Sometimes they are in connection with a larger play field, as in the case of the Lake street grounds, or they may be separate spaces, or the school yards may be used. At any rate, long study has shown that these playgrounds must be so scattered over th city that children do not have to go more than four or five blocks, as the radius of efficiency of a playground for children up to 12 years of age does not exceed a quarter of a mile, although older boys will go much further to a place where they can play baseball.

"In addition to these types of outdoor recreation areas, cities are laying out municipal golf courses, developing bathing beaches and swimming pools as valuable assets to the health and happiness of the people.

"For indoor recreation centers, cities are using their school buildings that have gymnasiums and auditoriums and also for neighborhood gatherings, their city halls and other public buildings. There is a tendency to erect special recreation buildings such as community houses and well equipped field houses in connection with athletic fields, that may be used as municipal clubhouses.

"In developing outdoor areas, care and forethought should be taken before any improvements are made. It is money well spent to call upon a landscape architect for planning the lay-out of the grounds, for a tree planted in the wrong place may ruin a baseball diamond, or poor judgment in the placing of permanent equipment may waste much valuable play space. Furthermore, a good plan carefully followed permits of development over a period of years and prevents haphazard improvements that later prove to be detriments.

"Every play center for children should have some sort of a shelter house provided with comfort stations, drinking fountains and a place for the storage of materials. These are the minimum essentials, and really fine play centers have field houses that can be used winter and summer for club meetings and other gatherings.

"Aside from a few swings, sand boxes and possibly some teeters and a slide, apparatus on a playground is not only unnecessary but rather undesirable. What is necessary is ample play space, a good surface, plenty of play materials such as balls of various sorts, games, and materials for handicraft, and above all well trained play leaders. The leadership makes the playground. The attendance and results at a play center depend upon the quality of the leadership."

The Aurora Borealis.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED BY TEXTILE OPERATIVES MEET.

James Tansey of Fall River was re-elected president of the American Federation of Textile Operatives Friday morning at the third session of the operatives' convention being held in this city. The business meeting was called to order at 9.30 o'clock by President Tansey at Odd Fellows' hall. Present at the meeting were Lawrence Lahue of Philadelphia and William Limper, also of Philadelphia, representing the Textile Unions of America, Thomas Addison of Taftville, representing the International Spinners' Union and President Andrew Vance of Philadelphia, representing the Tapestry Workees of America, all of whom briefly addressed the gathering.

Organizer Joseph T. Walsh of the Bakers' International Union of America addressed the convention, speaking of the bakers' strike in the Ward bread plants. He urged the delegates to get behind the strike and to ask the public to buy union made bread. The workmen's compensation law came up for discussion and the convention was asked to endeavor to have the law changed so that compensation will start from the date of injury.

The officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, James Tansey of Fall River; first vice president, Abraham Binns, New Bedford; third vice president, William McNamara, Fall River; general secretary, John P. O'Connell, Salem, Mass.; treasurer, William Harwood, Fall River; all re-elections. Executive committee, Joseph Feteau, William Lumex, Oliver Christian, Thomas Goodwin, Manuel Silva, James Simpson, James Walsh, Victor Soura, John Keefe and James Monahan.

The convention adopted a resolution indorsing the federation officers' action in rendering financial aid and other aid in the Putnam strike situation. Another resolution adopted endorses the financial aid given strike areas by the Federation of Textile Unions of America. Adjournment was taken about 2.30 o'clock. The convention will close with the session today (Saturday).

During the early morning the New England Textile Fixers' Protective Alliance met in annual convention in the Wauregan hotel at which time reports were heard of the activities of the organization and its officers during the past year.

The convention adjourned until a date to be announced later when the election of officers will take place.

DRIVES IN GUTTER AND ON SIDEWALKS

Peter Starzec, 38, of Preston, showed a tendency here Friday night to drive his automobile in the gutter and on the sidewalk instead of in the middle of the street. He was arrested for driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor and, after he had secured bonds in $200 had to get someone else to drive the car home for him. He had with him his wife, several children and a man friend.

Starzec first came into police attention when he had started for home and was driving along Main street near the drinking fountain on the East Side. He was running his car in the gutter where he ran into the rear end of the parked machine of Harry E. Spicer of 26 Otrobando avenue, denting the mudguard. Officer Elmer Allen ordered Starzec to drive down the street a ways so that he could turn around to go to the police station. The man turned into a driveway and in backing around landed up on the sidewalk. When he got straightened out of this tangle and had driven over to police headquarters he steered his car up on to the sidewalk in front of the United Congregational church.

WESTERLY TEXTILE STRIKE HAS BEEN SETTLED

Westerly, June 29.—At a special meeting of the Textile Operatives of the Lorraine Manufacturing company held in Caledonian hall on Main street this evening it was voted that all the operatives out on strike return to work on Monday, July 2. It had been planned by the mill management to close down the coming week in as much as the Fourth of July was a holiday and needed repairs could be made during the shutdown.

The return to work followed a guarantee from the company that everybody will be dealt fairly and squarely with at their return with no discrimination and on account of unionism or participation in the strike. That any real grievance they have will be rectified as soon as they return by reference to Superintendent R. E. Steere who will deal with them directly and an impartial decision will be given thereon.

Treasurer McColl has stated that to show sincerity of the company, if grievances are not cared for locally, a telegram to him at Pawtucket will receive immediate attention.

This settlement follows a series of conferences on Wednesday and Thursday when Treasurer William B. McColl, Assistant Treasurer Thomas Walker, Superintendent R. E. Steere, a committee of the operatives and Robert M. McWade, United States Conciliator, Department of Labor, in charge of textile disputes, were present.

ENTERTAINING LECTURE ON IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA

Ada Ward, an Englishwoman, was the lecturer Friday night at the Chautauqua tent on the Academy campus, speaking upon the topic, "You Folks Over Here," which she made both humorous and serious in giving her impressions of America and Americans. She spoke first with the deepest admiration of the splendid American surgeons and Red Cross nurses whom she saw in the early years of the war and of the American boys who were in the British and Canadian armies before America entered the war.

Coming to America, her first vivid impression was of the wonderful baggage system, but her poor little Empire trunk collapsed under the strain. When she saw American locomotives she understood why the American soldiers called the English engines peanut roasters, and she felt very much at home, she said, while coming up from New London to Norwich by trail.

Until she knew what they were she thought barber shops here were all operating rooms for accident cases and she marvelled that the public paid so little attention. She thought that the American man who would get shaved in public with a manicurist attending to some details of his toilet, was a real hero, for the thing that the Englishman avoids of all others is to look silly in public.

Are Americans conscious of their luxuries, she asked, their bath tubs, electricity, telephone in private homes, ice water, porches, rocking chairs, peanuts and popcorn?

The American homes, she declared, are wonderful places, but beautiful as they are, they seem to be regarded as principally places to get away from, what with automobiles and the urge for constant amusement. And the children seem to have the like word and no new word and all in between. Isn't there a danger that we are losing our home life?

Miss Ward praised our wonderful community spirit but said that the two most wonderful things to her were that 3,000 miles of ungarded border between the United States and Canada and the fact that we all speak English over such stretches of territory. As many languages, Americ and England may look at things differently but in fundamentals these two mighty nations are alike. Miss Ward suggested that this perhaps was part of the plan of the great architect of the universe to forward the cause of peace on earth. They together should unite to hold up the torch of freedom and civilization.

The musical part of the evening was by the Ernest Gamble Concert company, who gave a fine programme in which the artists were Mr. Gamble, baritone, Miss Martha Reed, lyric soprano, and Miss Verna Leone Page, violinist.

In the afternoon, programme, the concert company gave a programme and the lecture was by Harry R. McKean upon "Your Community Is Revolution."

In the junior Chautauqua there is to be a kite tournament today (Saturday) at 10 a. m. daylight time. It is required that all kites must be home made. There will be ribbon prizes for altitude, novelty and 100 dash races.

The musical programme for Saturday afternoon will be by the Rowles Robertson company and in the evening, "The Taming of the Shrew" Shakespeare's comedy, will be given.

BETTER TROLLEY SERVICE FOR THE WEST SIDE

Several matters of interest to the general public came up at a meeting of the directors of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce held Friday noon at the Wauregan hotel. The directors discussed the petition of the Connecticut company for permission to construct a turnout on West Main street, near Mt. Pleasant street. They felt the petition is worthy of approval.

As it was felt that the 6 o'clock trolley service has been inadequate, President H. M. Lerou of the chamber of commerce took the matter up with General Manager Anderson, who has agreed to either run larger cars on the route or run extras during the rush hours.

A letter has been received by the chamber from F. C. Coley, general passenger agent of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road, in which he states that the New Haven desires to rearrange the local train schedules to meet the needs of Norwich but that it is felt that it would be impracticable to put any radical changes into effect at the present time. Mr. Coley said in his letter that as soon as the subject can be fully gone over he will discuss this train service further with the chamber officials.

The meeting accepted an invitation from the Willimantic Chamber of Commerce to join with them and the chambers of commerce of Rockville and Putnam at an outing at Storrs college, Thursday, Aug. 16.

The appointment of President Lerou as a director of the state chamber was approved. The matter of auto parking space in this city was taken up for discussion. Parking space, especially on Saturdays, has become a big problem in Norwich. In referring the matter to the chamber's street committee the committee were asked to make a study of the situation and report back to the directors with recommendations.

"The Mate's Watch."

From the report of a shipping case: "The steamer proceeded on her way, until 7 or rather later, when a noise was heard as of a heavy body like an anchor or a chain being dragged along the deck from the funnel aft. It was the mate's watch."

Character and Money.

Character is money; and according as the man earns or spends the money, money in turn becomes character. As money is the most evident power in the world's uses, so the use that he makes of money is often all that the world knows of a man.—Bulwer Lytton.

That Was Different.

"My husband has rooms at his mother's house," said a woman to an English magistrate, "and as I object to living with relatives I would not go there. He can come and live with me." "Quite right," said the magistrate. "Where are you living?" "With my mother."

The Unusual.

We asked the telephone girl at the great railway station her impression of the people who crowded up to the booths all day long. "Oh," she said, "mostly I don't notice particularly. I only look up if there's something unusual—like somebody saying 'Thank you.'"—Collier's Weekly

Wolverine Fur Prized.

The natives of the North wear the furs that stand the hardest wear, and wolverine is the most prized fur among Eskimos, as they trim their parka hoods with it on account of the hairs shedding water, or rather the moisture of respiration.

DANIELSON

This week end brings this community—as it presumably brings many others—to the eve of the holiday period. The festivities will be inaugurated Tuesday evening and for those who do not insist on a great flare of excitement and tremendous doings there will be plenty of entertainment, diversion, amusement and opportunities of quiet outings in Danielson and the territory hereabouts. Goodyear chips in to make the eve of the holiday interesting by announcing a fine display of fireworks. On the eve, too, there will be dancing at Wildwood park, with exhibition features. Wednesday morning bright and early, East Killingly will get into the swing of the holiday celebration by setting its much talked of parade underway. This will be well worth seeing and will be participated in by many representing communities outside of East Killingly. The only drawback attached for many is that it is scheduled to get under way at 8.30, standard time, and that is altogether too early for a great many people, especially those who have few holidays and rather enjoy a little later sleep when the opportunity presents itself. But there'll be a big crowd on hand, the hour notwithstanding, for everyone doesn't slee pon the morning of the Fourth, especially if it be a noisy one.

The theatres contribute attractive programs on the holiday, baseball games announced and Putnam has a race fair on, so first and last one who wants diversion should find something satisfactory among all the entertainments and enterprises.

Dressmaking: alterations, 90 Mechanic street.—adv.

Members of Danielson people who were in Providence to see the Ringling-Barnum shows Thursday evening had a sorry time of it. Caught in a tremendous downpour of rain, umbrellas and rubbers provided only meagre protection. Wet clothing and wet feet were the rule by the time they gained entrance to the big top, which was letting water through as from a sieve. To cap the climax the circus management didn't overlook any chances of doing business and rows of people stood, with umbrellas over their heads in the parade space between the reserved seats and the rings, almost entirely cutting off the view of those in the lower rows of reserves. In several instances local parties endured the situation for as long as twenty minutes only to leave in disgust with the show just getting under way. Ruffled tempers and ruined clothing were souvenirs of what promised to be a real evening of pleasure. Several cars returned here from the show by 10 o'clock.

It was stated Friday afternoon that nothing is known as yet at the local barracks as to whether any of the new officers who are going on duty the first of July will be assigned to the Danielson station. There is general interest in this because of the recently promulgated instructions and announcements to motorists relative to more careful observance of the motor vehicle laws, as printed in full in The Bulletin of Friday. While comparatively little speeding is now being done in this territory, there are many abuses of the road rules, such as cutting in and hogging the road. Additional state police patrols in this eastern section of the state would, all careful drivers feel, make the highways safer in this year of tremendously heavy traffic.

Chautauqua, after a pleasing series of entertainments, closed this year's engagement in Danielson Friday evening. During Friday an effort was being made to obtain guarantors for next year's booking and the understanding is there will be no contract made unless at least 75 guarantors are obtained. This years Chautauqua has developed a deficit, but not so great a one as had to be met last year. It appears that Chautauqua has not received during the past two years in Danielson the guaranty support it should have and this has been a great disappointment to those who are interested in the summer courses of entertainments, the difficulty being similar to that experienced in maintaining the Young People's course, which for years provided winter attractions of merit and distinction. It was said Friday that the prospect for getting 75 guarantors seemed favorable and if this is done Chautauqua will be here again next summer.

On account of the celebration at East Killingly on the Fourth the Connecticut company will maintain hourly trolley service between that place and Danielson. It also may be mentioned that East Killingly has provided parking space for 2,000 automobiles.

Judge W. Penner Woodward appeared as counsel in a justice's court at Central Village Friday for a client who was charged with a violation of the automobile laws.

Misses Marguerite and Lucile Caron are to spend the greater part of July at Poland Springs, Me., leaving during the coming week.

E. U. G. Baker, whose body was buried in Westfield cemetery Thursday, was for years a resident of Danielson.

It was estimated Friday that nearly an inch of rain fell in the heavy downpour of the night before. The rain was welcomed as a great benefit to crops.

Foster A. Milton of Roxbury, Mass., was a visitor with friends in Danielson Friday.

Worn ties on the local section of the New Haven road are being replaced with chemical treated ties which it is expected will remain in service for twenty years. Ordinary untreated chestnut ties do not last more than five or six years.

Misses Flora Keach, Edith Fuller and Frances Danielson and Mrs. B. C. Hopkins have been at Middletown this week attending a school of religious education.

PUTNAM

Following a conference between A. E. Whitney, representing the Minneapolis Trust company and representatives of the Putnam Cemetery Association it was announced Friday morning the plans had been approved for the Tourtellotte Memorial chapel to be located in Grove street cemetery and that work likely would be started upon it at once.

In 1913 Harriet Tourtellotte of Minneapolis, formerly of the town of Thompson, set aside a fund of $35,000, in Liberty bonds for the erection of this memorial chapel. Her death occurred in 1919. Since that time it has been deemed advisable to build the memorial because of exceedingly high costs and in the mean time the fund has increased to $42,000, and it is probable that the entire amount will be expended in constructing what probably will be the finest structure of its kind in the eastern part of the state, excepting $3,000 which will be reserved that the income therefrom may be used for maintenance of the building.

The chapel will be formally known as the Tourtellotte-Arnold Memorial, the title memorializing Mrs. Harriet Arnold Tourtellotte and her husband, Dr. J. E. Tourtellotte, who died a number of years ago. Another munificent gift of Mrs. Tourtellotte's was the beautiful Tourtellotte High school at North Grosvenordale in the town of Thompson.

The site selected for the chapel is on the Grove street side of the cemetery, a commanding location about 100 feet back from the street. Rough surfaced gray brick and gray limestone will enter into the construction of the memorial which will be 62 by 27 feet. It will have large cathedral type windows with stained glass and a slate roof. The style will be Gothic.

A commodious vestibule will lead to the chapel, which will have a seating capacity of 125. The chancel, elevated from the floor, will be at the front of the chapel. The chancel will have a terrazzo floor and marble sides. An organ will be placed at the right of the chancel and just in front of the organ two pews for members of the choir that may assist in any funeral service held there. At the left of the chancel there will be a room for mourners. This room may be entered from outside without passing through the main part of the chapel and will afford the desired privacy for the bereaved.

At the head of the aisle the plans call for the installation of a lift. Use of this during the winter months will permit by the mere pressing of a button of lowering the casket to the crypt in the basement of the chapel where as many as 36 bodies may be entombed. The compartments in the crypt will be of most modern design and construction.

Very little wood will enter into the construction of the memorial. With the exception of the chancel, the floors will be of concrete. The plan is to make the building as near fireproof as may be possible.

A considerable amount of landscape work must be undertaken in connection with the building of the memorial in order that it may have the proper setting—with shrubs, trees, flowering plants, bordering walks through the approach.

Parents and friends of the piano pupils of Miss Gertrude Perry gathered at her home on Providence street Friday afternoon to hear them in a recital. The program was as follows: Humpty Dumpty, Livsey; Stanley Yates; Let Us Try, Spaulding, Katherine Adams; The Top, Maxim, Orise Lucier; Columbine, H. Smith, Elsie Deberadinis; Pups in the Corner, Rogers, John McKenna; The Windmill, Bartlett, Stuart Sabin; Brave Little Warrior, Krogmann, Russell Ryan; Hunting Song, Gurlitt, Clinton Davison; Cherry Blossoms, Anthony, Marjorie Benoit; Uncle Remus, Grant Schaefer, Louis Sherman; Kewpie's Lullaby, Crosby, Harry Wheaton; The Chase, Frimi, Billy Moss; In Line of March, Rogers, Thomas Deberadinis; Hunter's Horn, Harker, Calder Stoddard; Dancing Lesson, Frimi, Helen Verbeedian; Maytime, Huerter, Judith Sabin; Dreamy Angel, Krogmann, Alice Perry.

Many matters claim the attention of County Game Warden Charles M. Letters of this city in enforcing the state fish and game laws. Just now one of the things on which he is putting time is getting a line on dogs that are in the habit of chasing deer. Instancing what such dogs do, Warden Letters told Friday morning of investigating a case in a neighboring town wherein a dog chased a doe and fawn, unable to stand the pace, was seized by the dog and so badly chewed and bitten that even the ministration of a kindly man who found the wounded animal and carried it to his home were unavailing—and it died. Owners of dogs who allow them the liberty that makes it possible for them to hunt deer are liable to penalties under the law and Warden Letters hopes to identify some of the dogs that are doing this thing and bring their owners to court.

Salvation Army Workers in this city will wind up their home service fund with the red letter event today and will feature it by bringing the army ten piece orchestra here from Hartford to give a concert in the Congregational church this evening. In addition to the orchestra music there will be vocal numbers, readings and instrumental solos on the program. This concert is to be open to the public without charge and in celebration of the completion of the $1800 fund which will be rounded out today. The drive ending today has been conducted here and in surrounding territory and has been liberally responded to, much money coming from workers in many lines of endeavor.

This city will be the scene of nightly parade during the coming week when the Elks' fair is underway and Putnam is due for music and parading on a scale that would do credit to a three ring circus. Monday evening the Willimantic Elks will open the show with a parade in which Putnam lodge will participate. Willimantic has sent word that it is coming over strong, and Willimantic usually makes good, as witness the showing that lodge made on its appearance here last year. Tuesday will be Webster night, and this baby lodge, only recently instituted and an offspring of Putnam lodge, will come here bands and banners for its first parade. Wednesday, the Fourth, will be given over by the Putnam Elks to a monster celebration of the holiday, with a remarkable display of fireworks in the evening.

Thursday evening Elks from Danielson, Southbridge, Moosup and North Grosvenordale will be on hand to celebrate the period especially set aside for them and this also promises to a high point of the week. Friday will be Governor's night and Governor Templeton will be present and deliver an address. The grand windup will come a week from this city Saturday evening. Remembering what a wonderful time Putnam lodge gave the city last year, the public is all keyed up for what is on the cards as the real big week of the season for Putnam.

Committees to make arrangements for transportation, sports, meals, treats, etc., have been appointed in connection with plans for the outing of the Congregational Sunday school to be held at Roseland park on the afternoon of July 12. The Sigma Chi class of the school also has a picnic planned to be held at Wildwood park today.

An extremely heavy rainstorm that did not end until the very early hours of Friday morning brought much needed relief from the dry conditions that have prevailed in the county practically throughout the month of June.

Motor cars and about every train brought boys to Putnam Friday en route to Camp Woodstock, the tri-county Y. M. C. A. camp in Woodstock.

Material to be used in the resurfacing of the state highway between this city and Pomfret station, a distance of five and a half miles, is being distributed along the route.

There was no change Friday in the strike situation, which remains deadlocked with both sides apparently determined to hold to the attitudes they have maintained for nearly eight weeks.

Reports continue to come in daily of additions of $50 units for the Nurses' Home fund, which is steadily advancing toward the half way mark, which should be reached during July.

JEWETT CITY

Mrs. Paul Anthony was awakened about two o'clock Friday night by smoke which filled the room and made her breathing so oppressive that it awakened her. Arousing her husband they found that the smoke came from the shoemaker's shop on the ground floor, next door neighbor was called and she had the fire whistle blown. In the meantime Officer Viegard secured a chemical fro mthe Finn Block and E. H. Hiscox, Jr., another from his home. The door was broken in and the two men turned the chemicals on a lively blaze in the corner of the shop. Within ten minutes after the alarm was blown the fire company with the truck were on the scene. The woodwork was badly scorched and a wooden box burned. The brushes on the machine on that side of the room were burned. But the fire had not had time to spread, fortunately. The block is owned by Paul Anthony and is occupied by himself and two other families, Sol Paquette's barber shop, a pool room and the shoe maker's shop occupied by Nicolas Arar. The damage is carried by insurance.

The communion service at the Congregational church Sunday will be observed at six o'clock daylight time. Rev. C. H. Rickette of Greeneville is to assist at the service, and it would be impossible for him to leave his own church on Sunday morning. A vesper communion service will be arraigned, which it is hoped every member of the parish will attend, as a class of twenty-four will be received into the church and one baby is to be christened.

The new Ashland raft was made possible by the two carnivals which were held for that purpose. It was built by Louis Guillotte boss carpenter at Ashland mills, Alphonse Fontaine and William Lapointe. Much credit for the sturdy construction of the raft is due them.

Dog Warden Viegard will commence prosecutions for unlicensed dogs next week.—adv.

The Congregational picnic is to be held at Ocean Beach today. It is hoped that everyone in the church who has a car will come to the church at one o'clock daylight time.

A newspaper dispatch states that the Furness-Bermuda liner Fort St. George which sailed Wednesday for Bermuda had a collection of old shoes hanging over the tafrail, and her promenade deck was slippery with rice. She carried twenty-seven brides, one of whom was probably Mrs. Jay Ricketts, who was to sail for Bermuda on that day.

PLAINFIELD

There was a pretty June wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Rundell when their daughter, Marion Elizabeth Rundell was married to Charles Henry Barber, Rev. William O. Prentiss, pastor of the First Congregational church officiating. The single ring service was used and only the immediate family attended the ceremony. The decorations were beautiful and in keeping with the month of June. The bride was attended by her maid of honor, Miss Marguerite Wallfield of Danvers, Mass., and the groom's best man was Allen L. Rundell, a brother of the bride. The bride was gowned in white canton crepe with Spanish lace and wore a bridal veil of roses. The bridesmaid wore a dress of orchid silk.

Following the ceremony, there was a reception and a bountiful lunch served. There were lovely presents of cut glass, silver, linen, and gold and paper money. Mr. and Mrs. Barber will reside in the Spalding home at the junction of Gallup and Academy streets. Mr. and Mrs. Barber are well known and have a large circle of friends who wish them well in their new home.

The July communion will be held at the Congregational church Sunday morning and there will be a reception of new members. In the evening Ralph Veit will speak of his year's experience in Mendon, Ill., and George Inglis will sing.

Morgissey, tournaments of quoits and croquet from 11 to 12; swimming meet in the pool from 2 to 3, and an old fashioned and modern dance in the evening at 8 o'clock.

Plans are all made for the Lincoln club to go to Rocky Point on Monday for their summer outing. The Plainfield band will accompany the club and automobiles furnished for transportation. A large company is planning to attend the outing. Leon Frink will line the autos up Monday morning at the Community House for an eight o'clock star for the shore. The committee in charge, Leon Frink, Elmer Greene, Elmer Phillips, Walter Cleland, Carl Mathewson, George Wilson.

MYSTIC

Funeral services of Thaddeus W. Pecor were held at his home on High street Thursday afternoon. Rev. J. G. Osborne, pastor of the Union Baptist church, officiated. Sons of Veterans acted as bearers. Interment was in Elm Grove cemetery. Delegates were present from Charity and Relief lodge, K. of P., and Stonington lodge, I. O. O. F., and the G. A. R.

MANY CRIMINAL CASES FOR POLICE COURT SESSION IN NEW LONDON

New London, June 29.—Charles Wardlow, colored, employed as chef at the Sea Food restaurant on Bank street, was arrested this noon by Patrolman George Perkins on a warrant issued by Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin, charging Wardlow with forgery. Wardlow was locked up because of his failure to procure a surety on his bond. He will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning. Wardlow, whose right name is said to be Charles Fair, and a former proprietor of the Eureka restaurant, when that place was operated at the corner of Bank and Pearl streets, is alleged to have negotiated a check, drawn by himself on the Peconic bank of Sag Harbor in the sum of $140 and made payable to George Madigan. Madigan endeavored to cash the check and discovered that it was a forged document and worthless. Complaint was made to Prosecutor Cronin and Wardlow's apprehension followed. The forgery occurred last November.

Two youths residing in the Fort Neck section of the city were arrested this afternoon by Patrolman John Clifford when the officer discovered the youths endeavoring to sell as junk a shaft to a motor boat, a reverse gear and stuffing box. The officer believed that the boat fittings were those stolen from the boat of Martin Butler of No. 28 Richards street yesterday afternoon while the craft was moored in Winthrop's cove, but with the arrest of the youths it developed that the plunder was recently taken from a boat owned by Thomas Ryan, a water tender stationed at the United States Coast Guard academy. The boys declared that they went to Powder Island, which is located in the Thames river and a short distance from Fort Trumbull, where they found the boat's gears and believing that the brass and iron had been abandoned, brought it ashore where they endeavored to dispose of it. The boys were turned over to Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield.

Mrs. Fannie E. Allen, wife of George B. Allen of Hope alley, died late Wednesday at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, where she had been under treatment but a short time. The body was removed to Mrs. Allen's former home Thursday.

Robert Linsey, of No. 5 Dabell street, Providence, and who claims to be employed in that city by a crockery firm, and temporarily making his home at No. 11 Pearl street, will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning, charged with fraud. Linsey has been in the city several days and has been soliciting orders for crockery by a house to house canvas, Linsey accepting orders upon the payment of $1 by the housewife and assuring her that a New London firm would shortly make delivery of the goods. One of the women who gave Linsey an order investigated the statements made by the salesman and ascertained that these were untrue and she lodged complaint with Prosecuting Attorney Cronin this afternoon, resulting in Linsey being ordered into court. Four women, who Linsey visited and made representations to in his efforts to dispose of his goods, have been summoned to court to tell of the statements Linsey made and the representations that he alleged would be followed in the sale and delivery of the orders.

Alice Curran, the 12 years' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Curran of No. 29 Potter street, who ran away from home three weeks ago with a sailor and who was arrested in Boston Tuesday, is back in New London tonight, being in charge of Policewoman Alice Hunt. Tomorrow the girl will probably be sent to the Long Lane Home, Middletown, for an indefinite term. The girl was arraigned in the Boston city court this morning, charged with bad conduct and was sentenced to the Massachusetts Home for Girls, but the execution of the sentence was suspended and accused turned over to the New London probation officer with the understanding that the girl remain away from Boston. If she returns to that city the sentence will automatically become effective. The girl admits running away with the sailor, going to Norwich and thence to Boston, where she alleges he deserted her two days after they left New London. The sailor, according to the girl, is now aboard the U. S. S. Camden, now in port.

Harry Rogers and Mrs. Gertrude Shaffer, both of Montville, were married this afternoon by Rev. Mr. Stearns the ceremony being performed at the home of the clergyman, Albert Babcock of Montville was best man and Mrs. Babcock attended the bride. The bride was attired in a travelling gown and wore a corsage of Ophelia roses. The maid of honor wore a street costumes and wore a corsage of Columbia roses. Mr. Rogers is employed at the Montville box shop.

Two women, believed to be mother and daughter and residing in either New London or Groton and who have successfully applied their trade at shoplifting from time to time, operating when the couple visited the Sport Shop, conducted by Louis Markow in the Plant building, States street, and stole a fancy dress, valued at $58. The couple went to the store during the middle of the forenoon upon the representation of intending to purchase a dress. They were showed several garments, and after a lengthy inspection they departed from the store without making a purchase. After the two women had absented themselves from the store a short time, Mrs. Robert Chappell, saleslady at the store, discovered a fancy green dress missing and remembering that the elder of the two women wore a long cape, Mrs. Chappell immediately informed the police. Motorcycle Officer William Babcock was assigned to the case and from information he obtained, it is believed that the two men are the same couple who stole a dress from the store of Rockwell & Company several months ago and who last Christmas stole one or more turkeys from the Schwaner Brothers market. In both latter instances the theft was made by placing the stolen goods beneath the capt of one of the women.

A reunion of alumni of Bulkeley High school assembled at the Hotel Griswold, Eastern Point this evening, the occasion being the golden jubilee of the opening of the school, many of them coming hundreds of miles to be present. Dinner was served at 7 o'clock in the main dining room with Prof. Walter A. Towne, former principal of the school, officiating as toastmaster. Included among the speakers at the post prandial exercises were Mayor John F. Murray, who delivered an address of welcome; Lieut. Gov. Hiram Bingham and George S. Chappell of Bridgeport, the latter of the class of '96, whose subject was "The Home High School."

Announcement is made of the engagement of Isidor Baruch, a practicing attorney of Washington and son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Baruch of Montauk avenue, to Miss Anna Beebarn Kaufman of Providence, Mr. Baruch is a graduate of Bulkeley High school, Brown University and George Washington University Law school. He is now connected with the United States Civil Service Commission in Washington.

Walter Bir of Bridgeport and Miss Ruth B. Baisdell of New London, were married last evening at the parsonage of the First Baptist church on West street, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Chester H. Howe. William F. Hart of Oklahoma was best man and Miss Peggy MacNeil of New London attended the bride. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Bar received the congratulations of their relatives and friends at a luncheon served at the home of Mrs. John MacNeil, No. 20 Farnsworth street, after which the couple departed upon their wedding tour. They will take up their future home in Bridgeport on July 20th.

Miss Helen Sullivan, of the force of operators of the Southern New England Telephone Exchange, has resigned her position and tomorrow will enter the Nurses Training school of Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital.

Louis Fellman was fined $10 in the police court for violating the 4th of July ordinance. Fellman supposed that if he could buy the fireworks at wholesale he could sell them at retail. "Why not," he asked, with a shrug of his shoulders. He was told why not. Fellman has been selling to children during the past few days while others have been waiting for a chance to sell and to pay $25 for that chance.

A class of violators of the motor parking ordinance was arraigned this forenoon. The members of the class had all sorts of reasons for failing to take notice of the signs along the principal business streets prohibiting parking, but not one of the accused offered blindness nor inability to read as an excuse for failing to refrain from leaving their cars at the curbing as long as they desired to leave them. In the group of offenders was Joseph A. Cauldfield, an employe of Plaut-Cadden. He pleaded not guilty but he didn't mean that, for in his next breath he admitted that he was guilty and that he had parked his car under the notion that there was to be no parking after 6 p. m. Officers Courtney and Corcoran declared that Cauldfield was a flagrant violator as he was parked for 40 minutes and when he was sought he couldn't be found. L. H. Beck was another offender for parking on Bank street. John R. Sterling, a Lyme resident, who said he had been coming here many years to trade, stopped for refreshment at a dining place on State street and was there so long that he was tagged to go to court. Henry Tomany, a commercial traveler, was nabbed in front of the Mohican. He met another drummer who was in town for a vacation and the pair went to the Griswold in Groton. They stayed so long with Tomany's car in front of the Mohican that there was doubt as to whether there was an owner of the car. Miss Dorothy Henkle was out in her car soliciting for charity. She was so occupied that she forgot all about the parking ordinance. Now Judge Pringle heard the stories the various offenders had to tell and then he cautioned them about failing to obey the ordinances in the future suspending judgment to show them that he was not disposed to be too severe with them. Peter Albro, an electrician's helper, was fined $5 when he admitted that he realized the provisions of the ordinance but left his car where he was at work two hours.

To my Love—
In the [illegible]
And thine—
That from [illegible]
My wayfarings I send.

To stick to facts is very well—
But who can claim [illegible]
Who does not now [illegible]
That stalwart little plant.
The labor always well repays;
Indeed I've seen it all my days
Despite a harvest mash.

If life is just a lottery
Forsooth the tickets are all free.
There's nought at all to risk;
So I—I always fill my heart
Quite full. Let fortune cast her dart,
I let my fancy frisk.

Let other men for trouble look,
The future is my pocketbook,
Its wealth hath never flown?
For me there is a wondrous lure
In things of which I can't be sure,
I live in the unknown.

JUNE RAPTURE

Green! What a world of green! my startled soul
Panting for beauty long denied,
Leaps in a passion of high gratitude
To meet the wild embraces of the wood;
Rushes and flings itself upon the whole
Mad miracle of green, with senses wide,
Clings to the glory, hugs and holds it fast,
As one who finds a long-lost love at last.
Billows of green that break upon the sight
In bounteous crescendos of delight.
Wind-hurried verdure hastening up the hill
To where the sun its highest rapture spills;
Cascades of cool tumbling down the height
In golden gushes of delicious light—
God! Can I bear the beauty of this day?

Sheathing itself in veils of amber dusk;
Breathing a silence suffocating, sweet,
Wherein a million pulses beat.
Look! How the very air takes fire and thrills
With hint of heaven pushing through her husk.
Ah, joy's not stopped! The only sloop intense,
Here, where Creation's fathers all the dance;
Here where I crush me to the radiant sod,
Close folded to the very nerve of God.
See now—I hold my heart against this tree,
The life that thrills its trembling leaves thrills me,
There's not a pleasure pulsing through its veins
That does not sting me with ecstatic pains.
No twig or tracery, however fine,
Can bear a tale of joy exceeding mine.

Praised be the gods that made my spirit mad;
Kept me aflame and raw to beauty's touch,
Lashed me and scourged me with a whip of fate;
Gave me so often agony for mate;
Tore from my heart the things that make men glad—Praised be the gods! If I at last, by such Relentless means may know the sacred bliss,

Smite me, O Life, and bruise me if thou must;
Mock me and starve me with thy bitter crust,
But keep me thus a-quiver and awake,
Enamoured of my life for living's sake!
This were the tragedy—that I should pass,
Dull and indifferent through the glowing grass,
And this the reason I was born, I say—
That I might know the passion of this day!
—Angela Morgan, in Indianapolis News.

My Grandmother's Turkey Tail Fan.

Its beautiful tint was a delicate

From her waist to her chin, spreading out without break.

The pride of the forest was slaughtered to make
My grandmother's turkey tail fan.

For common occasions it never was meant;
In a chest between two silken cloths
'Twas kept safely hidden with careful intent
From Beersheba e'en unto Dan;
My grandmother's turkey tail fan.

Camp meetings, indeed, were its chiefest delight,
Like a crook unto sheep gone astray
It beckoned backsliders to reseek the right,
And exhorted the sinners to pray.
It always beat time when the choir went wrong,
In psalmody leading the van.
"Old Hundred," I know, was its favorite song—
My grandmother's turkey tail fan.

Suited only to frivolous mirth!
Yet it scorned not the good things of earth.
At bees and at quiltings 'twas aye to be seen,
The best of the gossip began
When in at the doorway had entered serene
My grandmother's turkey tail fan.

Tradition relates of it wonderful tales,
Its handle of leather was buff.
Though shorn of its glory e'en now it exhales
An odor of hymn books and snuff.
Its primeval grace if you like, you can trace;
'Twas lined for the future to scan,
Just under a smiling, gold-spectacled face,

Morning.

No earth can I see around me, only an opal mist,
Which in the horizon's verge afar changes to amethyst.
One by one the stars grow pale, and a blush like the heart of a rose
God said again "Let there be light," and lo, the sun burst through.

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES.

OLIVE: Request has been complied with.

In Rice's letter last week it was Rosalind and not Rosalyd of whom questions were asked.

HOT AND DRY IN MAINE

We are having very dry and warm weather. The crops look fine, but need water badly.

I am trying to finish house cleaning but have got it most done. It is hard work to work when it is so hot—97 and 98— most of time in shade. At Biddeford it was 121, and at Sanford it was 104. Some heat last week.

There won't be many blueberries except where it is moist and shady. They are all dried up.

Sorry to learn of Mandy's death. I suppose you have read in newspapers about the terrible fires at Aroostook. I am glad to be able to tell you they were no where near so bad as pictured. There were no relief trains at Masardis. All newspaper talk.

I had visitors from there Sunday.

Well as my time is limited I must close by wishing good luck and good health to all my sisters and brothers. Crystal lake never looked prettier. Six new cottages are going up and many acres of land are for sale.

BALSAM FIR

THE SOCIABILITY OF THE CORNER.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I think I had better pinch myself to see if I am awake, and if I can keep awake long enough to write a letter to The Corner this warm afternoon. What a lovely thought it is to know that sociability is the key that has opened the door for all members of the Social Corner so gracefully. One does not have any more signs than a pleasant smile and voice, a pat on the shoulder and a social corner is started. Sometimes there may be only two members present. A kind word may be spoken and a sad heart made glad. For me to be present at the Social Corner picnic at Versailles meant a double good time for me. That little church is the very one I have formerly written about. That little hurch so dear to my heart is the first church and Sunday school I ever attended. It was such a pleasure to greet old friends with whom I had not met for years. The change that had taken place in them was ditto in myself. I looked at them and they looked at me. Can you imagine the emotion that existed between us when we found out we were girls together? In spite of all we could do, the tears would fall when we spoke of the dear ones departed. That old home church has timber and stones that came off the old homestead. The tolling of the bell for a poor lame boy who had passed on was done by my uncle, known as the boy sexton. I think that was the first time the bell was heard after it had been set and tested.

As I sit writing I can recall many happy hours spent under that roof. I had for my guest a young lady of the village who is a teacher in the Sunday school. I went home with her and had tea.

Aunty No. 1: How is the side?

Bachelor Girl: I was so glad to meet with you. Do come again.

Student: I trust we behaved so well we can come again.

With best wishes, I remain,

SISTER READY.

TAKING TIME TO WRITE THE CORNER.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: As it is quite a while since I have written to The Corner, I will step in a few lines. I have been very busy, as we have a little store and helping in that with my home work is about all I can do. But after all, isn't it nice to keep busy most of the time? The old saying often finds mischief for idle hands to do is very true, but if we just keep busy we can find no time to dampen in. We are so apt to become discontented if we have nothing to do, aren't we? Or at least I am.

I ran away last Tuesday and spent the day with one of my dear friends in the Rose City. We talked over old times and I enjoyed it so much. We say one must part from another some time or other, and so my dear mother left Friday to visit my sister in Pennsylvania. We were very sorry to have her go but of course my sister likes to have her there and mamma enjoys being with her, too, just as much as with us, and so we share her companionship and love as best we can. I see he had a lady say to me (after her mother had passed on) "you will never find anyone who is interested in everything you do as your mother is," and I have found it to be true.

My mother is always thinking in what way she can help me and doing everything she can for me. We are sure to will miss her, but hope she will not be gone so very long. Pray God she will keep strong and well.

Old Fashioned Mother: Haven't seen you lately. Thought you were coming down some day. Presume you, too, are busy.

Silver Locks, You ask me where I am and why don't I write? Well, I am still in Connecticut and have written a letter now. Hope you will enjoy yourself down at your daughter's and do not forget to come back. Bet you found it warm last week Wednesday, didn't you? Hope you reached there safely. Wish we all were as lucky as you are enjoying yourself and surely hope you always will. Good for you. Did your son meet you as you thought?

Best wishes to all.

YELLOW DAISY.

THE STAFF OF LIFE.

Dear Editor and Sisters: I was thinking "What should I write for the Corner this week that would be helpful and my mind ran toward interior decorating. I'll leave it to you Social Corner Editor" if any woman who can cook a good wholesome, "smelly" dinner isn't a good interior decorator, or one that can bake a lovely browned loaf of "home made bread"—an artist in her line? "Art is long" said one Mr. Longfellow, once upon a time, and your artist, schoolmate may also be a successful decorator—but do you know, the trouble with our world is maybe, that so few women are proud of their womanhood honestly, as Janette says. I wouldn't swap the kingdoms of the earth for the happiness I have known as wife and mother (myself). "Dreams, ambitions, power of being and doing." Dead seafruit, fair to look upon at a distance, but tasteless, turning to ashes on the lips.

No, we didn't "have the most wonderful sister" having a career. My perfectly wonderful moments are often close to the hearthstone trying to do and doing the essentials.

White Bread: One cake of Fleischmann's yeast, two cups milk, two cups water, one tablespoon sugar, two tablespoons melted butter, three quarts flour, one tablespoon salt. I find that letting the bread raise too long is one great fault of bread rising. The way I put my bread together is as follows; I scald two cups of milk and put two cups of hot water in the milk, pour this over one tablespoon of sugar in the bowl and let cool. Then add the yeast and allow that to stand six minutes, add the shortening, then the flour. The dough must be kneaded. This is done quickly and lightly so it will not stick to the fingers or to the board. I take a piece up in my hand and if my finger prints show easily I then know it is ready to put into through the center and turn inside out and knead again. Then grease the top, cover close to prevent crust forming.

When the dough has risen double its bulk take out on board and cut in half, then cut each half in three pieces, mould as little as possible, using no flour. Put in pans to rise. It is light, is to rise two hours in the floor and make 30 minutes in the oven. If impression remains the bread is done. Should it rise too high in the oven, quick, when you have just should break in from fifteen to twenty minutes. Then reduce the heat and finish baking more slowly. Bread is done when it leaves the side of the pan. It takes about 55 to 60 minutes for a medium sized loaf. After bread is baked remove from bread pan, and let it stand on its side on top of the dishes from which you have just removed them. Never cover my bread and the crust is always soft.

Rhody Louise: Was glad to hear from you. Do you remember how I insisted you should write for the Corner and you said you couldn't, so I asked you to sit down and write and you did and signed your name Rhody Louise? I look for your letters and you certainly write interesting ones. The letter about the turtle was very interesting. I should say might mean from Neighbor.

THE SPOILED CHILD.

Dear Social Corner Friends: The spoiled child, should be unspoiled. What is a spoiled child and how did it happen that he should be spoiled?

A spoiled child or person is one who is not as good as he might be, one who is not doing his best, one who does not adapt himself to changing conditions, one who does not get along pleasantly with other folks, one who thinks only of himself and his own desires.

Billy and his little brother were playing with the new engines father had just bought them. "No, Dick," said Billy, "I shall not change again. I'll keep you what I have." "But, mother, they are just alike and there is no sense in changing." "You are a large boy, Billy, and you know that they are just alike, but Dick is a little fellow and he thinks that the one you have is the best. You don't care which one you play with."

Will mother's explanation Billy was satisfied to play as Dick liked and they had a happy time instead of disagreeing.

The child must be spoiled because some mothers and nurses have the habit of letting the child cry awhile before doing for him and so the infant gets the idea that the crying brings what he desires. Later the child frets because he is not taught new interesting things and shown new ways of occupying the time or forms the habit of being quarrelsome because his ideas are different from his companions.

Each age has its own ideas different from what we thought last year or will think next year. Each child must be taught to be kind and patient, with smaller children, and that they must not expect to have everything when they are older.

The only child or the one who has no one to play with in the home has not much chance to learn how to get along with others. The child who grows up alone in the home is apt to make a very nervous, disagreeable person and the one who thinks only of himself.

It is amusing many times to me how childish and selfish and spoiled a person can be, even after he has arrived exactly to his liking and he must have his whims and all the hours every time.

The spoiled child or person should be unspoiled.

NICE TO BE REMEMBERED.

Dear Corner Sisters: First I want to thank all those that sent me cards—Sonie, Selinda, Anna Mell, Olga, Jennie, Nellie, True Blue, Old, and all others. It is surely nice to be remembered. I shall miss you all very much and hope it will be so I can come once in a while to your good times, for after July 5 my address will be Bond St., Hartford.

Student: I did have such a good time and I hope you did not get sick for you worked, oh so hard, and it was such a warm day. The entertainment was fine. You also have a very fine little church. Would love to go there some Sunday to the service.

MAKING SOMETHING OUT OF NOTHING.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Tell what you have made out of the cans. It might help someone.

Jumper, a set of pajamas out of four flour bags and out of sugar bags, which cost five cents apiece. I have made sash curtains, dish wipers, skirts, bloomers.

Take the tops of five black stockings. French seam them, lengthwise, have the bottom hem wide, sew the ruffle on hem and put elastic in the top. After my good silk skirt begins to break, I cut off the top and sew the silk ruffle on. It makes a nice skirt.

I made a dress from the lining of a black skirt. I made a sleeveless waist and wear over a white one, making a little ruffle over each shoulder from small pieces not used in making a waist. I put the binding on back of the skirt. It looked real well and cost nothing only the time it took to make it.

I had an old tamo-shanter and my friend who had two little girls, 7 and 9, a collar for each little girl, and they were delighted with them.

I have taken linen window shades that were soiled and discolored, and fit to be discarded, washed and boiled them several times to remove the dressing. When soft and perfectly clean hang out to dry. Iron them while a little damp and the linen will then look like new. You can make tea sets in cloth and napkins. I have machine hemstitched them and then crocheted in old blue just a simple picot edge. I made a dress for a little girl from them and put cross stitch embroidery on collars and cuffs.

Get two large cardboard files with index in the one for sewing bits, embroidery designs, patterns, directions for making crocheted flowers, etc., and the other for stencil designs or miscellaneous clippings—and there they can stay until you have time to test them.

If you have a hat with a turn-down brim and wish to put it away for another season, stuff the crown tightly with tissue paper. Then put the hat upside down in the hat box where you have previously put several layers of paper. Stuff more paper around the brim, until it fits it solidly, cover with paper, put cover on the box, tie it with cord and mark on the cover the name of the owner and the description of the hat. When you want it again it will be easily found.

If the men in your family smoke pipes save the large jars in which tobacco comes. They are useful in the kitchen, being just the right size for soap jelly which is used in the washing machine. They are good for rice, starch, cornmeal, graham, rice, etc.

Albertus: Your pie recipe is quick, but if you add one teaspoon of sugar and one-fourth teaspoon of baking powder, you will find it a great improvement. And use milk (ice cold) in place of water. That takes up the extra flour, and you are not obliged to use pastry flour. I never use pastry flour for anything for pie crust in recipe. I sift all the dry ingredients three times and it is quite an improvement. I took lessons in domestic science and this crust was made just like yours with the exception of what I have written you. They always used bread flour. Please try it sometime. Possibly it might not work with pastry flour, as I have never used it.

HOW TO REMOVE IODINE STAINS

Dear Corner Sisters: How many times you will hear people ask how can iodine stains be removed? When it is dropped on unstarched material it generally makes a brown or yellow stain. The presence of starch causes the stain to become deep blue or black, while ironing the cloth sometimes turns the stain a dark brown. On unstarched material, use one of the following agents: 1—Wash the stain in an abundance of water or soak it for a number of hours in cold water. 2—Sponge the stain with diluted ammonia. 3—Sponge the stains with water (half and half) and alcohol.

For starched materials use one of the following agents: 1—Sodium thiosulphate. Immerse the stains in a dilute solution then rinse thoroughly. 2—Sodium sulphite applied in the same way as above. 3—Ammonia diluted in another method that may be used. Soak the stains until they disappear. Soak the stains in cool boiling starch for ten or fifteen minutes. Any of the above methods are sure to remove the most obstinate stains made from iodine.

As there was ample room on last Saturday's page for more letters I thought I would add a few lines to help fill it out so we won't have to look at so many advs.

Was extremely sorry to hear of the sudden passing away of Sister Mandy and I can well recall the nice time we enjoyed at her beautiful new home. "The Oak" when the tables were spread under the trees and how before we finished dinner, a messenger was sent to deliver Sis's treat of peanuts and chewing gum. Brother Si being unable to attend that meeting. Now both Si and Mandy have gone to the Beautiful Isle of Somewhere.

Great Grandma: Did you receive the letter I sent you? Fear I did not put on the right address.

Little Irish Rose: Thanks for that package. Yes! That was the one we looked for, now I shall try to take care of it so it won't go astray again.

Balsam Fir: Do you spend all your time on Crystal lake? Why do we not see something from your pen? Kind regards to Ned.

KEEPING IN TOUCH WITH CORNER

Dear Sisters of the Corner: Good morning one and all. I send a line to let you know I do not forget you, and the jolly times we have had together at our gatherings and now for the picnics. Hope I can attend some of them this summer.

Golden Glow: Are you going to entertain us at your home this summer? Hope you and Snowdrop will call again soon.

Crimson Rambler: Glad to hear from you, and that you survived the day. Try it over again, and perhaps some more green things will be coming your way.

I am attaching some verses which I think are helpful for us all.

I am thinking to fashion a cult or an ism,
And call it the Good People's Don't Worry club.

The lightning, the whirlwind, the death-dealing earthquake,
The terror that stalks o'er land or o'er sea,
Are but Dame Nature's efforts to widow conditions to unmake.
To make this work better for you and for me.

This life has its sorrows
But death not its ending,
Our loved ones are with us
Though lost to our sight.
Their love, and their comfort they'll Ever remain with us
To cheer us, to help us to guide
Us right.

Then why should we worry
Since love is abiding
Why seek in confusion
Life's joys to outrun—
Better turn in cheer up and in Heaven confiding,
Help a sister to join the "Don't Worry club."

Best wishes for the Corner.

CALL FOR THE LEMON PIE RECIPE.

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: I will try and write a few lines this warm morning. Some shower we had Sunday—but we needed it badly.

Well, Thursday was some day. Will the sister who brought the lemon pie with the crumbs on top please tell how it was made? (I think it was crumbs.)

IDEAS WHICH HAVE HELPED.

Dear Sisters of the Corner: I wonder if I am one more mother's helper like myself that I need to stretch a cent as far as to make it go over the needs of a family and at the same time do their own sewing and washing. Perhaps some suggestions of my methods would lighten the burden for them as it has for me.

Select materials most easily laundered. Pink crepe is good for underwear and can be made up very prettily. Little girls' dresses can be made of different colored cotton crepes and black sateen panty dresses are just the thing for the sand pile.

For "best" silk nonsee makes up very prettily and for my 4-year-old I make a dress of black messaline embroidered with blue forget-me-nots in silk floss.

Flowered cretonne makes lovely dresser scarfs with lace or crocheted edges. A friend of mine makes her pillow cases of cretonne to match her bedspreads. Because they, too, are easily laundered.

I would like very much to know how to wash ribbons so that they will look like new. I know that my mother's keep the hair ribbons looking nice much longer than I do and I think it is in knowing how you wash them properly. I will be very glad to get this information.

Here is a recipe for a layer cake which can be recommended.

Layer Cake: One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, three eggs, one-half cup of milk, two cups of sifted flour, two teaspoons of baking powder and a little vanilla. Beat butter and sugar until creamy then add the yolks of eggs, and beat well, then the whites which have been beaten until stiff, and lastly the flour and baking powder. Sift flour and baking powder together before you add to cake, and beat it good. Be sure to sift flour before you measure, also use a measuring cup for too much baking powder makes a cake coarse-grain.

ARMBANDS OR GARTERS.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It is almost too hot to crochet, but there is some time during the day or evening when I like to pick up some such work just for a change and a rest.

I am sending the directions for making arm bands or garters which are pretty and some may like to try them.

Crocheted Arm-Bands or Garters: One spool of blue crochet silk, a number six steel crochet hook and three-fourths of a yard of silk elastic three-fourths of an inch wide (if you wish to use these directions for garters, you will need a little more elastic). With double blue silk chain 22 sts very loosely. Skip 3 sts next the hook, 1 d c into each of next 3 sts, 3 ch, skip 2 sts 1 d c into next st, 7 ch, skip 7 sts, 1 d c into next st, 3 ch, skip 2 sts, 1 d c into each of next 4 sts, 3 ch. Turn.

Second Row: Skip 3, 3 d c of previous row, 1 d c into each of next 3 sts, 7 ch, skip 7 ch of previous row, 1 d c into each of next 4 sts, 2 ch, skip 2 sts, 1 d c into last st, 3 ch. Turn.

Third Row: 1 d c into each of first 3 sts, 7 ch, skip 2 sts, 1 d c into next st, 5 ch, 1 d c over center st of four chains of last 2 rows, 2 ch, skip 2 sts of shell, 1 d c into each of next 4 sts, 3 ch. Turn.

Repeat from second row till work measures 13 inches. Join ends. Run elastic in and out through the bending. For garters: decorate the joinings with small satin flowers made of ribbon.

Best wishes to the Corner.

CANNING TOMATOES.

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: It will soon be time for canning tomatoes. Here is a recipe for conserving paste: One peck ripe tomatoes peeled and sliced; add to them a bay leaf and a few cloves. Fry four large onions, chopped, in one-half pound of butter till well cooked but not brown, taking care not to burn; add these onions to the sliced tomatoes with

COULD HARDLY DO HER WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Eat, Sleep and Feel Better Every Way

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and rundown and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and dizzy, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."—Mrs. M. OHLEND, 3640 S. Marshfield Ave., Chicago, Ill.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude.

NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week Dr. Charles Osgood of this city was elected president of the New London Northern Railroad as successor to A. N. Randall. The same week the Central school district laid a tax of three mills on the dollar for the year 1873 and appointed Daniel Holt collector, allowing six commission of one per cent. of the tax collected. The Newton Perkins Medal contest was held in the Academy that week. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of June 1873, are as follows.

Monday, June 23, 1873.—Stalker's New England Circus. This company will enter town today and pitch their tents amongst us, giving two performances, one at 2 in the afternoon and the other in the evening at 8 o'clock. They exhibit at Osgood's lot, Preston, just across the iron bridge.

The locomotive Wapeag, that was thrown from the track at Danville on the 18th inst., has been raised and was brought to the repair shop in this city yesterday. It is in a very dilapidated condition.

Tuesday, June 24, 1873.—At a meeting of the Sailing club last evening it was decided to charter the same vessel they had last year and to adopt a uniform—a blue shirt, cream duck and black pants. They did not decide definitely where they will go but probably to Provincetown and Cape May, to be absent about the same time as last year. During the progress of the meeting a member of the club came in who had not attended the meetings for several years. A vote was passed that he be "bestled" and he was "bestled" in good style.

The steamer Ella, tomorrow, this boat will begin her trips to Watch Hill and intermediate landings. She is in a better condition this season than ever before, having been painted from stem to stern, both inside and out and is as clean as a new house.

Mr. Cole will have a force of men at work laying the pavement on Main and Market streets this morning. He expects to have it finished this week.

At a meeting of the directors of the New London Northern railroad held in New London Saturday, Dr. C. H. Osgood, of this city, was elected president, in place of A. N. Randall, deceased.

Wednesday, June 25, 1873.—The grand concert of the Norwich Singing Club takes place this evening in Breed hall and judging from the number of seats taken there will be a fine audience in attendance. A musical treat may be expected, as some of the finest singers in the city will participate.

The Norwich Iron Works are building a large 300 horse engine for the new rolling mill at Topeka, Ks. The wheel alone will weigh 35 tons. The bed was successfully cast last week.—Ex. Where are the Norwich Iron Works?

"The Friends" is to seven in this vicinity this week, many places the streams are dry. What have heretofore been never failing springs are now as dry as an old topic's uncle in the matrimonial.

At the school meeting last evening James Greenwood was chosen chairman and Orlando Leggett, clerk. Daniel Holt was elected collector and was allowed one per cent. for collecting. A tax of three mills on the dollar was voted for the present year to be collected in August.

Thursday, June 26, 1873.—The steam "mud digger" finished its work on the channel of the river yesterday, having exhausted the appropriations of congress, $35,000 made for this purpose. It is to be employed next in deepening the waters around Central wharf.

The Ella made her first trip of the season yesterday. She had a fair showing of passengers.

Another attempt was made Tuesday to wreck the steamboat train on the Norwich and Worcester railroad at Dayville, near the place where the recent disaster occurred. A farmer going to his work saw a tie on the track and removed it just in time to save the train.

Friday, June 27, 1873.—Tubb's band will play at Page's city gardens again tomorrow night. Strawberries and cream, ice cream and lemonade will be literally served in the house, where you can sit and enjoy them at your leisure and at the same time listen to the sweet music of the band.

The citizens' ocean excursion to Newport promises to be the big thing of the season. The steamer Granite State has been chartered for the season. A number of large orders have been received by the committee for tickets, one party ordering fifty.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Norwich Catholic Benevolent association last evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months:

President, Patrick T. Creed; vice president, Patrick W. Pratt; treasurer, Joseph Connor; recording secretary, John F. Murphy; financial secretary, Joseph Plunkett; secretary of fines and regalia, David Ruin; directors, Charles A. Klingberger, chairman, James Garrity, John McGinnis.

Saturday, June 28, 1873.—The steamer City of Lawrence will leave her wharf on the morning of the Fourth at half past eight for a sail of eight hours on Long Island sound. Should the weather be clear and no sea running the steamer will make a trip around Block Island. Refreshments will be served and good music provided.

The Soldier's Monument at Ledyard Center will be dedicated on the Fourth. Among the speakers announced to be present are Senator Buckingham, and Hons. John T. Wait, Thomas Waller and E. W. S. Hoyt.

Yesterday Street Commissioner Cole found on Main street, while grading there, an Irish coin, 150 years old, bearing upon the obverse side a profile of George Louis I of Great Britain with the Latin inscription, Georgius Dei Gratia Rex.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Visiting Around in the Auto

Well, the hammock didn't drop the Little Pig on Uncle Lucky's front porch, as I feared it might in the last story. It was a nice new hammock, you see and had just come from the Three-in-One Cent store where the old gentleman rabbit bought lots of things for his little white house on the corner of Lettuce avenue and Carrot street.

By and by, as the lazy little pig fell by deep in the hammock, Uncle

"Mrs. Muskrat, are you home, Or swimming in the river? Just let us know if you're home, Or out riding in our shyster."

shouted funny Uncle Lucky.

Pretty soon, away, way out on the river, Little Jack Rabbit spied Mrs. Muskrat on a log, so will you be waiting longer they cranked up the Luckymobile and started off again and by and by saw Henny Jenny with her family of little chickens in the barnyard.

Henny Jenny got a penny
For her little brood,
Give him thanks, you little chicks

wife, maybe she did only because his Mr. Sharptooth, when, all of a sudden,

While each little chicken thanked the kind old gentleman rabbit, Little Jack Rabbit hopped into the barn, and who do you suppose he saw there? Well, you'd never guess, for it's umpty-leven stories ago since we've heard anything about Mr. Sharptooth Rat. There, I've gone and told you. Yes sir, that old robber was standing close by the eat bin.

"Good morning, little rabbit. Where have you been all this long time?"

"Oh, it's you," answered the bunny boy. He didn't like that old rat and neither did anybody else except his life was insured for one hundred thousand kernels of corn.

"You needn't be so proud just because you have a rich uncle," snapped Mr. Sharptooth, when all of a sudden, Old Sic'em the farmer's dog came into the barn and away went the old rat. But the little rabbit wasn't afraid for Old Sic'em had only two teeth and never was cross unless a tramp came around—I mean a man tramp for the Old Yellow Dog Tramp was very friendly with Old Sic'em.

"How do you do?" said the little rabbit as he and Uncle Lucky hopped into the Luckymobile and drove into the next story, and if a little gray mouse that lives in my house doesn't take the ribbon off my typewriter, I'll tell you what happens after that.

THEY ARE CONFIDENT THAT THEY CAN INTEREST YOU

No—this isn't any I. W. W. stuff—it is simply the "Red" Sales Team starting out to demonstrate to the "Blue" that they can outsell them, and outdo them in value-giving.

The Boston Store sales outfit is divided into two teams—each one of which is seeking to demonstrate that in the departments it represents, and in the salesmanship that it possesses, it is far ahead of the other team. All this month the race for supremacy has been going on and as yet the blue rider and the red are on almost even terms.

NUMBER FOUR

Barney Kluttig of Waterbury has one coming to him. He was ordered into court for parking his auto, but he paid no attention to the warning and failed to appear. He will be sent for at Waterbury and he will come here then, perhaps paying his railroad fare. That will be somewhat more expensive for Mr. Kluttig than if he obeyed the summons to appear today.

Louis Schwartz, an auto threat, was allowed to escape penalty for parking after he explained that he had no intention of violating the ordinance.

J. Harry Glossenger, formerly of New London and Waterford, son of Oscar Glossenger, a former conductor in the passenger service of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, died this week at the home of his sister, Mrs. Cook, of Detroit. Mr. Glossenger had been in ill health a long time. Mr. Glossenger's wife and mother died within a comparatively short time.

Charles Payne of Harris street, Mrs. Edward Baier and daughter of Church street, Shirley and Leo Pulp of Cole street, Morris Seigel of Potter street, Mrs. Harry Paige and daughter of Groton and Miss Dora Edcomb of Colchester, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Levi Q. Raymond has sold a house and lot on Willetta avenue to Annie Beckham.

Peter G. Morris has sold a house and lot on Truman street to Michael and Lena Shamesky.

James Clark, aged 14 years, of Ledyard, ran away from home yesterday afternoon and today the New London police were requested to be on the lookout for the lad. When Clark left home he didn't wear coat nor stockings.

Two youngsters, the oldest of which is but 15 years of age and both of whom reside on Riverview avenue, were arrested this morning by Detective Sergeant Charles Hammond, charged with discharging fire arms within the city limits. The boys will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning and that a more serious charge will not be placed against them is due to their good luck more than anything else.

The boys went to Crescent street where they discharged a 22-calibre rifle, the bullet passing through a window of the home of William H. Goldie. Mrs. Goldie was sitting near the window and the bullet crashed through the glass and escaped her. Mrs. Goldie only by inches. Mrs. Goldie informed the police of what had occurred and in less than an hour afterwards both boys were arrested and lodged at the police station.

Shower for Miss Freda Peloquin.

On Thursday evening a miscellaneous shower was given in Miss Freda Peloquin by (words) five girl friends at her home, 26 Fowler avenue in honor of her approaching marriage. Music and games were enjoyed after which a buffet lunch was served.

NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week Dr. Charles Osgood of this city was elected president of the New London Northern Railroad as successor to A. N. Randall. The same week the Central school district laid a tax of three mills on the dollar for the year 1873 and appointed Daniel Holt collector, allowing his compensation of one per cent. of the tax collected. The Newton Perkins Medal contest was held in the Academy that week. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of June 1873, are as follows.

Monday, June 23, 1873—Stafker's New England Circus. This company will enter town today and pitch their tents amongst us, giving two performances, one at 2 in the afternoon and the other in the evening at 7 o'clock. They exhibit at Osgood's lot, Preston, just across the iron bridge.

The Locomotive Washout that was thrown from the track at Dayville on the 18th inst., has been raised and was brought to the repair shop in this city yesterday. It is in a very dilapidated condition.

Tuesday, June 24, 1873—At a meeting of the Sailing club last evening it was decided to charter the same vessel they had last year and to adopt a uniform: a blue shirt, stream hat and black pants. They did not decide definitely where they will go, but probably to Provincetown and Cape May, to be absent about the same time as last year. During the progress of the meeting a member of the club came in who had not attended the meetings for several years. A vote was passed that he be "bestled" and he was "bestled" in good style.

The steamer Ella, tomorrow, this boat will begin her trips to Watch Hill and intermediate landings. She is in a better condition this season than ever before, having been painted from stem to stern, both inside and out and is as clean as a new house.

Mr. Cole will have a force of men at work laying the pavement on Main and Market streets this morning. He expects to have it finished this week.

At a meeting of the directors of the New London Northern railroad held in New London Saturday, Dr. C. H. Osgood, of this city, was elected president, in place of A. N. Randall, deceased.

Wednesday, June 26, 1873—The grand concert of the Norwich Singing Club takes place this evening in Breed hall and judging from the number of seats taken there will be a fine audience in attendance. A musical treat may be expected, as some of the finest singers in the city will participate.

The Norwich Iron Works are building a large 300 horse engine for the new rolling mill at Topeka, Kas. The wheel alone will weigh 36 tons. The bed was successfully cast last week.—Ex. Where are the Norwich Iron Works?

"Salt Brook" is to sewer in this vicinity this month as many places the streams are dry. What have heretofore been never failing springs are now as dry as an old tramp's bottle in the morning.

At the school meeting last evening James Greenwood was chosen chairman, and Cesario Lapsitt, clerk. Daniel Holt was elected collector and was allowed one per cent. for collecting. A tax of three mills on the dollar was voted for the present year, to be collected in August.

Thursday, June 26, 1873—The steam "mud digger" finished its work on the channel of the river yesterday, having exhausted the appropriations of congress, $85,000 made for this purpose. It is to be employed now in deepening the waters around Central wharf.

The Ella made her first trip of the season yesterday. She had a fair showing of passengers.

Another attempt was made Tuesday to wreck the steamboat train on the Norwich and Worcester railroad at Dayville, near the place where the recent disaster occurred. A farmer going to his work saw the ties on the track and removed it just in time to save the train.

Friday, June 27, 1873—Tubb's band will play at Page's city gardens again tomorrow night. Strawberries and cream, ice cream and lemonade will be literally served in the house, where you can sit and enjoy them at your leisure and at the same time listen to the sweet music of the band.

The citizens' ocean excursion to Newport promises to be the big thing of the season. The Steamer Granite State has been chartered for the season. A number of large orders have been received by the committee for tickets, one party ordering fifty.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Norwich Catholic Benevolent association last evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months:

Saturday, June 28, 1873—The steamer City of Lawrence will leave her wharf at the morning of the Fourth at half past eight for a sail of eight hours on Long Island Sound. Should the weather be clear and no sea running the steamer will make a trip around Block Island. Refreshments will be served and good music provided.

The Soldier's Monument at Ledyard Center will be dedicated on the Fourth. Among the speakers announced to be present are Senator Buckingham, and Hons. John T. Wait, Thomas Waller and H. W. S. Hayt.

Yesterday Street Commissioner Cole found on Main street, while grading there, an Irish coin, 150 years old, bearing upon the obverse side a profile of George Louis I of Great Britain with the Latin inscription, Georgius Dei Gratia, Rex.

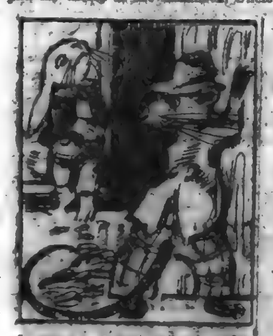
LITTLE JACK RABBIT
by DAVID CORY

Visiting Around in the Auto

Well, the hammock didn't drop the Little Pig on Uncle Lucky's front porch, as I feared it might in the last story. It was a nice new hammock, you see and had just come from the Three-in-One Cent store where the old gentleman rabbit bought lots of things for his little white house on the corner of Lettuce avenue and Carrot street.

By and by, as the lazy little pig still lay asleep in the hammock, Uncle



Lucky and Little Jack Rabbit hopped into the Luckymobile and after a while they came to a little house by the river, where Mrs. Muskrat lived.

"Mrs. Muskrat, are you home,
Just let us know, if you're like to go

shouted funny Uncle Lucky.

Pretty soon, away, way out on the river, Little Jack Rabbit spied Mrs. Muskrat on a log, so will not keep waiting longer they cranked up the Luckymobile and started off again and by and by they saw Henny Jenny with her family of little chickens in the barnyard.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the Weathercock on the old red barn as Uncle Lucky gave them all a carrot cent and a Dilly-pop.

Henny Jenny got a penny
Give him thanks, you little chicks

wife, maybe she did only because his Mr. Sharptooth, when, all of a sudden,

While each little chicken thanked the kind old gentleman rabbit, Little Jack Rabbit hopped into the barn, and who do you suppose he saw there? Well, you'd never guess, for it's umpty-leven stories ago since we've heard anything about Mr. Sharp Tooth Rat. There, I've gone and told you. Yes sir, that old robber was standing close by the oat bin.

"Good morning, little rabbit. Where have you been all this long time?"

"Oh, it's you," answered the bunny boy. He didn't like that old rat and neither did anybody else except his wife, maybe she did only because his life was insured for one hundred thousand kernels of corn.

"You needn't be so proud just because you have a rich uncle," snapped Mr. Sharptooth, when all of a sudden, Old Sic'em the farmer's dog came into the barn and right went for the old rat. But the little rabbit wasn't afraid for Old Sic'em had only two teeth and never was cross unless a tramp came around—I mean a man tramp for the Old Yellow Dog Tramp was very friendly with Old Sic'em.

"How do you do?" said the little rabbit as he and Uncle Lucky hopped into the Luckymobile and drove into the next story, and if a little gray mouse that lives in my house doesn't take the ribbon off my typewriter, I'll tell you what happens after that.

SUFFERED FROM ITCHY PIMPLES

On Face and Neck. Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Heals.

"My trouble began by pimples breaking out on my face, red itchy ones that I suffered from terribly. My face and neck were covered, making me ashamed to be seen anywhere. The pimples were large and festered and my whole face was disfigured. I could not sleep, and for almost a year I doctored the suffering.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bought more, and after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Fannie Hawkins, 55 Leslie St., Methuen, Mass.

Barney Kluttig of Waterbury has one coming to him. He was ordered into court for parking his auto, but he paid no attention to the warning and failed to appear. He will be sent for at Waterbury and he will come here then, perhaps paying his railroad fare. That will be somewhat more expensive for Mr. Kluttig than if he obeyed the summons to appear today.

Louis Schwartz, an auto thief, was allowed to escape penalty for parking after he explained that he had no intention of violating the ordinance.

J. Harry Glossenger, formerly of New London and Waterford, son of Oscar Glossenger, a former conductor in the passenger service of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, died this week at the home of his sister, Mrs. Cook, of Detroit. Mr. Glossenger had been in ill health a long time. Mr. Glossenger's wife and mother died within a comparatively short time.

Charles Payne of Harris Street, Mrs. Edward Baier and daughter of Church street, Shirley and Leo Pole of Colonial street, Misses Seigel of Potter street, Mrs. Harry Paige and daughter of Groton, and Miss Dora Edgcomb of Colchester, patients at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Levi Q. Raymond has sold a house and lot on Willetts avenue to Annie Beckham.

Peter G. Morris has sold a house and lot on Trumbull street to Michael and Lena Shannon.

James Clark, aged 16 years, of Ledyard, ran away from home yesterday afternoon and today the New London police were requested to be on the lookout for the lad. When Clark left home he didn't wear coat nor stockings.

Two youngsters, the oldest of which is but 16 years of age and both of whom reside on Riverview avenue, were arrested this morning by Detective Sergeant, Charles Hammond, charged with discharging fire arms within the city limits. The boys will be arraigned in the police court tomorrow morning and that a more serious charge will not be placed against them is due to their good luck more than anything else.

The boys went to Crescent street where they discharged a 22-calibre rifle, the bullet parsing through a window of the home of William H. Goldie. Mrs. Goldie was sitting near the window and the bullet crashed through the glass and narrowly missed Mrs. Goldie only by inches. Mrs. Goldie informed the police of what had occurred and in less than an hour afterwards both boys were arrested and lodged at the police station.

Shower for Miss Freda Peloquin.

On Thursday evening a miscellaneous shower was given to Miss Freda Peloquin by twenty-five girl friends at her home, 28 Fowler avenue in honor of her approaching marriage. Music and games were enjoyed after which a buffet lunch was served.

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY

New York, June 29—Another sharp reaction in prices took place in today's stock market. Overnight accumulation of buying orders imparted a firm ... but this ... itself ... speculations for the ... had little difficulty in bringing about recessions throughout the list. Lower commodity prices established ... new low record for the year by several of the foreign exchanges including sterling and stiff money rates all aided the bear campaign. Industrial and railroad averages again establishe new low records for the year.

Short-selling centered at first in the independent steel shares, Bethlehem dropping 4 points to a new low record for the year and being followed, in new low ground by Republic, Vanadium, Midvale, Sloss, Sheffield and Superior steels. United States steel common offered better resistance but finally merged to 90 1-8, a new low, and then rallied to 90 3-4, where it was off 1 1-8 on the day. Selling of Bethlehem was accompanied by reports of new financing and a possible cut in or omission of the next dividend. But these lacked confirmation.

Railroad shares, which have recently failed to respond to good news, also were under sharp pressure, new low for the year being recorded by Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Pennsylvania, Reading, Lehigh Valley, New Haven, Chesapeake & Ohio preferred and Kansas City Southern.

The northwestern carriers apparently were affected by the reduced income shown in the May earnings reports while the eastern ... appeared to be discounting the possibility of another shut down in the hard coal fields.

Another cut in Mexia crude prices had a depressing effect on some of the oil shares. Losses of a point or more were recorded in Pan-American, California petroleum, Pacific and producers and refiners, but Houston General asphalt and a few others improved fractionally.

Other outstanding weak spots were American Can, Baldwin, Famous Players, General Electric, Woolworth, Sterling Products, U. S. Industrial alcohol, Sears Roebuck and Stromberg Carburetor.

Demand sterling broke 2 1-2 cents to $4.56 3-4, a new low for the year, and French francs dropped 5 points to 6.04 cents. New lows also were established by Swiss francs, Italian lire and Spanish pesetas. German marks sold around .0006 cents.

Money rates continue firm. Call money held at 6 per cent. all day. Time money was offered at 5 1-4 per cent. for all maturities, a few loans and a number of renewals being arranged at that figure. The rate of prime commercial paper continues at 5 per cent.

BOND MARKET

New York, June 29—High grade investment bonds held relatively steady in today's dull trading on the New York stock exchange. Some of the more speculative issues fluctuated with the movement of stocks.

United States government issues, generally, improved their position, although the tax exempt 3 1-2s, which yesterday fell to a new low, eased again slightly. Mexican bonds moved to higher ground while French issues were easier.

Substantial advances were recorded by some of the railroad mortgages, New York, Westchester & Boston 4 1-2s gaining 2 1-2 points, and half a dozen others 1 point each. Gains of a point or more were recorded by a number of domestic industrial liens while Cerro de Pasco 8s yielded two points and Punta Alegre Sugar 7s and Eastern Cuba Sugar 7 1-2s each declined 1 point.

Total sales (par value) were $11,001,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, June 29—With crop experts showing a disposition to increase the estimated yield both of winter and spring wheats, and with a renewal of New York stock market weakness, wheat had a downward tendency most of the time today, especially as new low price records for the season were touched by December corn and by September and December oats. Wheat closed unsettled, 1-2c to 1 1-8c net lower, September 1.02 1-8 to 1.02 1-4, and December 1.05 1-8 to 1.05 1-4. Corn finished 2 to 2 1-4c down, oats 1-8 to 5-8c off, and provisions at 2c to 10c decline.

Ideal weather conditions for harvesting did a good deal to promote belief in a betterment of the total outturn of winter wheat. On the other hand an increase of the par yield used in figuring the spring crop was generally held to be more than an offset for reports of black rust around Aberdeen, S. D., and of drought damage in parts of North Dakota. Besides, with European exchange rates at new low levels for the year, foreign buyers were apparently disinclined to follow price advances here, and it was pointed out that unlike last year at harvest, there was no present evidence of any demand to build up domestic stocks of wheat.

Late dealings in wheat were influenced largely by pronounced weakness in wheat, even on declines in price, appeared to be of only limited volume.

Corn slid down rapidly in price, with scattered liquidating sales by holders a feature, and with Kansas City reporting enlargement of country offerings to arrive. Oats sympathized with corn.

Provisions were depressed chiefly by downturns in the value of hogs.

CURB MARKET

New York, June 29—Prices displayed a reactionary trend in today's curb market after an early show of strength. Public interest was again lacking and operators on the short side encountered little opposition in their campaign for lower prices, although though the recessions, as a rule, were small.

Standard Oil of Indiana was again the most active of the standard issues, opening 55 1-8, advancing 1-4 and then dropping back to 54 7-8, where it was off 5-8 on the day. Standard Oils of Kentucky and New York also yielded fractionally. Imperial of Canada broke nearly 3 points to 96 and continental dropped 3 3-8 on a small turn-over. Gulf and Ohio Oils each lost one point.

Gillette Safety Razor dropped 2 points and Midvale Steel and Durant dropped 1 1-8 each. Glen Alden Coal advanced nearly a point.

TAFTVILLE

One of the light delivery trucks owned by the Peoples Store, Inc., was totally demolished Friday morning when it was struck by the work car of the Connecticut Company at the bottom of the hill at Riverside Grove near the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Pickering. The truck was being driven by Ludwig Krumholz, one of the employees of the store, and was coming from one of the side streets to the Occum Road, when he saw the trolley approaching. He had barely time to jump when the car struck the truck, and smashed it into pieces, which were strewn all over the road.

Miss Rita Tetreault, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Tetreault of North Third avenue entertained some of her young friends at a birthday party Thursday, it being her fifth birthday. Games were played and refreshments served. The guests were Blanche Krodel, Frances Krodel, Mildred Durocher, James McAuley, Jean McAuley, Roy Durocher, Louis Unsworth, Loretta Lucier, Florence Lucier, Oscar Tetreault and Lionel Morin.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM H. JACKSON

OBSERVED SILVER WEDDING DAY ON THE PEQUOT INDIAN RESERVATION

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Jackson celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage Sunday, June 24, by holding a family reunion at their home on the Pequot Indian reservation near Lantern Hill.

Mr. Jackson, who is the oldest male resident of the reservation, is a direct descendant of this once powerful tribe. His wife, whose maiden name was Frances Sebastian, is related on her maternal side to the Shinnecock Indians of Long Island.

The couple have seven living children all of whom were present at the reunion, also a grandchild, the six months' old daughter of Mrs. Olive Jackson Spellman, wife of Reginald Spellman. The baby girl is the youngest member of the Pequot tribe.

Another married daughter, Mrs. Grace Jackson Grandy of Providence, R. I., was present with her husband, John Grandy. A daughter of Mrs. Jackson by a former marriage was unable to be at the reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, who are enjoying perfect health, passed the day quietly with their children. During the afternoon all did ample justice to a bountiful repast, prepared by Mrs. Jackson with the able assistance of her daughters. There are five of them in all, the youngest being twelve years of age.

With that toothsome Indian dish, "Quahog" chowder for a starter, there was a great variety of good things, winding up with delicious cake, made by their daughter, Arlene, a miss of fourteen, and ice cream and strawberries from their own garden.

During the day many congratulations were received from admiring friends, expressing the wish that the couple would have the pleasure of celebrating many more anniversary days.

FITCHVILLE CHURCH MISSION SHOWS LARGEST ATTENDANCE

The fifth night of the mission being conducted in St. John's church, Fitchville, by Father Ledwith of the LaSalette Fathers of Hartford, brought forth the largest attendance of the week and an exceptionally large attendance came from out of town. Father Ledwith's instructions were on the Sixth and Tenth Commandments. For the sermon of the evening he spoke on I Am the Divine Bread. The rosary was recited by Father Mooney, followed by benedictions. The mission will close Sunday evening and an invitation is extended to the public to attend.

At the mass Sunday morning at 8 o'clock every member of the parish is expected to receive communion.

Announce Daughter's Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustaf Thiel of 27 Beech street announce the engagement of their daughter Freida to Clyde Kenfield of this city.

WEEK WITHOUT ANY FATAL AUTO ACCIDENTS

While the accident situation in the seven larger Connecticut cities is steadily improving in its general aspects, the department of motor vehicles reports that the actual number of accidents was greater last week than for the same week last year with an increase of seventy-four. This large number of accidents is laid to the increasing number of cars on the streets and greater traffic hazards caused thereby, while the decrease in the seriousness of the mishaps is credited to the increasing vigilance on the part of motorists as a whole.

Hartford, New Haven and Bridgeport had verily bad records for the week. There were no fatalities in any of the cities.

City.	1922	1922
Waterbury	13	7
Meriden	8	5
Bridgeport	20	19
New Britain	14	6
New Haven	83	40
Hartford	54	34
New London	16	20
	205	31

SEVEN DIVORCES GRANTED BY JUDGE HINMAN

Seven divorces on the uncontested list were granted by Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court here Friday, in three he took the papers and four cases went off the list.

Bessie Holmes Gilchrist of Montville secured divorce from Thomas W. Gilchrist, formerly of Montville, now of parts unknown. They were married at New London June 12, 1912, and she alleged desertion on March 1, 1919. She was given the custody of a son aged 8 years.

Desertion since Jan. 30, 1920, was the ground upon which Martha Alexander Shadd claimed divorce from C. Frederick Shadd of Bellefont, Pa., but this case went off the list. They were married Oct. 12, 1918. She asks the custody of a minor daughter.

Judge Hinman took the papers after hearing the testimony in the suit of Eugene F. Gronau of Norwich for divorce from Ida Badbois Gronau of the same place. They were married May 1, 1918 and he alleges desertion on the same date with adultery with Ollie Martin.

Another case that went off the list was the suit of Mabel Pearson Hackett of New London for divorce from Edward J. Hackett, now of parts unknown, on the ground of cruelty since June 1, 1918. They were married Feb. 1, 1908.

Fannie Mitchell Clark of New London secured divorce from Herbert N. Clark of Norwich on the ground of desertion since April 20, 1919. They were married June 24, 1910. The custody of an 11 year old son was given to Frank and Jeanette Mitchell.

The suit of Harrison M. Drisko of New London for divorce from Margaret Francis Drisko of Bridgeport went off. They were married March 5, 1921 and he alleged adultery with Herbert Searle at Bridgeport, between July 1, 1922 and Dec. 19, 1922.

Lucy Pace Coffin of New London was divorced from Douglas H. Coffin of Brooklyn, N. Y., on the ground of cruelty since July 1, 1920. They were married the day before. She was given the custody of a one year old son.
